Harry Meldrum Moore

On their return trip to the sanctuary that late afternoon, few words were to pass between them. Pauline, he was a couple of cigarets, dampened her handkerchief by holding it over the boat's side, wiped her mouth and flinging the rag out her companion, proceeded to do some work on her face. He watched her apply lipstick, watched her powder her nose, put her compact away, brush herself, then with deft fingers arrange her hair. She never once looked at him, and he felt now that he and Pauline were as far apart as the poles. And that suited him fine. But yet, Pauline was a guest at the sanctuary and he knew he must not snub her, must get along with her. And surely he could do that much for the two short days that she would be there.

They ate dinner, sat around talking, and while his mother turned to help Sandy with the dishes, Paul, who knew without having to be told, that he must give up his room to the guests, moved some of his effects into Colly's room where he would sleep on a cot. Meanwhile Pauline was being entertained by Colly McKee in the living room. And if you could have listened in on their conversation, you would have realized that everything that Colly was telling the tall brunette from Prankville, N.Y. was not exactly the way it was.

Paul looked in on them, slipped back to the kitchen and sneaked outside. He wished to be alone, to do some thinking on his own, to find a better place than up old trail into the sanctuary. When darkness came he was back, to answer some questions, to assist Sandy to sing the guests, because that was the proper thing for him to do. When he wasn't singing, he was sitting with his mother who was providing him with the latest news from the old home town, and he heard her appraise Sandy McKee as "one of the most charming young women I've ever met."

In the morning he asked Sandy if she would provide him with a lunch, that he had some things in the sanctuary to look after and he wouldn't be back until late afternoon. Sandy didn't ask him any questions and neither did Colly who was present at the time. And he was thankful for that.

During that day Paul Geies was to do things that he had never stopped to do since he came to the sanctuary. For instance after he had had a look from a safe distance at his traps, he eased quietly into the alders and lay on his stomach to watch the fish in the creek. Colly had previously told him that the sanctuary lakes and creeks teemed with fish, and he was not disappointed. He spent more than an hour there. He saw trout from minnow size to grown fish, a foot and a half long. What he didn't know was that angles from his own country had travelled hundreds of miles and spent thousands of dollars and could never find a fish to compare to these. He had been told, too, that trout were shy, but even these fish had never been tempted by bait, they were everything but shy. Some time, with Colly's permission of course, he would catch some of these fish if only to prove that they did taste better than any other kind.

He ate his lunch atop Big Moon. He was completely awed by the vast panorama below. To the north—he figured—lay the spot that before, during those days when he was lost and he had climbed a mountain in search of a human habitation. The land that God forgot" he remembered calling that vast area of mountain and valley and lake and river and dense woods. But to the south—it was a sight from the plateau back of Colly's place, but from up here, it was even better if that were possible because there was more sweep to it, a greater distance was covered. Some day he would build a lookout on this mountain. A cabin et is what Dr. McNair had planned, a ski run down the sloping north-west side across the beaver meadow to the lake. Who ever had told the New York doctor about this set-up must have been quite familiar with it.

The sun was hot, but here on Big Moon there was a slight breeze that dissipated the heat somewhat. He stretched out on his back, put his hat over his face. Pauline Johnson had not changed any since he saw her last. She was still the same selfish two-faced creature. He stopped thinking along that line and said "the hell with her, why should I care! Then he turned to other things. His dad, his mother, the old home, all passed in rapid succession through his thought and he felt saleen. He wakened to strange sounds coming up the north side of the mountain, so he got up, and looked down the side. A bear was feeding in the bushes on the lower mountainside, stopping now and then to cuff two sturdy cubs that were bothering her. He found a stone and playfully rolled it down on them. The mother bear heard it come, gave a loud "woof" and lumbered quickly out of there, across the beaver meadow and into the nearby swamp with the youngsters hard at her heels. Curious to know what the bear had been feeding on, he went down there. He found berries that were blue and round and sweet to the taste. He sat there and ate. He had eaten berries like these when he was lost and he recalled how sick he had been.

He followed the bears into the swamp, only to lose sight of them. Then he proceeded up the old trail to the sanctuary boundary, sat down, and a deer walked nonchalantly past him. Brush broke and he saw three white tails flying up a hill nearby The area was full of deer. He was back home for dinner. He take Sandy and his mother and Pauline for a boat ride up river.

But next morning, Pauline was up as early as he was and she insisted on going with him. He was hard put to slave her off until Sandy and Colly came to his aid. The flies were particularly bad in the bush in July; to follow the rough trail required great stamina and proper footwear. A grateful Paul Geies got away to spend another day alone and unhampered, and with plenty of time to get better acquainted with the whereabouts and habits of the wild creatures that must look to him for protection in the days to come.

Paul and Colly took Mrs. Gaies and Pauline across the unrippled lake that Saturday morning and saw them away in their car. Before leaving the sanctuary, Sandy had extended an invitation to them to come back again and soon. At the car Paul promised his mother that he would write often to her, and for her to do the same.

"Tell dad to come over and see me some time," Paul said, "And, be sure and come with him."

Pauline puckered up her lips for a farewell kiss, but he merely shook her hand, patted her on the back, and told her to take good care of herself. Pauline didn't like that. She got into the front seat, put her foot on the starter, jabbed the accelerator, and the car shot away under the spur of a very angry woman.

The remainder of that Saturday at the sanctuary was a time of quiet calm after the presence of visitors, with each one of three left going about with little to say. Sandy might have been excused for wondering why Paul and Pauline spend so much time crossing the lake that first afternoon, Colly could have been excused for wondering why Pauline had not been taken in hand at an early age and shown her place. But Paul had other thoughts. The presence of his mother had awakened nostalgic memories, her going left him with a sense of void.

But no matter how they felt during that day, they were on the even of a momentous happening, without knowing they were. For that night, along about midnight, something happened that was to create quite a stir, a something that was to show that even a ten thousand to one chance will pay off some time, and how!

Sandy had the effect of the let-down occasioned by the surprise visit and departure of his mother and his erstwhile girl friend, the while many of the low lights of his world in the city, ten past were still needling him. Paul Gates was sitting in deep contemplation in the McKee sitting room late that Saturday night, Colly, near the radio, was resolutely awaiting the late news, nearby Sandy was doing a little needlework, ever and anon lifting a hand to her mouth to stifle a desire to yawn.

Paul slipped outside and down to the shore to test the water. He returned to the kitchen, plucked a towel off the line near the stove, and went back to have a dip. The swim freshened him, even though it chilled him, but out of it came a bunch of something. He dried and dressed himself, raced into his room to pull on a sweater, to grab his flashlight. In the living room the late news was now being read.

Paul slipped out of the kitchen door, pulled it quietly shut after him, and flashlight turned on he started to run. Something was urging him on, something was telling him to hurry. He pulled up the hill, a deer got out of his way, and he stopped on the plateau long enough to get his breath, to see what the scene below was like under the stars. He raised his eyes from the lighted McKee home in the foreground to the small sparks of light in the American summer cottages across the lake, then he was off again. He passed through the clearing looking down on the creek and the pit that had been dug to catch the phantom killer. For a brief few seconds he stood there and streamed the light from one end of the clearing to the other. The sanctuary, a quiet place in the daylight, was not so quiet now. Foxes barked somewhere, owls hooted off to the north, wolves howled, a large deer with a fine spread of horns sneaked slowly across his vision, stopping momentarily to reflect back the light focussed on him. Paul was startled by what he saw, but there was no cause for fear.

After a while he moved slowly down the path towards the creek, was stepping from one stone to another to cross it when he slipped with a loud splash. But even as he did, he thought he heard a breaking of twigs—a crash. He took a few steps, flashed the light on the pit. The bait was gone, there appeared to be a hole where the bait was, where it had been suspended. For a moment he froze in his tracks. Heart pounding, he listened. He heard a muffled struggle, a struggle that stopped as he tip-toed towards it. And then, he was down on his knees. His light revealed that something was indeed in the something within and fumbled!

Paul Gaies never waited a second. He ran as fast as he could to the house, he broke into the house yelling excitedly.

"Mr. McKee!—Colly! — dad! — come quick! It's in the pit!"

"In the pit you say?" Colly asked soberly, getting his hat and sweater. "Calm yourself, lad — she can't get out of there."

"But—it might," Paul protested, thinking that Colly was already together too unconcerned about it.

TWO MEN BURNED TO DEATH IN TWEED FIRE

Prisoners Seize Guards In Second Riot In Month

Threaten to Throw Hostages Over 50-Foot-High Balcony

By TOM MADDOX

CHESTER, Ill. (AP)—Three hundred rebellious prisoners, threatening seven hostages with death, held out early today inside Illinois' trouble-plagued Menard prison and were reported calling for Governor Adlai Stevenson.

The prison was the scene of a 27-hour, uprising five weeks ago. That one was quelled with tear gas.

Warden Jerome Monie stationed armed guards and state police round the prison and ordered them to "shoot to kill if anyone makes a move."

But he abandoned plans to storm the cell block when convicts threatened to hurl the seven hostages from a 50-foot-high balcony fronting the top tier of cells. The guards were stationed on the balcony when the rioting began about 8 p.m. (CST Monday.

"Call for Adlai"

Some prisoners were quoted as calling out: "we want to see the governor." Other shouted they "want to see the big boss," were reported. Monie said he thought they wanted to see him, not the governor.

Governor Stevenson is campaigning for president on the Democratic ticket in New York. When told that, some prisoners were quoted as saying:

"He drew out there and he can fly back."

The latest violence at the southern Illinois prison set the city of Chester abloat with false rumors of a mass break. The prison has 1,850 inmates.

The prisoners blacked out their 1,000-cell house. The prison cut off all power, leaving the house under the next house most of the night.

The trouble started when the prisoners returned from supper Monday night. Some say they were fed seized and six others were held from escaping. An eighth, Leo H. Grisham, was reported to have after he fainted because of a heart condition.

Monie said no action would be taken until they could be found to save the guards.

Marines Report Destruction of Complete Regt.

SEOUL (AP)—United States Marines in mop-up fighting restored their lines on the Korean western front today and reported destruction of a complete Chinese Communist regiment in the battle.

On the central front, Allied soldiers following the enemy's heavy assaults at half a dozen key points and piled up the toll of Red dead.

Major Edwin Pridgen, 41-year-old Marine division commander, told correspondents:

"I think we have inflicted decisive losses on the enemy. In fact, I consider the Chinese 116th destroyed."

"We are in complete control of everything we pulled back from," said Brig. Gen. Edward Almond, Marine commander who formerly reported from the front that Marines were in complete control of the Hook, a hillside north east of Panmunjom, and two outposts to the north.

About 1,200 Reds hit the Marine positions Monday night. The Marines counter-attacked and kicked the Reds back. By Monday afternoon today they mopped up small hold-out units. After daybreak the Marines began to move forward unopposed.

Allied planes pounded the Reds with bombs, rockets and flaming napalm. Only Chinese replied with sporadic artillery fire.

The Reds threw their heaviest punch in the western mountains mass on shell-pocked Bolger Ridge, north of Kumhwa on the central front.

AP correspondent John Randolph said up to 720 Chinese knocked the South Koreans off the northernmost position on the ridge and stormed part way up the slope of Finger Hill. Bolger's dominant height.

The South Koreans counterattacked and regained all the lost ground.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: Strong northerly winds and unsettled weather widely blast across the province Wednesday. In the north, snow fell over night and will continue most of today. EXPORT TRADE UP $360,000,000 IN NINE MONTHS

Trend May Lead To Peak for Year

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's exports jumped by more than $360,000,000 in the first nine months of 1952 as a boost in volume of shipments overcame the impact of weakening prices.

Shipments rose to a peak of $2,186,000,000 for the nine months from $2,818,342,000 in the same period of 1951, the bureau of statistics reported.

Officials estimated the current trend may lead to a peak for the year, surpassing the $4,000,000,000 record a year ago.

Shipments were higher in volume in all but a few world, with the exception of the United States, Canada's top customer, which has placed an embargo against Canadian cattle and meat because of foot-and-mouth disease in Saskatchewan earlier this year.

Prices Falling

The trend toward lower prices, which showed up earlier this year, continued. Other shoots of wheat prices of Canada's exports dropped almost five per cent from September to October and were running about 10 per cent.

The bureau said the value of the month's shipments to $341,300,000 from $322,500,000 last year and helped provide the 13-per-cent boost over the nine-month period.

Shipments of grain, a previous estimated as during September at $340,100,000, up from $311,500,000 last September. With imports expecting exports, a $7,600,000 deficit resulted. The only other monthly deficit this year was a $13,100,000 adverse balance last May.

The bureau said "unfavorable prices" for the U.S. dropped to $1,100,000 from $1,711,000,000. Shipments to the United Kingdom rose significantly to $380,000,000 from $647,000,000.—

Korean Issue Overshadows Charges by Senator McCarthy In U.S. Election Campaign

By R.T. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—The Korean issue today will be overshadowing everything else in the United States election campaign.

Controversy over what caused the war and how it can be ended was at the heart of Republican nominee's personal attack upon the Democratic president's handling of foreign affairs in a full text. It would have created a sensation in other times.

President Truman last night launched his strongest attack against the Republicans on the issue. He charged Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Republican candidate for president, with responsibility for the withdrawal of U.S. occupation troops from Korea in 1948.

Vote-Losing Promises

Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democrats' nominee, in New England asserted it is Republicans who made vote-losing promises of "a quick and easy end" to the conflict, and said Republicans "may have delayed an armistice."

Eisenhower last attributed to the state department the 1948 decision to withdraw troops from Korea. He has termed this part of the "terrible record" which led to the Communist take-over of all South Korea in 1948. He promised again yesterday that if he is elected he will go to Korea to try to "diminish this fear of Communism in Asia."

The big-gun cannonading took the spotlight from Wisconsin's Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, who in Chicago last night laid before the Republican party's national convention "coldly-documented background of this war-in-the-making issue" for the U.S.

McCarthy's speech, made on a big nation-wide television and radio network was paid for by some 2,500 persons who attended a $50-a-plate dinner at the Republican party played no official part in the proceedings.

Before McCarthy spoke Eisenhower, who has endorsed the senator's anti-Red campaign in the election without saying whether or not he approves of "McCarthyism," announced his position: While subversion must be cleaned out of government, the reputation of innocent men must not suffer.

The Senator listed:

1. That Stevenson "endorses and would continue the suicidal, Kremlin-dictated policies of this nation."

2. Stevenson, assigned to the task of formulating U.S. post-war policy in Italy after Mussolini's fall, had a plan to "appease" Communism on the Italians.

3. The governor has been given "complete endorsement" by the Communist New York Daily Worker.

Denials of those mentioned in McCarthy's speech as Communist inclined started pouring in after the speech. Dorothy Weather said it supports the Progressive party ticket in the election.

Thoroughly Dishonest

President Truman's, statement on Korea at Eisenhower's request, said in Pittsburgh that the general has answered the Truman-Frankfurter Oct. 8 when he said the administration's charge that the Adlai "defence perimeter" did not touch Korea was made by civilian officials of Acheson's department decisions of foreign policy,"

Worse Than Normandy Reports Soldier in Canadian Company Swamped on Little Gibralter

By JOHN STACKHOUSE
WITH THE COMMONWEALTH DIVISION IN KOREA, (Reuters) —A handful of men, only 31 survivors, of a Canadian company which refused to bow to overwhelming odds, have drawn seven hours of fire from the Reds at the Chinese Communists.

Surrounded on a position on Little Gibraltar Hill, on the central front, against 1,000 crack Chinese. The Canadians were swamped, but held on until a counter-attack rescued them. The next day, the day, A captured Chinese flag symbolized the Red defeat.

Unit identification is subject to censorship but the Chinese Communist radio first named the defenders as Black Company of the 2nd Battalion of Canadian Rifles.

The Baker men claim to be the crack unit of the regiment. Every company has done a spell of several months on the line. One unit did guard duty earlier this year at Kole prisoner camp when it was still in the hands of the Reds.

Lieut. John Clark, of Seebe, Alberta, company commanders, said the Chinese opened their attack with a barrage of mortar shells a minute. Bunkers and trenches in the small company area exploded and buried nearly all Baker Company's weapons and ammunition.

Reds Overran Area

As the barrage lifted the Chinese swarmed over the area and overran the area while the defenders fought back. Many Canadians have hidden through the day in a maze of tunnels in the Canadian positions, hiding their time.

Some of the Baker men fought their way back to friendly positions. The others had to stick it out in shell holes and wrecked bunkers.

Lieut.-Colonel commander, Lieut. Russell Gardner of Arnprior, Ont., who recently won the Military Cross, was further awarded "said

Atomic Experts On British Visit

LONDON (Reuters) — Dr. C.J. Mackenzie, president of Canada's scientist, has arrived for routine talks with British officials.

Dr. Mackenzie will spend about three weeks visiting research establishments. He is president of Atomic Energy of Canada, Ltd., a crown company developing Canada's atomic program.

The Canadian government spokesman said today that the visit is "routine" and has no special significance.

In a press statement made after his arrival, Mackenzie said Canada was mainly concerned with the industrial uses of atomic energy.

"We do not know all that this United Kingdom may have on file in Canada hope to have this problem well ahead within 10 years," he said.

Mackenzie is accompanied by his assistant, Dr. I.N. MacKay.

SUDAN-EGYPT AGREEMENT READY FOR SIGNATURES

Issue Placed Before Britain This Week

CAIRO (AP) — Reliable sources said today that Sudanese political leaders and Premier Maj.-Gen. Mohamed Naguib would sign an agreement tonight on the future status of the disputed Sudan and Naguib would put it before Britain later this week.

The informants said the agreement would express the wishes of Egypt and the Egyptians on a settlement of the long standing Sudanese problem, main obstacle in recent years to a solution of the Anglo-Egyptian dispute.

Representatives of the pro-Independence Sudanese parties as well as delegates of parties favoring union with Egypt have been seeking agreement in discussions which lasted for more than 10 days.

Sources close to the accord to be signed will include a request for several amendments to the British-Egyptian constitution for the Sudan. This is scheduled to take effect Nov. 8.

Amendments Asked

Informants said the proposed constitutional amendments bore on the following main points:

1. That the Sudanese themselves determine their future status within three years. The draft constitution provides for establishment of near-self-government in the Sudan by 1953 but sets no date for self-determination of future status.

2. That a commission—two Sudanese, one Egyptian, one British and one "neutral"—be named and appointed to "advise the governor-general." Informants said it was proposed that the commission have the final word on all affairs except foreign policy and defence. In the case of disagreement between the governor-general and the commission the issue would be referred for final decision to Egypt and Britain.

3. Setting up of a committee to supervise the forthcoming parliamentary election in the Sudan.

4. Setting up of two other commissions, one to look after the interests of the Sudan government's civil service and the other to supervise "Sudanization" of the territory's administration.

Kingston Child Awaits Removal Of Second Eye

TORONTO (CP) — Barbara Ann Burke, ninth child of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Burton of Kingston, is in hospital here for the Hospital for Sick Children to have her right eye removed.

Her left eye was removed last March because of a tumor growing behind it. The tumor has spread to the other eye and so her parents decided to have it removed with the operation to save her life.

When the doctor asked her to make a decision she said, "don't think twice," they said. "We want her to." Barbara's answer: "I've made it."

Barbara saw her last toy a week ago, a red rocking-horse. Barbara's parents had the little girl's picture taken yesterday, the day it was decided she must lose the eye.

Lloyd Enwright And V. Gartland Trapped Upstairs

Cause of Fire Unknown, Drum of Oil Explodes

Trapped in their upstairs bedrooms, two men were burned to death early this morning at Tweed as fire razed a two-storey frame home on North Victoria Street.

Burned to death were Lloyd Enwright, 40, owner of the home, and Vincent Gartland, 50, who with his wife had moved into the Enwright home about a week ago. Mrs. Gartland managed to escape and turned in the alarm. She was burned about the hands and face.

Mrs. Gartland, who escaped from the burning house, told the reporter for the Ontario Intelligencer, that she was in the living room when she noticed smoke some time around one o'clock. Her husband and Mr. Enwright had gone upstairs a few minutes before. "I investigated the smell and when I reached the back part of the house it was full of smoke. I kind of lost my way and stopped around trying to find my way out as we had just moved into the house a week ago. I finally landed in the parlor and when I did not find what I knew where the door was and went to the next house and pounded till we got up. We woke up the people and sound the alarm."

Whole House Ablaze

Mrs. Moses Bosley, who lives next door said that when she first looked out the window the whole house was ablaze. The alarm was phoned in by Mrs. J. D. Reeves, who lives two houses away from the fire and she was awakened by her granddaughter, Lola Benny, who awakened to sound the alarm.

Mrs. Gartland also told the reporter that when the men went upstairs she would be right up after but she had to wash the dishes and the house a little. It was stated that when the brigade arrived it was only through the intervention of Chief George Spratt and members of the fire department that she was prevented from entering the house. It is understood that Mrs. Gartland called several times to the two upstairs to warn them of the danger after she gave the alarm.

A loud explosion was heard at the height of the blaze and it is believed that an oil drum had exploded although the oil stove in the house was not being used. All the heat was acquired from the kitchen range. The explosion was heard across the river, some distance from the scene of the fire.

Had No Chance to Escape

The fire spread quickly and by the time firemen arrived on the

Gracie Fields Calls Farouk A Simple Man

LONDON (Reuters) —Singer Gracie Fields today defended former King Farouk, a customer at her restaurant on the Isle of Capri, as a simple man of simple tastes.

The 54-year-old English star was beaten to Farouk just after his abdication last July.

Miss Fields, here for a stage hour at Finsbury, told reporters: "They say he likes the girls—well, who doesn't at 32?"

She fingered a large bracelet of jade and lamented diamonds she was wearing and said: "That is a present from him. Farouk is so pleased with our friendship."

"I wished the new baby. They are a lovely family. He himself is a very good man. He loves to laugh and joke—he does not drink. It is against their religion."

Marines Report Destruction of Complete Regt.

SEOUL (AP)—United States Marines in mop-up fighting restored their lines on the Korean western front today and reported destruction of a complete Chinese Communist regiment in the battle.

On the central front, Allied soldiers following the enemy's heavy assaults at half a dozen key points and piled up the toll of Red dead.

Major Edwin Pridgen, 41-year-old Marine division commander, told correspondents:

"I think we have inflicted decisive losses on the enemy. In fact, I consider the Chinese 116th destroyed."

"We are in complete control of everything we pulled back from," said Brig. Gen. Edward Almond, Marine commander who formerly reported from the front that Marines were in complete control of the Hook, a hillside north east of Panmunjom, and two outposts to the north.

About 1,200 Reds hit the Marine positions Monday night. The Marines counter-attacked and kicked the Reds back. By Monday afternoon today they mopped up small hold-out units. After daybreak the Marines began to move forward unopposed.

Allied planes pounded the Reds with bombs, rockets and flaming napalm. Only Chinese replied with sporadic artillery fire.

The Reds threw their heaviest punch in the western mountains mass on shell-pocked Bolger Ridge, north of Kumhwa on the central front.

AP correspondent John Randolph said up to 720 Chinese knocked the South Koreans off the northernmost position on the ridge and stormed part way up the slope of Finger Hill. Bolger's dominant height.

The South Koreans counterattacked and regained all the lost ground.

Soviet Playboy Leaves Cashier Who Wouldn't Bring Cash Home

MOSCOW (AP) — The government newspaper Izvestia explained today how Family Kutryumov-Kutryumov playboy of the Kuznetsk basin—could pay out half his salary in alimony and still live mighty well.

"Embezzlement and theft" did it, said Izvestia.

The disclosures were the latest in a series of exposes of scandalous behavior that have been appearing in the Moscow press since Khrushchev officials ordered a clean-up of officials found guilty of their positions to better themselves.

The story about Kutryumov said he had been found shortweighting and overcharging in his restaurant. The paper recommended criminal prosecution.

The newspaper said Kutryumov, head of the finance department of the Kuznetsk basin Soviet, called Siberia, spent most of his time in the marriage registration office.

In 1938 he wed Shura. In 1940 he divorced her and married Maria Surayeva, lived with her five months and left her. Then he returned to Shura, lived with her four months and left her.

He fell in love with citizeness Lida, a wedding announcement with her and walked out. He then married citizeness "P" but divorced her after a few months to get money from the bank in the Moscow suburb of Kuntsevo. Finally he settled on Vera. But Vera, known as a public scandal, he lost his job and left town without, a forwarding address in hopes of evading alimony payments.

Kutryumov did not fare well outside of Tyuki, however, as he retirned to become director of the Kuznetsk coal combine. He was paid about one-half of his salary for the support of numerous children, and Izvestia said he, Kutryumov, has bought himself a cow and "his general needs no money."

Fuller Gravel Pit Is Being Closed Down

Staff Reporter

After 30 years of operation the Fuller gravel pit, operated by the Consolidated Sand and Gravel Company, is being closed down. Stockpiling operations have already been ready and the equipment will be moved to other plants of the company at Waterford and Paris.

Morgan Gawley of Madoc, superintendent of the Fuller plant said the reason for the move is that the pit is depleted and hauling the gravel over a greater distance was becoming too expensive.

The pit was first opened in 1921 and a special gravel train was run out of Belleville every day during the summer. During the off season periods gravel was picked up by the Madoc train three times a week. At the peak of the season over 32 men were employed at the pit.

Pageant Depicts Early History Of Bridge St. Church

The newly-renovated church hall of Bridge Street United Church was filled to capacity Monday evening when a historical pageant, "The March of Time," depicting in narrative and dialogue the story of Sunday School work in the congregation from the year 1822 down to the present, was presented. Miss Helen Salmon acted the part of narrator. A cast of nearly one hundred people took part in the pageant.

First came the meeting of the first class followed by a picnic scene, that of the second audience. The laying of the corner stone is observing of special mention. Fireballs were heard and choruses of the long ago listened to, by youthful voices as some of yesteryears were recalled. A gala "All Nations" was presented and glimpses of executive meetings revealed the problems of those bygone days.

The whole performance moved along smoothly, as each scene was enacted, showing excellent talent among those taking part. Mr. William Johnson, in the person of Bob Langlois and the Hon. Billie Flint, in the person of Mrs. Sprague, worthy of special mention Costumes of early days added much to the pageant. The closing act sought to portray the work of the present church, locally and abroad. Mrs. R. B. Morden, as Spirit of the Church, was outstanding in this scene and the candlelighting ceremony by junior boys and girls was effectively done. A fine close the entire congregation rose and sang the Consecration Hymn, composed by one minister who also wrote the script. The performance is being repeated tonight (Tuesday) and those who did not see it are cordially invited.

Community Chest Canvassers Collect One-Third of Objective

When the Belleville Community Chest office staff stopped work at 10 o'clock last night they were glad to announce that 34 per cent of the total objective of $34,500 had been reached.

The industrial division reported a total of $1,500 cash, with pledges to be completed later. Special business canvassers have collected $2,943 to date. The general house-to-house canvass total stands at $3,587.90.

Many canvassers report that they still have to call back at homes where persons were out when they first called.

The canvassers slogan has become "one cent a week apiece and the goal ... we shall reached."

'Swinger' Game Operator Fined On Fraud Charge

OWEN SOUND (CP) — J. D. Hunter, 45, of Toronto was fined $100 and costs or 30 days in jail when he pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of defrauding two members of the provincial anti-gambling squad.

Evidence was that Hunter was the operator of a "swinger" game at a fall fair Sept. 29. Two police constables paid $3.20 and $3.80 each on the game without winning.

The constables testified that a bowling ball was suspended by a rope from over a bowling-pin. Purpose of the game was to swing the ball around the right of the pin and knock the pin over on the way back to the left. The two men testified that the ball hit to the right of the centre mark, making it impossible to win.

Go-Ahead Signal Given to Build Grandstand

The go-ahead signal for the construction of the new grandstand at the Belleville fair grounds was received yesterday from the Ontario Municipal Board following a special hearing at the city hall.

When there was no opposition from ratepayers to the construction of the proposed new stand, Municipal Board members R. H. Yeates and R. E. Kennedy stated that the dispensation of a vote by the electors was granted and that the expenditure of $75,000 at which $38,000 would be raised by the city, was approved.

However, members of the local fair board were asked to forward to the Municipal Board a statement of receipts and expenditures, and also expected to help in the following construction of the new stand.

Fair Board President Harry Rollins told the board members it was expected the new stand would cost less than the $75,000 figure. One third of the cost would be borne by the Ontario government and another third by the Federal government, leaving only one third to be paid by the city.

Demolition of the old wooden grandstand has now been virtually completed and the steel for the new stand has been ordered with Steel of Canada at Hamilton. It is expected the steel will be shipped shortly.

The Tatham Company of Belleville has been awarded contract for the construction of the new grandstand. Ground breaking ceremonies will have a seating capacity of 2,500.

BOYS DAMAGE WINDOW

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Two boys aged 13 and 9 were charged in juvenile court yesterday with wilfully damaging a $1,000 stained window in St. James (Westminster) Anglican Church Oct. 13. Hearing was adjourned until Nov. 17, when Mr. Smith, a member of the congregation, said estimates on the cost of repairs were not yet available.

Clever Cocker Spaniel Here On Nov. 5th

"Dingley" Jones, a black cocker spaniel who has been more loving than intelligence than the average human will visit Belleville on November 5th.

"Dingley" will be one of the main attractions at the band concert, featuring the RCAF Command Band, Ottawa, which appears at the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium under the auspices of Belleville Wing 418 RCAF Association on November 5th.

The talented dog is an RCAF veteran. He flew into France on D-Day plus seven and became the mascot of 604 (Fighter) Squadron. There he learned to become bilingual.

"Dingley" does card tricks, adds columns of figures by "barks," does square and cube roots and other mathematical feats which would put some humans to shame.

He is the first dog to be interviewed over the British Broadcasting Corporation. He has over 1,000 flying hours to his credit and has a full membership with documents, in the RCAF Association.

His owner and trainer is Doctor Arnold F. Jones, Montreal physician who will accompany him to Belleville.

Mayor Whitton Will be Opposed By Controller

OTTAWA (CP)—The capital's 1953 mayoralty campaign appeared to be developing into a battle of the sexes, Voting is Monday, December 1.

Probable principals are Mayor Charlotte Whitton, 58, a former welfare worker, and Controller L.L. (Lucille) Couture, 47, business man. Mr. Coulter has been Miss Whitton's right-hand man on the Board of Control for the last year.

While other candidates may enter the field, there was considerable agitation in the city to persuade other possible male candidates withdraw to give Controller Coulter a better chance to defeat Miss Whitton.

The mayor declared yesterday she is in the race "to the death."

Prince Is Passenger On Inaugural Flight

MONTREAL (CP) — Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands paid this city a two-day visit during the week-end, slept through all of it.

He was aboard a K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines plane which touched down here on Saturday, first flight from Amsterdam to Mexico City via Montreal and Monterrey, Mexico.

Prince Bernhard was slumbering when the aircraft landed about 1.30 a.m. EST and he remained asleep for the two hours that it was here.

MONEY FOR DON JAIL

TORONTO (CP)—City Council yesterday authorized the spending of another $8,435 to make the Don jail escape-proof. Earlier $2,500 had been voted to provide special window grilles and screens and replace a wooden door with a grille unit. The Don jail, from which the Boyd gang escaped, is owned by the city and administered by the province.

NO TOBACCO AGREEMENT

SIMCOE (CP)—Tobacco market appraisal committee of the flue-cured tobacco growers' co-operative association adjourned a day-long meeting yesterday after failing to agree on minimum average price for tobacco. It was believed buyers and growers were only one cent apart at 42 cents and 43 cents respectively.

THE REAL SHORTAGE

More than six years after the end of the war Canada is still facing a critical shortage of housing. In the war years the situation became so serious that a special wartime housing agency was set up by Ottawa to provide homes in communities which had suddenly become important industrial centres and had to cope with suddenly increased populations.

In that emergency thousands of housing units were built by the government with the specific understanding that within six months after the end of hostilities they would be torn down. Six years later most of these homes have become permanent housing and despite the fact that each year has seen thousands of new permanent homes built the lack of living accommodation is still serious all across the land.

This situation prompted Resources Minister Winters to announce a few days ago that there is a mistaken impression held by many citizens that there is a serious lack of building materials. Apart from cement, he said, this is not the case. Materials are in adequate supply, but difficulties to build their own homes? The Globe and Mail doesn't think so. And while we recognize that that paper is always quick to quarrel with the views of any Ottawa spokesman its answer to the housing shortage question is pertinent.

Agreeing with Mr. Winters that there is no serious shortage of materials at the factory and warehouse level it argues that there is a very definite shortage at the consumer level for the simple reason that they cost so much that people can no longer afford to buy them.

The proof of this shortage is seen in the government's statistics on residential building. In 1950, 88,000 new homes were completed. Last year the figure fell to 81,000, and this year it will be even lower. Yet there was still no doubt of the need for new accommodation.

Another point to be found in the costs not only of materials but of building labor. In the years before the war there was only a trifling difference between the average earnings of industrial workers and skilled building workers. Today there is a very wide difference. This difference, plus the fact that lumber is four times pre-war prices and other materials three times what they were, makes private home building, out of the reach of the average Canadian family.

The Globe and Mail sums it up: "We have a shortage of skilled people who can afford to hire the expensive labor needed to assemble the expensive materials."

THE APT DESCRIPTION

There are few descriptions so apt as those that are sketched with deft strokes of humor. With this in mind a British weekly has been asking its readers to contribute some briskly humorous descriptions of the United States. One of the descriptions asked for was that of a "fellow traveller."

There have been many thousands of words devoted to this peculiar type of citizen but few describe him as fully and effectively as the answers that the British paper received. One reader describes the fellow traveller as one who "usually travels in the red line bus and invariably rides his ticket to the two-penny stage. One whole" fellow traveller is one who has the courage of someone else's convictions." The other wrote: "I don't know where I'm going, but my friends do."

These quips are typical of a classic answer provided by a one-time vice-president of the United Electrical, Workers Union when he was challenged in a convention meeting to offer proof of his charges that fellow officials were Communist. He replied: "I can't prove that he is a Communist but when I see a barnyard fowl that looks like a duck, walks like a duck, quacks like a duck and is always in the company of ducks, I have a pretty good reason to believe that it is a duck."

We don't think that much improvement can be made on this description of the unmistakable Reds in our midst who pursue the Communist party line at all times but would have us believe that they are broad-minded liberals espousing the causes of the oppressed.

BEST BLOODSTOCK

The British have their faults but it is the best bloodstock in the world on which to draw. For those of you across the seas who have the first claims as kinsmen it is worth your thought and your planning. There is wealth and strength in the men and women of your race. This kind of wealth is real and wordy dispute. — (Beverley Baxter in Maclean's Magazine.)

Quebec claims to have the lowest per capita taxation of all the provinces in Canada. Against that, let us consider what we receive in return for our taxation.—(Oshawa Times-Gazette.)

WINNER AND LOSER

The throng leers the winner, The crowd likes the man who has just begun to bask In cheers for the victor And seldom pay heed Were it not for the boys who run second and third. And even the last who ends up In last place Has done all he could just to make it a race.

The marks that are set all Are those which endure; Those last have made them the plaudits will go, But many a contestant Might not have occurred were it not for the ones who ran second and third. Were it not for the courage and skill they displayed The victor's achievement might not have been made.

So here's to the fellows not destined to win Who still give their best in the contests they're in. Important table setter (thought not one half's chosen). For there could be no winner Were it not for the loser Who gives to the victor his measure of fame: They bring out his best and they make it a game.

Dr. Perry G. Goldsmith, who resides on Church Street, heard the breaking of glass in his house one evening recently and hopping downstairs he found that a partridge had hit a pane of glass with such force that it fell on a table in the kitchen. The bird was not hurt.

Mr. Brent Good, at one time a resident of Belleville, is one of the 1,000 Canadians in New York City. Although born in Rochester, Mr. Good considers himself a Canadian as he spent his boyhood days in Prince Edward County. TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WITH FAITH AHEAD

Faith should be the forerunner of all our dreams or desires. With Faith leading us, we gain assurance, courage, and confidence that every good and worthy goal, great moral crusade, is initiated by faith sent out ahead. Pioneers, inventors, statesmen depend more upon faith to guide them than on anything else.

Faith is something of ourselves that we send on ahead to prepare the way for us later on, in accomplishment of a booking agent who goes ahead to book an engagement. There is this difference, however: one person has no set reason. It is a year-round affair with no between stops.

I never look out upon a great city at night, with its millions of electric lights, without thinking of Edison sitting alone, experimenting with tiny threads and lamp black, on his way to the invention of the electric light. Faith was forever ahead of him in all he did. It was faith that gave him the light to invent the light.

Each year we are reminded of Columbus's faith. He had faith and he sent it ahead to make way for his feat, triumph. It has always been this way. With faith ahead we can triumph anything! And the further ahead we send this faith of ours, the greater is our triumph. What a celebration it is when we reach our objectives, led all the way by faith ahead.

The salesman gets his biggest order when he has sent faith far ahead to prepare the way. There was a time when people lived in confusion and floundering of the minds of those about them, for lack of this thing called "little faith". The great achievements in this world have been gained by men who set their faith far, far ahead, and then went confidently to meet it.

Every single morning we need to send out some of this faith ahead of us to go after us and in movement. Once it gets static all progress and growth stops. Keep the faith sent ahead that gives us incentive, hope, and self-reliance.

NEW KIND OF GRAVITY

QUALITY, NOT PRICES

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

A war is being waged in Dublin over the respective qualities of Irish and Canadian whiskey. Tipers would be more interested in a price war.

Slavery in Freedom's Name

(Ali stands by Sir Gladwyn Jebb, permanent British representative on the Security Council in the United Nations at a recent session of the U.N. Economic and Social Council. Following is Ali's reply.)

Allow me, if I may, to say a few words on the question of the right of freedom.

This is one of the oldest and most devoted of the members of the United Nations. Its history is full of proofs of its love of freedom. Its people, who have lived for the rather more hopeful period of 1,500 years, have known it and also dearly loved it. I can therefore assure the representative of Britain to do anything which would frustrate the proper functioning of the United Nations or impede its growth. But much more than that, I speak as the representative of a power whose liberal record in both the field of colonial matters can scarcely be called in question.

Britain has, of late, taken the world and observe those states which in the last 30 or 40 years have achieved full independence, some within and some outside the Commonwealth, and this not as the result of war, but with the full and willing cooperation of the Government of United Kingdom.

"This process is confusing, and will continue for a long time. It is important that it should be based on real and not on spurious concepts. And real concepts are only itself be based on education, on trained leadership, and on the general ability to cope with the problems which will be thrown on any body politic by the emancipation of modern man from what is called modern civilization. Without these, freedom is an illusion and, worse, breeds all that can exist: anarchy or dictatorship. In the first place, the absolute negation of freedom. To quote the philosopher Hegel: "Slavery is not free who is conscious of himself as the product of the law which he obeys."

"Independence, therefore though it is an ideal and a goal, is only a means to an end. What is really sought is, or should be, man's right to live a dignified and worthy life. To assert the contrary is effectively to deny the most fundamentals people of, say, Latvia are better off, spiritually, morally, and economically, than the people of, say, Nigeria or the Gold Coast. And this is as manifestly an unfeeling and as contrary to all the known facts, that it must surely be repugnant to the conscience of all those who have ventured into the field of political philosophy. The simple method of calling it freedom!

"The present—at total independence for any group or colony, or for the whole country of any other consideration, is, in other words, nothing but freedom to exploit the wealth of dispensation for its own sake. If the doctrine of colonial servitude have it could, though I don't think it will, result in the disruption of some of the present dependent territories which, in their inchoate if mistaken zeal for independence, is what many of the leaders of the independents apparently want. But, more than that, it would destroy the United Nations itself.

"Of course there are new forces at work in the world: forces of nationalism, of social philosophy; this school died an "either-or" way of figuring whether we were right or we were wrong. Slick or well. Good or bad. There are no gradations between the two extremes.

Ideals and standards were based upon this tactly hypothesis. We had to aim for perfection or we would not attempt and at the bottom. We had to be musclemen or we were certainly weaklings. Our grades had to be all A's or all F's; anything else was smart. In any kind of recognition we had to be the smartest of the class, manager of the store, president of the corporation, richest man in town, Miss America.

It goes without saying that the great majority of us could not and therefore did not measure up to these unrealistic specifications.

Now it's our turn to play the game of parents. So we, following the pattern laid down by our own parents, assume the mask of infallibility, seize the reins of authority, and, all unconsciously drive our own children toward the same unattainable goals. They will be the smartest, the richest, the most influential citizens, the most athletic, the most at-least built, reflected glory.

Witness the battles in families over school grades, personal appearance, piano lessons, see the prizes offered for the one who gets there first, fastest, shoots down the most planes, takes the most dangerous chances, raises the most money, dies in the best nurses, rides the largest muscles, drinks the most beer, drowns the most wives, is being the best dressed, has the best looking wife, talks the biggest in Congress or Parliament.

Returned—With Thanks

(Montreal Gazette)

On the subject of the borrowing of books a volume or two might be written, with material for a chapter on the sins of the borrower and lender, as well, perhaps, for a whole book. Such a work would be incomplete without a chapter on the practice borrowing by the Iranian Foreign Ministry at Tehran of a volume from the British Embassy there. This was a modest pamphlet entitled "Guide to the west" and its severance of diplomatic relations.

Iran Premier Mohammed Mossadegh announced last week that he was breaking off relations with Britain; the Embassy requested the return of the pamphlet before the ambassadorial staff, which is not confronted with such a situation for the first time in the west, wished to bone up on correct procedure to be followed under the circumstances forecast by Mossadegh.

The Embassy was told that the book was still in use by the Foreign Ministry, but that it would be in because evident when formal relations with Britain are severed break was made on Wednesday.

Mossadegh thought the move may have been to the British, they, snickers for such things, and there is some evolution from the fact that it was made with due respect to protocol.

It has been written that some books are to be read, others to be swallowed and some few to be chewed and digested. Apparently this borrowed volume went through all those processes.

Ghost Writers

(Ottawa Journal)

In Washington, D.C., there is a university which gives degrees for ghost writing. In the light of what is happening in the U.S. presidential campaign this university is to be congratulated on thus filling its classroom.

Ghost writing has been a ghost writer's paradise. Governor Stevenson has no fewer than four ghosts, one of whom is Arthur Krock, ward biographer-historian, and Indeed, Stevenson has been called by Walter Lippmann, Alistair MacLeish, General Eisenhower is also said to have ghosts. Then leader Stanley Hiph, one of the editors of Reader's Digest. President Truman's collaborator, Jonathan Daniels, is to swarm with them.

Ghosts, however, aren't merely kept around for major speeches, or as colonels' aides-de-camp. Rather, they turn out "stiletto-stop" speeches as well, and when ever the ghost has been written by train, plane or bus, there too go the ghosts to help and cause laughing with the properly tailored manuscript.

The ghost writer came to glory in the era of Roosevelt. The slogans that launched the New Deal, and all came from a group of young men called Roosevelt's "brains trust" around him: The Moleys, the Rosenmans, Richard Cherwine, who coined the phrase "stabilize the Corcorans, the Judge Rosenmans. These, quite often, were the producers of an image related with "we have nothing to fear" the phrase because of Roosevelt's first inaugural stayed on and off the White House lawn all the World War II. Roosevelt had the golden radio voice, but the ghosts gave him his best lines; his famous "Martin, Barton and Fish" appearance an exception.

Altogether an unimpressive development. When Gladstone uttered his ringing lines, when Lincoln enriched the language at Gettysburg, when Churchill used unforgettable passages to save freedom in World War II, they did it alone and unaided. Nor did we knew who was speaking-those uplifted the shoulder sponge uplifted. We don't know now what we get is a picture by a great painter unknown to us, or a speech little more than the trick of some ventriloquist.

Strength for the Day

MOULDING CHARACTER

Some time ago a fond grandfather was reading to his little granddaughter the story of the Garden of Eden, the part where God created and the snake kept urging Eve to eat of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the little child cried out in horror, "That snake's talking to Eve!"

It was a striking example of the innocence of childhood, the thing which Jesus had in mind when He said, "Unless ye become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." Jesus was a child who had not become hardened to evil and for whom it was still a dreadful thing. Furthermore, the circumstance indicated how plastic is the nature of childhood and how readily it can be moulded into anything we care to make it.

A great responsibility rests upon parents to establish very early in the lives of their children those habits of obedience and self-control which will be delivered, not only in the days of their youth, but chiefly by the exercise of common sense and character by the emotional life which has been established in their lives largely through the influences of the home.

Parents have an awesome responsibility resting upon them. They need the whole power of God to help them in moulding the character of their children.

ARE YOU RAISING ANOTHER NEUROTIC?

We Americans, self - hypnotized by our own ballyhoo about rugged individualism, have been placing a morbid emphasis upon the concept of competition. Like a growing number of scientists, whose scrutiny has been upon the development of youngsters, in the course of some fifty years, are today sounding the warning to us Mortimer Snerds that this emphasis on competition has produced a nation not of healthy, productive citizens, but of neurotics.

Testifying to the probable truth of this theory is the fact that the majority of our life-leaving acids nutritional deficiencies are psychosomatic ills.

How did we get this way? We oldsters are products of the black-and-white school of philosophy; this school died an "either-or" way of figuring whether we were right or we were wrong. Slick or well. Good or bad. There are no gradations between the two extremes.

Ideals and standards were based upon this tactly hypothesis. We had to aim for perfection or we would not attempt and at the bottom. We had to be musclemen or we were certainly weaklings. Our grades had to be all A's or all F's; anything else was smart. In any kind of recognition we had to be the smartest of the class, manager of the store, president of the corporation, richest man in town, Miss America.

It goes without saying that the great majority of us could not and therefore did not measure up to these unrealistic specifications.

Now it's our turn to play the game of parents. So we, following the pattern laid down by our own parents, assume the mask of infallibility, seize the reins of authority, and, all unconsciously drive our own children toward the same unattainable goals. They will be the smartest, the richest, the most influential citizens, the most athletic, the most at-least built, reflected glory.

Witness the battles in families over school grades, personal appearance, piano lessons, see the prizes offered for the one who gets there first, fastest, shoots down the most planes, takes the most dangerous chances, raises the most money, dies in the best nurses, rides the largest muscles, drinks the most beer, drowns the most wives, is being the best dressed, has the best looking wife, talks the biggest in Congress or Parliament.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It seems to me I see a lot more cured, was bound to effect us all, sooner or later. For example, people talking to themselves these days than used to be the case a few years ago. Talking to one's self used to be popularly regarded as one of the symptoms of approaching derangement or at least a nervous breakdown. Now we see today are usually lively looking characters, men and women both, who hurry along the streets with their crowds, all oblivious of their surroundings, eyes directed due east, and muttering away to themselves in an animated fashion. If they happen to glance up and see you observing them, they smile cheerfully with no sign of self-consciousness.

What's happening happened to me yesterday, I had worked out the form of a letter to a friend who stared at me dith great concern in his face.

"Are you all right, old man?" he asked.

"Why, sure - Swell. Why "

"Well ...uh.... sorry, but you were walking along and talking to yourself!"

"I was not!" I snorted indignantly, but by a hasty act of instant recollection, I remembered I had been carefully framing my letter to Every Heart, that has been on the radio.... I was singing to myself!"

My friend patted my shoulder sympathetically and went on. But that's it. That's what radio has done to us. We're all talking to ourselves. We're just singing.

Liberal Advisory Council Calls For Abolition of Radio Licence Fee

OTTAWA (CP)—The high com- mand of the Liberal Party organi- zation in Canada yesterday called for abolition of the $2.50-a-year radio license fee.

The 225-member Advisory Coun- cil of the National Liberal Federa- tion made the recommendation to the government at the opening session of a two-day conference. Observers felt the government would agree to the resolution.

The council also discussed a stepping-up of party organization and the possibility of lower taxes.

Its major action, however, was the resolution asking the govern- ment to consider "immediate abo- lition" of the radio licence fee. It said the use of radio "has be- come universal in Canada and a necessity of modern life."

High Collection Costs

The licence fee now grosses about $5,000,000 a year. Collection costs take up a large part of this.

The money goes to the publicly- owned Canadian Broadcasting Cor- poration. The resolution made no suggestion as to how this loss of revenue would be made up to the CBC.

The call for early organization for a general election was made by Allan L. Woodrow of Toronto, acting president of the federation.

He asked members to "pass along the word" when they get home, advising workers that "a successful election is contingent upon an efficient and early organi- zation." The election is expected next year.

Enderes St. Laurent

Mr. Woodrow, who succeeded the late Senator J. Gordon Fogo as president, said the Liberals have a tremendous task in administering plans for improving living stand- ards and at the same time spend- ing heavily on defence.

"This is reflected in the tax rate," he said. "But with a con- tinued increase in national produc- tion, one may hope for a reduction in the rate."

In another resolution, the coun- cil endorsed the federal Liberal administration and called on Prime Minister St. Laurent to lead the party in the next general election.

Young Maharajah Formally Acedes To Bhutan Throne

NEW DELHI, India (Reuters)— Moon-faced young Maharajah Jig- me Dorji Wangchuk yesterday formally acceded to the throne of Bhutan, a remote Himalayan state visited by few white men.

A solemn Buddist ceremony in Paro, the religious capital ushered in the 24-year-old Maharajah's reign over the mountainous, 18,- 000-square-mile area between Tibet and India. It is known to the west as "the land of the last horizon."

A 1949 treaty with India granted Bhutan complete internal independ- ence but provided for Indian guidance in foreign affairs. The feudalistic state has no main roads, no taxes in money, no national army, no political parties and vir- tually no foreign trade. Foreigners are barred from the state unless they have the Maharajah's per- sonal permission to cross the bor- der.

The new ruler over 300,000 per- sons is the eldest son of the late Maharajah, Sir Jigmir Wangchuk, who died last March.

The young Maharajah toured Britain in 1950 to acquaint himself with western life. One of his first steps in trying to modernize his land was a recommendation that Bhutan inaugurate a postal sys- tem and the use of stamps.

The Maharajah studied the Brit- ish mail orders fast city from Bhutan's unual way of dealing with criminals. Condemned men are sewn into bullock skins and tossed in the river to drown.

Prince Albert Mayor's Name Not on Lists

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)— Prince Albert yesterday came within 10 minutes of having no mayor.

Mayor John M. Cuelenaere, who already has served six years as chief magistrate of this northern Saskatchewan city, had announced that he would again seek office and was expected to be returned by acclamation.

Deadline for nominations for the Nov. 3 civic election was noon yesterday. Shortly after 10 a.m. it was discovered that the mayor's name was not on the voters' list. Unless the list could be amended before noon, the city would be without a mayor Jan. 1, 1953, as there were no other nominations.

Mr. Cuelenaere consulted the reg- ulations and found that a special meeting of the court of revision would be necessary to place his name on the voters' list before he could be a candidate.

But before the court—consisting of all members of council—could take action it would require 100 per cent attendance or agreement in writing from any missing mem- bers.

Council members started to ar- rive at City Hall by car and on foot. One alderman was located only 11:50 a.m. following a radio appeal and a police search.

With but 10 minutes before the nominations deadline, the neces- sary amendment was drafted, pas- sed, and the mayor's papers pro- perly filed.

Madoc-Elzevir Sunday Schools Hold Annual Convention

The annual convention of Madoc-Elzevir Sunday School Association was held at Queensboro United Church last Wednesday afternoon and evening being opened by Mr. J. Keene. The Rev. H. Lewis, Queensboro, welcomed the convention.

The president, Mr. Allen Ketcheson, had charge of the business period in which reports from the different Sunday Schools were read, following which there was a meeting for discussion on the reports and point system. After a brief sing-song, led by Miss J. Rodgers, Mrs. A. Empey read the missionary report, emphasizing the need of being missionary minded and of teaching the children to be the same.

The Rev. J. F. Lane gave a profitable address on "associations in the Sunday School", stressing the fact that the Sunday School is a part of the church family. There should be that same desire to work together and love one another as there is in the home family is not eager to peddle scandal; quick to see good points; concerned about getting others into the joy of the kingdom, and anxious to build up and to lift up.

Afternoon Session

This afternoon session opened by a sing-song led by Miss Hogeboon, followed by a devotional period under the direction of the Rev. R. Mabb, with a lesson from Matthew 5. There was a good representation from most of the participating Sunday Schools.

The first speaker of the afternoon, Mr. W. J. Sinclair, who was introduced to the convention by Mr. J. Keene, spoke on her topic, "Evangelism in the Sunday School", stated that evangelism must be achieved by that education must be evangelized.

Mrs. Stonehouse pointed out that out of 600 thousand children in Ontario only one-third attended church or Sunday school, and that only one-half of this one-third are really evangelized. It has been said that if the Sunday school were of its proper, duty in its toes, there would be five times as many church members as there now are. She also stated that the Christian education, which is given in Sunday school, should prepare the way for evangelism. The first qualification of a teacher is that he or she must possess a vital personal Christian experience. There have been more people reached for Christ between the ages of 12 and 15 than at any other age.

After this address, Mrs. Earl Armstrong rendered a solo, "My Heavenly Father Watches Over Me". Miss Rodgers led in a number of choruses, introducing the chorus with actions that might be used in the Sunday schools.

Keep Within the Fold

Rev. F. J. Lane introduced the second speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Duncan McTavish, whose topic was "Youth Evangelism", the object of which was to evangelize the whole life. He spoke of the necessity of preparation before a decision day was held in the Sunday school. The work of the Sunday school is to keep the child within the fold, to save them before they get lost.

The early training of a child will often determine the path the life will take when maturity is reached.

Miss Ellis led a discussion period on "Problems of Teaching Young People", emphasizing the necessity for training up a child in the way he should go.

A discussion of the problem of teaching the youth group in the day school was led by Arthur Wilson, Mrs. Mac Burnside led the discussion on the problem of teaching the Adult Bible class. Rev. J. Poynter closed this session.

Evening Session

The evening session was opened with a sing-song led by Mr. J. Poynter, followed by the devotional period led by Mr. Hedley Bird, Rev. Mr. Read. A request number was rendered by Rev. and Mrs. Walsh and Dianne.

Officers Elected

The report of the nominating committee was read, and the officers are as follow: honorary president, Mr. Allan Ketcheson; honorary secretary, Mrs. E. Moore; president, Mr. Allan Sager; 1st vice-president, Mr. Keene; 2nd vice-president, Mr. Cecil Robinson; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Allan Franks; temperance convener, Mrs. Cecil Woodcock; missionary convener, Mrs. Frank O'Borks; pianist, Mrs. J. Donly; assistant pianist, Mrs. J. Poynter.

Mrs. Cecil Woods gave the following slate of officers to conduct young people received awards:—Isabel Burnside, Betty Sager, Grace Keene, Isabel Sager, Carol Ketcheson, Isabel Sager, Carol Mrs. Walsh and Diane, Betty Sager, and Bobby Sager.

An invitation from Hazzard's Sunday school was extended to the convention for 1953.

Mr. E. Stevens, of Foxboro, gave a timely address on "The Responsibility of the Sunday School", stating that one must agree on three things: the Grace of God is a power unto Salvation; boys and girls or today will be the men and women of the coming generation; just as Christians we must come from parents and generations that have gone before, so Christianity will be passed on to the generations through the instrumentality of this generation. The responsibility of the Sunday school is to retain the child for Christ, and reclaim the child for Christ.

A special in song was rendered by Mrs. Walsh, "The Model Of Believed The Bible", followed by a duet, "Standing on the Promises" by Rev. F. J. Lane. The Sunday school banner was then presented to Mrs. Stonehouse by the Sunday school obtaining the highest number of points during the year. The banner was received by Mrs. J. Rodgers for Bannockburn Pentecostal Sunday school.

Mr. Lewis gave an introduction to revised standard edition of the Bible, followed by a solo from Mrs. F. Palmer "The Model Of Church". The offering was taken and dedicated by Mr. J. Keene. Rev. Mr. Heslip introduced the speaker of the evening Mr. John McMurray, who gave an address on the Hands of Jesus, choosing for his text, "He showed them His Hands". In His hands we find guidance, strength, romance and if we grip these hands Christ will make us and break us.

Rev. Mr. Walsh closed the evening session with prayer.

Harmony Studio Club Has Enjoyable Evening

The Harmony Studio Club met last night at the home of Mrs. E. Veley, R.M.T., Harriett Street, for its October meeting. The report were followed by a business session, which was followed in turn by the program consisting of a piano solo, "La Paloma" (Yradier), by Mrs. Grace Veley; a theory test, which was won by Mrs. H. Christ Church Evening Branch W.A. Enjoys Hallowe'en Party

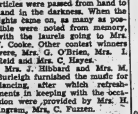
Last evening a hilariously happy time was spent by the Evening Branch W.A. of Christ Church, when 45 members met in the parish hall for a Hallowe'en party.



The hall was gaily decorated with pumpkin jack o' lanns of which had mouths whose corners would never turn down, and with leering grins, and one tooth, peeped from various corners, while black witches rode the piano, watching the parade of funny and grotesque costumes. Owners of winning costumes were, Mrs. G. Hayes, Mrs. F. Harley and Mrs. E. Greene. The judges included Canon J. B. Creegan and the Rev. R. Smith.

The program consisted of a piano duet by Mrs. Harold Wilbers, and contests and musical games, some of which sent old girls dashing and down the spine, as cold and clammy articles were passed from hand to hand in the darkness. When the lights came on, as many as possible were identified, to memory, with the laurels going to Mrs. J. Cooke. Other prize winners were, Mrs. G. O'Brien, Mrs. I. Reid and Mrs. C. Rogers.

Mrs. J. Hibbard and Mrs. M. Burleigh furnished the music for dancing, after which refreshments in keeping with the occasion were served by Mrs. E. Smith, Miss Frances Reid and Miss Lucile Morton.

Ensembled Separates

BY GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THREE pieces, each with a life of its own, combine for a handsome fall and winter ensemble. The tuxedo jacket is of gray and yellow waffle tweed, the tuxedo revers in solid gray. The skirt is of gray flannel, and has crescent cuffs on the side pockets and a kick pleat in back. The blouse is of grey jersey with a high-notched neckline and short, dolman sleeves.

Fashion Flashes

TO SHOW YOU that it's belle all the way, one Paris milliner does a little lamp-velours pageboy cap and gives it a half belt in back, the martingale seen on many a coat. It is buttoned with shell buttons at either side.

A DREAM DRESS that drew rounds of applause from a recent showing is a wedding dress in palest ivory silk velvet, its bateau-cut off-shoulder neckline outlined in ermine. Ermine flowers, mixed with tiny pearls and rhinestones, comprised the headdress.

Mrs. Phillips Gives Interesting Address On 'Research'

The October meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute met at the Kiwanis Centre with 33 members and five visitors present.

Mrs. Orilla, president, presided. Mrs. Jim Carbuit and Mrs. G. Bradshaw were conveners.

It was decided to give donations to the Blind, the Salvation Army, $25, and Cemetery Fund for Shannonville, $25. Two delegates were chosen for convention—Mrs. Archie Greenkrx and Mrs. Arnold Mitchell.

The Institute decided on a pot luck supper to be held in the Front Road Church in November.

Mrs. Farnsworth then gave an interesting reading on "Just Made a Farmer Out of John". It being the "Grandmothers' Meeting", it was most appropriate and thoroughly enjoyed. The grandmothers then stood up and sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold", Good Speller.

Mrs. Garbutt introduced the speaker for the day, Mrs. Phillips, from Wellington, who spoke on the motto "Historical Research". Mrs. Phillips referred to a lot of work to give a thorough research of both Ballesville and Prince Edward County. She covered Belleville since it was called "Meyers' Creek" in 1817 to the present day.

Mrs. Jack Parrott favored with a piano solo, "Flower Song".

Mrs. Farnsworth introduced Mrs. Beth Mackay, the provincial field worker of the W.C.T.U., who spoke on "Parents' Instructions in Bringing Up Children", with the impressive aid of setting a good example for them, giving personal examples of where injury in the home had ruined the lives of the children. Mrs. Mackay was interesting, and all were enlightened by her little talk.

Lunch was then served by the lunch committee.

Dark Chocolate Cake Under Milk Chocolate Frosting

By Mary Moore

Food For Thought

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another poor and impulsive marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Can you tell me if a girl who has been married for just a little over a year, and who only spent two nights with her husband before he left for the army, could get an annulment or has she married for any other way?

You would help me a great deal if you would answer my question in your column as quickly as possible, for I have to know as soon as I can.—L. M.

Dear L.M.:

Short as your letter is, it unscopes in two sentences a complicated and tragic situation. Between the lines, on reads the common story of a girl who made an impulsive marriage, probably to a boy she hadn't known long enough for the very reason that he was about to go away, and now she is filled with loneliness and wants to be free again. If then were only some way a letter like yours could be passed around among all young women contemplating such a reckless step, perhaps there might be fewer marital disasters among young people today. I wonder.

As for your question, I'm afraid I cannot give you an authoritative reply. Only a lawyer can give you the information you wish. All that I myself can say to you is that I hope you will consider long and carefully before ending your marriage so hastily as you began it.

Above all, before you must have decided on the marriage of your own free will, don't you think you owe it a chance? Unless there is some urgent reason for breaking it up now, I think that, if you have any conscience at all, you will wait until your husband gets home and give things an honest and reasonable try before putting yourself on record as a girl who made a bargain and wouldn't keep it.

An overseas veteran is too big a hurry for romance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently I returned from overseas, and met a very attractive girl five years younger than myself. I've been taking her out for about three months now, and have fallen very much in love with her. I have told her so, and she keeps saying that she loves me, too, yet whenever we're out together, she's always throwing smiles at other boys, whether she knows them or not. In fact she makes eyes at anything in trousers.

How can I make her stop doing this and act as though she really meant what she said when she told me she loved me?—P. T.

Dear P.T.:

You seem to have fallen in love with a very silly and immature girl. You don't say how old you are, but if she is as much as five years younger than you are, then it may be that she's just not old enough yet to be serious about anyone. She might even be going through that giggling teen-age phase when she giggles

Still carrying the torch for higher, where she lived and hungry. I used the new stream-lined method on a dark chocolate cake last night after the dishes were washed. I added a milk chocolate cake frosting. Before my knife had stopped moving I spread the frosting Marianne had her hands on the cake plate, impatient to carry it to the living room where she and hungry student nurses were waiting to demolish it, which they promptly did, with no effort at all, plenty of "ums" and "ahs" came from their chocolate smeared lips though.

That's reason enough to pass it on to you who love to bake cakes, but before you read the recipes, read the letter from Ollie R.

"Dear Mary Moore: Greetings and compliments in the same breath for a fine work well done, and one that has been baking for many years. . . please do not peter off at the end of a year or so. . . now for help-wanted. I make a white cake which is wonderful in every way, but no matter what I use to oil or flour my cake pans, the cake does come clings to the pan, sometimes more than others . . . when I turn them on the rack to cool upside down, and then try to apply the frosting the brown layer seems to lift from the cake and mixes in with the frosting . . . any advice would be appreciated.

Here the following receipt to make birthday cakes and use the proceeds to swell my talent money: 1-2 cup butter, 1 1-2 cups fine sugar, 3 eggs, 1 cup milk, 1 1-2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla; bake at 350 until sides leave pan.

"If and when time permits could we have some small cookies, bars, etc, that would be suitable for teas, also decorating hints.—Ollie R."

Part of this column is my answer to some of Ollie R.'s questions. I have sent the cookie recipe which reg. here on page 23, but will write more on cookies shortly.

STREAM-LINED DARK CHOCOLATE CAKE

(2 eggs—no milk)

Grease a pan 9x9x2 or 2 layer cake tins, and line with wax paper and butter the wax paper. Sift cake flour and measure out 1-4 cups. Onto a piece of wax paper sift altogether the cake flour, 1 3-4 cups sugar, 1-3 teaspoon baking powder, 1 3-4 teaspoons cocoa (not drinking), 1 teaspoon salt and 2-3 cup cocoa. (If you like your cake very dark cake reduce cocoa to 1-2 cup.) Turn brisk mixer in large bowl and add 2-3 cup soft shortening or butter and then measure 1 cup water, and add a little more than one-half of the water, and 1 teaspoon vanilla. If you have an electric beater beat at low speed for 2 minutes. If not, beat with a spoon 2 minutes if using spoon, 2 minutes if hand rotary beater. Then add 2 medium-sized eggs and remaining water and beat 2 minutes longer. Pour into pan or pans which have been paper-lined and buttered. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. One large square or oblong cake requires 40 to 50 minutes; layers requires about 35 to 40 minutes.

MILK CHOCOLATE FROSTING

Into 8 tablespoons very soft butter or margarine stir 1-2 cup cocoa until perfectly blended, then stir in 2 3-3 cups sifted icing sugar and 6 tablespoons, scalded milk or evaporated milk. This requires long beating but eventually if thickens enough to spread—I speed it up by standing the mixing bowl in a larger bowl containing ice and water. This is easy if you have an electric beater, but takes elbow grease if done by hand.

NOTE TO OLLIE R.:

The manager of a bake shop in a chain of bake shops with which you are familiar I am sure, told me to mix 1 teaspoon each butter and flour together until smooth and to grease my cake pans with this. He says they use this method in the bake shop. It is very good, and the cakes come out clean—but I prefer paper-lined pans. Your letter was delightful.

Girl should not allow boy friend to give her a hope chest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I already have several articles (dining-table linens and napkins, hand towels, bath towels, guest towels, and kitchen towels) which I have embroidered with my initials, and with which I am planning to start a hope chest. I am not engaged, but I do go steady with a young man whom I like very much and who I am sure would like to give me a hope chest if I even mention it. Exactly who is supposed to give a girl her hope chest? Would it be proper for a boy friend to buy it for her?—Gloria W.

A girl's parents may, and very often do, buy her a hope chest at anytime she decides she would like to have one, either before or after she is engaged. Or the girl may buy her own hope chest whenever she wishes, and begin to collect linens and so forth in it. And when she becomes engaged, her fiance may give her a hope chest, but he is not expected to

Former P.M. Of Australia Dies in Sleep

SYDNEY, Australia, (CP)—William Morris "Billy" Hughes, Welsh immigrant who rose from umbrella mender to Prime Minister of Australia from 1915 to 1923, died Monday in his sleep. He was 88 years old.

A wizened little man scarcely over five feet tall, Hughes was known for his leadership of the country during the First World War when he became known as the "Lloyd George of Australia."

The name suited for other reasons—both were Welshmen, both commanded oratory that could sway political audiences, both were fighters in a colorful political period.

Empire Figure

He became a prominent empire figure during the war years with the "Big Four" of the dominions—Borden of Canada, Smuts of South Africa and Massey of New Zealand.

He held the distinction of being the only Australian member of the Canadian Privy Council. He was given the honor in 1918 while in Canada in connection with the war effort.

When Gen. the Right Christian Smuts died in 1950, Hughes became the sole surviving signatory to the 1919 Treaty of Versailles.

He was the stormy petrel of the Paris peace conference and figured in several memorable "scenes" with President Woodrow Wilson by expounding an Australian "Monroe doctrine" for the Pacific. The Monroe doctrine, laid down in 1823 by President James Monroe, barred intervention of non - American continents.

Won Mandates

But Hughes came away with what he wanted—Australian mandates over former German possessions in the Pacific.

Hughes was slightly deaf and cleverly exploited it when statesmen or newspaper men asked embarrassing questions.

Wilson once said of him during one of their Paris clashes, "what can you do with a man who can't hear and won't read?"

Despite his many high offices, Hughes never accepted knighthood, but his wife became Dame Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire in 1922. He was twice married and had three sons and four daughters.

He became Labor prime minister in 1915 but soon was rejected by the official Labor party because of his advocacy of conscription. He broke away from the Labor party and formed a Liberal - Labor coalition with himself remaining as Prime Minister until 1923.

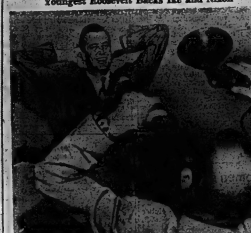
Long Service

Later he served in various cabinet posts and as late as 1940 to 1942 was attorney-general and minister for the navy. At the time of his death he was a member of the governing Liberal-Country coalition.

Hughes went to Australia at the age of 20 and worked as a fruit-picker, seaman, cook, teacher, sheep-shearer, actor, bookseller and umbrella-mender before reaching political prominence. He took part in the development of the trade union movement.

When he succeeded Labor Prime Minister Andrew Fisher in 1915 he "inherited" the latter's declaration that Australia would support England "to the last man and the last shilling."

400 Workers Back in Jobs



MONTREAL (CP)—The return of 400 workers to their jobs at Warden King Ltd., manufacturers of heating equipment, Monday ended a strike which began 16 weeks ago over a jurisdictional dispute.

A company spokesman said the workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.) and the International Moulders and Foundry Union (A.F.L.), reported for the first shift despite threats from a rival union.

The strike was called Aug. 21 by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, which later was decertified by the Quebec Labor Relations Board for calling an illegal strike.

Canadian Gunners Play Big Part in Recent Hill Fighting

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE CANADIANS IN KOREA (CP) — Canadian Gunners have played a big part in recent hill fighting in Korea.

Names like "Big Nor", "Little Nor", "Tessie," "Nick" and "Kelly" represent to the 1st Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, targets on which they traverse their guns automatically on call.

The R.C.H.A. has supported United States army troops, Puerto Ricans and Koreans in the fighting on that sector of the eighth Army front.

From their guns, well dug in in the Canadian area, they can reach out fingers out to help their neighbors.

Active Battery

Most help is from "Charlie" Battery, commanded by Maj. E. C. Murdoch of Macleod, Alta. Chest Murdoch's guests have fired more than 5,000 shells onto the troublesome hills.

Murdoch's observation post in the Korean area is commanded by Capt. W. G. Sills of Nanaimo, B.C., and Sillo, Man.

From Sills' O.P. it is a bare 2,500 yards to the Chinese, whom in most times he can see perfectly. Sills follows right the pattern of their digging operations.

"During the Second Battles," he said, "we were becoming almost blood-thirsty — we could see them actually falling under our shooting."

Once Millan, Gnr. Ralph Millan, of Alberni, B.C., saw a Chinese poke his head out of a bunker to stare at an airburst.

Right On Target

"While I brought down shells Millan watched for effect. The first Chinese crawled with difficulty out of the bunker and over the top. A few seconds later a second Chinese came out of the hole, wounded, laboring under a third wounded whom he had on his back."

Both Murdoch and the regimental commander, LL-Col. E. M. D. McNaughton of Ottawa, also have directed shots from Sills' posts.

Of all the troops with whom Sills' crew has worked, the men prefer the Koreans.

Interesting Talks

Said Sills: "There always seems to be at least one in every group of them who can speak some English, and you'd be surprised at the variety of subjects talked about."

During the fighting for "Tessie" and "Nick" the R.C.H.A. fired its 100,000th shell since relieving the Royal Regiment last May 6.

Since that time it has had eight battle casualties — three killed and five wounded — a low figure attributed to the fact that Chinese gunners still have not perfected their counter-battery technique.

Charges Truman Failed to Act In Spy Cases

NEW YORK (CH) — Clare Booth Luce charged last night that President Truman failed to act after the Canadian espionage, trials showed a connection between Communist spy rings in Canada and the United States.

The former Republican member of Congress said that after Truman had been given details linking the Canadian ring with spies in the U.S., he said publicly that American security measures had been adequate and still were adequate.

Mrs. Luce, in a radio and television broadcast paid for by the Republican party, discussed the Canadian spy trial, the British Klaus Fuchs spy case and the U.S. spy trials.

She said that two weeks after Truman had maintained the adequacy of U.S. security, disclosures showed that Soviet agent Harry Gold received from Klaus Fuchs in Santa Fe, N.M., "a bundle of scientific documents which contained virtually every secret of the atomic bomb."

Mrs. Luce said Truman also failed to take action on statements by Igor Gouzenko, employee at the Soviet embassy in Ottawa who tipped authorities of the existence of the spy ring and whose testimony resulted in jail sentences for members of the Canadian spy ring.

She said one of these statements linked the Canadian espionage ring with Alger Hiss, U.S. State department official later convicted of lying about Communist ties.

Unemployment Down in Sept. Says Department

OTTAA (CP) — Unemployment in Canada continued to decrease during September, the Labor Department said today.

In its monthly survey, the department said there were 142,500 registered unemployed at Oct. 2 compared with 147,200 Sept. 4, and 134,800 Oct. 4, 1951.

Large-scale development projects in Labrador, Northern British Columbia and other undeveloped areas were creating many new jobs for the record working force of 5,400,000, said the department.

Established industries were expanding and increasing their staffs. Employment in aircraft and shipbuilding had increased by approximately 50 per cent over last year.

Number of registered unemployed at Oct. 2 for the Ontario region was 42,200 against 46,900 on Oct. 4, 1951.

Husband Claims Missing Wife Still Alive

The claim by Georges Lemay that he has proof his pretty wife, Huguette, is still alive has revived interest in the mystery of the Montreal beauty's disappearance last Jan. 4 in Florida. Although both Montreal lawyer Raymond Daoust, a brother of the 24-year-old girl, and Florida police believe she is dead, Lemay announced in Montreal that he will divorce his wife and will travel to Florida next Jan. 1 to "clear up the case." Police point to the evidence of blood-stained garments found near the spot where the girl disappeared at Key West. Lemay is seen at centre checking a map of Key West with Detective Dewitt Jett, and James Barker, deputy sheriff in Miami. — Central Press Canadian.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was hanging up his hat on his way in, and ma said, William, Dr. Rorer called up today.

Yes? How is he? pop said, and ma said, The question is, how you are, Dr. Rorer reminded me that it's been 2 years since you've been to see him for a phyzical check up. It was very nice of him, ma said.

It would be nicer of him to mind his own business, pop said. Hasn't he got enough sick people to worry about without annoying a perfect specimen like me? he said, and ma said, Dr. Rorer explained it's a mere matter of precaution.

I tried that once with an automobile, pop said. It was the most obedient, best natured car ever had, but I let a mechanic check on it just on general principals and he found 36 dollers worth of work to do on it, and after that it never gave me anything but trubble till I got rid of it, he said, and ma said, Now William, everybody knows an ounce of prevention is the most important part of a pound.

I must admit there are one or 2 things I could ask the doctor about, poo said, and ma said, There, I knew it. Just what has been bothering you? she said.

Well, I can bend over strate frunt twerds without mutch trubble, but as soon as I try to bend over strate backwards, something seems to catch, pop said. And I notice if I sit for more than a few minutes in the same pair of pants, the seet takes on an unhelthy looking shine, he said, and ma said, All rite, William, if you insist on the choice of 2 evils, you can either drop in and see Dr. Rorer or elts make up your mind to hear me bring up the subject till your patience is exhawsted.

Yee gods, I'll go, pop said.

Residents Scared By Bright Flash, Tremendous Noise

QUEBEC (CP)—A tremendous noise and a bright flash visible 30 miller away were reported yesterday to have terrified residents of Lac Kaumanlon, in the north shore of the St. Lawrence River 150 miles east of here.

The phenomena, which occurred like last Friday, was seen by many residents of the town. Men loading trucks at a lumber camp were reported to have been thrown from the vehicles.

Residents of the area speculated whether the noise and the light might have been caused by an earthquake, a falling meteorite or an aircraft travelling at the speed of sound.

At Ottawa, the dominion astronomer, Dr. C.S. Beals, said he had received no direct report on the occurrence, but, said it could have been a meteorite.

Great Shipping Firm For Sale By Sealed Bids

WASHINGTON (AP)—One of the world's major shipping firms, the American President Lines, was up for sale today under sealed bidding.

At least $14,500,000 must be offered to take the line out of the government's hands, but bidding was expected to run higher than that. The company claims assets of $78,000,000 before liabilities. The stock being sold has a claimed book value of nearly $25,000,000.

The auction was arranged to end 14 years of government ownership. The agreement settling up the sale wound up five years of court fight. It ended the company's war between the government and the R. Stanley Dollar interests of San Francisco.

The company fell into the hands of the government in 1938 when the old maritime commission seized the Dollar line $4,500,000 and then subsidized the firm for five years. Under government operation the name was changed to the American President lines.

At the time of the loan the company put up $2 per cent of its voting stock, representing 97 per cent of the company's stock value. The loan was paid off out of company earnings under government operation. The Dollar interests then asked that the stock be returned to them. The government refused, saying the stock had been made over to the government, not put up as security for the loan.

All Hospitals Are Understaffed Says President

TORONTO (CP)—Nearly every hospital in Ontario is understaffed, R. J. Weatherill, president of the Ontario Hospital Association, said yesterday.

He told the opening session of the association's three-day convention that some hospital wings are being built which cannot be used because of the lack of trained personnel. He said:

"These conditions are very unhealthy and if allowed to continue, may have a disastrous effect on the public's attitude toward hospitals. Positive action to provide for training hospital personnel is needed."

The shortage of nurses in Ontario is still serious, said Helen McArthur, president of the Canadian Nurses Association.

"We need a larger proportion of the young women graduating from our high schools entering nursing."

European Latest Victim Of Terrorists

NAIROBI, Kenya (CP) — Antiwhite Mau Mau terrorists hacked a European farmer to death last night as he sat in the bathtub on his lonely farm 80 miles from Nairobi. His two young native servants also were murdered.

The body of the farmer, E.T.N. Bowyer, and the dead natives were found today in the ransacked house.

Bowyer was the first white settler killed since the government of this British colony proclaimed a state of emergency and launched a troop-backed drive on the Mau Mau a week ago.

The terrorist society has sworn to drive all white settlers from Kenya.

Oliver Critical Of Frost Govt. On Taxation

TORONTO (CP) — Farquhar Oliver, Liberal house leader in the Ontario legislature, said last night that Premier Frost's government has turned its back on the need for redress on the part of municipalities in their hour of greatest need.

In a radio address, Mr. Oliver said public opinion will be molded which will bring the government to a realization of its responsibility to the municipal taxpayers.

He said it was a reasonable hope of the municipalities that they would benefit from the extra $25,000,000 which the province will receive from the tax rental agreement with Ottawa.

Trying to Win By McCarthy Tactics—Truman

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—President Truman said today the Republicans are trying to win the election by McCarthy tactics of "smear and fear" and "character assassination."

He said that if such tactics succeed "the rights and liberties of all Americans will be in deadly peril."

And he took a slap at what he called the "one-party press" for helping to stir up "mud-slinging." Speaking visit to Winnipeg, Mr. Massey spent the evening quietly at Government House, where an official dinner was tendered him by Lieutenant-Governor R. F. McWilliams.

His more important duties tomorrow include a visit to Deer Lodge Military Hospital, appearing at a Boy Scout ceremony at the legislature buildings, and attending the opening performance of the Winnipeg Ballet. He leaves for Portage La Prairie, Man., Thursday morning.

He said in a campaign speech that the Republicans are trying to win the election by McCarthy tactics of "smear and fear" and "character assassination."

He said that if such tactics succeed "the rights and liberties of all Americans will be in deadly peril."

And he took a slap at what he called the "one-party press" for helping to stir up "mud-slinging."

Truman didn't reply directly to a speech last night by Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep., Wis.). But he again criticized Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's endorsement of McCarthy's re-election campaign.

"If the Republicans can fool the people on the issues . . . they think perhaps the tactics of Joe McCarthy will get the people so confused and fearful and suspicious that they will forget the issues," the President said.

"Of all the issues raised in this campaign, this is the most serious and the most dangerous. If Joe McCarthyism can triumph over a good man like Gene McCarthy, (Democratic representative seeking re-election) the right and liberties of all Americans will be in deadly peril."

He said his campaign tours have "enraged the Republican party and "infuriated the one-party press" which has started in for "mud-slinging."

"If they are startled by the words I've used in this campaign," he said, "they should be shocked and horrified by the facts I have brought out."

He Prefers Close Shaves

SOLIHULL, England (Reuters) — Henderson Frederick Evans will shave before he leaves for the office in the morning.

He was fined £4 on a reckless driving count today for driving to work with one hand on the wheel while he used the other to shave with an electric razor plugged in to the dashboard.

A traffic cop said Evans argued, when arrested: "Cripes! Why I do it all the time."

Rob Police Court Of $3,871, Gun In North York

TORONTO (CP) — Thieves broke into suburban North York police court last night and escaped with $3,871 in cash, cheques and money orders. A pistol also was taken.

Police said the break-in was discovered by Justice of the Peace Russell Pearse when he opened the office today. The back door had been jimmied and the office ransacked.

Mr. Pearse said this was the fourth break-in of his offices. Last month the entrance was forced but only $2 taken. Two days later came another break-in when two guns were removed.

Holstein Cattle Average $840 Head at Sale

TORONTO (CP) — Sixty-eight head of little and less all-Canadian Holstein sale yesterday. Nineteen went to American buyers in spite of the embargo imposed by the United States government following the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in Saskatchewan earlier this year.

A spokesman for the Holstein-Friesian Association said this was almost as many as in normal times.

Total cash intake was $57,135 or an average of $840 a head. The average last year was $1,175.

The price was for a bull—Romadale Rex-Echo Reflection—consigned by R. B. Roman of King and bought by Massey Harris farms at Milliken, for $3,100.

Reds Blockade Highway Patrol

BERLIN (Reuters) — Russian guards today blocked the second Allied attempt in 24 hours to send a patrol along the international highway linking Berlin with the west. The road has been barred to British and United States patrols since last June.

Today they turned back a U.S. jeep at the Berlin entrance to the autobahn. Yesterday they stopped a British jeep making the first attempt since August to penetrate the Soviet roadblocks.

Allied officers in Berlin said today that there would probably be no more attempts to resume patrolling unless the Soviet authorities changed their attitude.

Prison Guards Paid Less Than Garbage Men

TORONTO (CP) — Don jail guards receive less pay than Toronto garbage men, J.D. Conver, York county sheriff, said yesterday.

He told the Royal Commission inquiring into conditions in the east-end jail that few men want to become jail guards at the job because of the low pay. Not until prison guards receive a salary in line with policemen would it be possible to obtain the desired type of guard.

Maximum and maximum salaries of guards now are $2,340 and $2,640. Policemen in Toronto start at about $3,600 and work up to $3,900.

Sheriff Conover said the jail has a standing order with the national employment service and with the personnel director of the city for likely prospects.

"If a man is physically fit and honest, we are loath to turn him down. Men are very hard to get."

No check is made with police under ordinary circumstances, he added.

The sheriff described Governor T.W. Brand, suspended following the escape of the Boyd gang last month, as "a very excellent custodial officer, co-operative and interested in his work."

Morgue Walsh, chief counsel at the hearing, said a dummy quit with a hacksaw blade inside may have provided the Boyd gang with a means of escape. It might have been thrown over the wall of the jail's exercise yard.

Fred Chief Inspector of the reforms institution department, T.M. Gregory, agreed it was possible for a hacksaw to be smuggled into the jail inside a quoll.

Mississippi Man Is Killed By Nine Dogs

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) —Nine ferocious dogs attacked a 47-year-old Mississipi farmer and killed him.

County Attorney Laurel Weir said "all the flesh was gone" from William Pierce's left arm when his body was found in a ditch near here last Saturday.

"All the toes were eaten off his right foot," Weir said. "Part of the flesh of his right arm was gone and also flesh from the lower part of both legs."

The animals were shown eating on the remains when the body was found.

Sheriff Madison Sparks said the family of the dead man "would be satisfied if the dogs were slain." Sheriff Spears shot all nine dogs yesterday.

Mountain Expedition Makes Good Progress

NEW DELHI, India (Reuters)—The Swiss expedition on Mount Everest has established a number two camp about two-thirds up the peak and is climbing hard in good weather.

Reports reaching here today said the camp was set up in mid-October at 19,500 feet. Everest is 29,002 feet high.

Fine, crisp weather and good snow conditions have been helping the expedition, led by Dr. Gabriel Chevalley.

It is the 10th attempt made to scale the unconquered peak.

Composite Ballot Idea Not Stolen Says Lamport

TORONTO (CP)—City officials were slightly taken aback last night over a claim they stole a composite ballot idea from Yugoslavia.

Frank Hunter, Victoria city clerk, claimed Toronto stole the idea and said if necessary he will take legal steps to protect his copyright.

"Mr. Hunter's ballot might be all right for a small city but it would not do for a big city like Toronto," Mayor Lamport said.

Alderman Allan Grossman, sponsor of the composite ballot, declined any intention of theft.

"In the first place, Mr. Hunter hasn't got a composite ballot. It is a series of individual ballot stapled together. Ours is all on one sheet and the names can be seen at a glance."

He admitted the names used on the ballot submitted to the civic legislative committee had been lifted from Mr. Hunter's ballot.

The weekly newspaper Al Misr da said in a dispatch from Rome that Farouk had agreed to put up $717,200 as his share of the venture.

Disaster Hits Detroit Wings But Team Members Hoist Scoring Averages

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Talk, savvy and penetration streaming from steaming brows and bodies the senior Glen Rors trooped off the ice last night after one of the stiffest practice grinds Coach Attie Moore has dished out this pre-season conditioning period.

"Give me a team that is in shape, or nearly in shape when the season begins, and I'll show you an early season winner" said Attie without a shred of a smile on his face.

"Aye" he added, "there's only one way to get 'em in some sort of condition — and that's out there" waving towards the ice. Moore put the various front lines through offensive sweeps not letting up until he had them travelling at top speed and whipping off scoring plays in good style.

He had Art Plumley, "Red" Wasson and Bill McRae doing the net guarding and all three came through with some outstanding work although in this department the bespectacled youth from Napanee, who is a veteran in Belleville hockey circles, stood out above the rest. It wouldn't surprise us to see Plumley get the official nod when the pruning season starts, unless somebody of more finished ability comes along.

The two defencemen, Johnny Carpenitnik from Grand Rapids and Harry Stevens from Port Colborne did not arrive in town yesterday as expected, but it is more than likely they will arrive today, or in time to get in a few practice licks before Friday's grudge sprcer against the Peles in Peterborough.

The Glens go at it again on Wednesday night and on Thursday will go through a light workout prior to Friday's game. They will take the ice following the Junior Hawk's session.

"HAWKS, TOO

Now that the date is set for the opening of the junior "B" group Coach "Red" Dornn will step up his practices and the question will know they've been in a hockey whirl from here in. The Hawks open here against Max Jackson's Kingston, Ont. on November 18th and Dornn intends to have the two centurys in shape by that time.

The Hawks practice tonight and Thursday night with another whirl on Saturday evening. All players are requested to turn out as positions are still open and there should be some stiff battles for positions before the wedding-out process begins.

NO TWISTED KITTY

St. Michael's gallant little football team, which has been playing out of its class all season, but is equal to the rest in fighting spirit and guts, at least won't end the season with the traditional "duck-egg". Yesterday afternoon, with defeat staring them in the face on the "Irish" gridiron they brought off a last-minute touchdown to earn an 11-11 tie with the Campbellford High School team. Trailing 11-6 with breathing time to go, the Victoria Avenue-Church Street crew bulled its way to the Campbellford ten-yard line. Fox faded and loosed a forward to O'Neill who was over the goal-line. O'Neill tucked the ball away for the TD and the game was all tied up.

GETTING READY!

They must, have had a grand old reunion the other night down Kingston way according to a hockey report from the Limestone City, Michael J. Rodden, steps out of "Major Hoople" character to devote a little effort to the brand new (in name only) Cooperative senior OHA entry.

Read, men, it seems the Goodies are loaded with talent, some new, a lot old and a few venerable. And the boys staging an intra-club game in Community Centre the other evenntide that they say attracted 1001 paid newsiers. It was a red-hot tussle, we're told, with the boys easing terse wilby-ality in an effort to grab a spot on the roster come opening-game time.

They had three goalies trying out for the custodian chore and looked like we had them. None other than our old pal Glynn Udall who was in three games and all, kicking out rubber like a veteran". Others were Ron Killey and Jack McLeod.

Coach Jack Wells, Bob Lumley, Myrn Rowbotham, familiar names and Ted Nicholson, Eddie Deans, Stan Stewart and Floyd Salder looked after the defence chores while up front were Don Murray, Kenny Parks, Don Bellringer, Ken Wells, Norman Dewhirst, Cliff Aitken, Johnny Myles, Jack McKeown, George MacGregor, Bob Jayes, Cliff Forse, Wall Bitrow and Jack White.

It looks like Kingston team of old, with a smattering of new faces but which no doubt, will prove to be a powerful aggregation despite a few grey-haired veterans.

Maple Leaves hails from Ottawa. Fergie is from Montreal. Deans played for Toronto Lyndhurst Motors. Bellringer has returned from Charlottetown according to Don Mirsel. Dewhirst is a native of Kingston and Killey, it says here, "comes highly recommended" from Kitchener.

The Goodyears will start fo Clinton, New York this weekend where they play the Comets in another week-end. How they will enjoy that "no body checking" game remains to be seen.

BAD MAN AMONG GOALIES

The Bad Man among Maple Leaf Hockey League goalies this season is Toronto Maple Leafs' Harry Lumley. Big Lou has already been penalized six minutes for the first five games played by Toronto this season. This is a lot of penalty time for a goalkeeper to rack up so early in the year. Last season Lumley incurred two minutes in penalty time. On October 12 he was penalized for tripping, on October 18 he was penalized for roughing-in the goalmouth, and on October 19 his offence was tripping, again.

SIMILARITY IN CHICAGO NAMES

On this year's Chicago Black Hawks there are two Petes, two Fredx, two Bills, two Als, two Jimes and two guys named Gus. The similarity in the Chicago Christian names could make it mighty confusing at times. There's Pete Conacher and Pete Babando, Fred Hucul and Fred Glover, Bill Mosienko and Bill Gadsby, Al Dewsbury and Al Dewsbury, Jim McFadden and Jim Peters, and Gus Bodnar and Gus Mortson.

BRUINS USING NEUTRAL STICKS

Hammy Mosier, trainer of the Boston Bruins, is a guy who likes to come up with new innovations and this season he has come up with a dandy. Mosier purchased all neutral sticks for the Boston players this year. In other words there is no such thing as a "left" or a "right" anymore. All sticks are the same and each player bends the stick to suit himself.

Gordie Howe, Ted Lindsay Tie Leafs' Kennedy in Point Race; Rocket Zooms to Third Place

MONTREAL (CP)—Whole gobs of disaster and only a little good fortune moved in on Detroit Red Wings in last week's National Hockey League scramble.

A three-game reverse dropped the 1951-52 champions from the league leadership into a tie for third place. Montreal Canadiens took over top spot. Goalie Terry Sawchuk of the Red Wings, winner of the Vezina Trophy last season as low-average netminder, watched 17 pucks whiz past him and his shining 1.26 average turned to a crazy 3.15.

There was this solace for the Wings: Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay closed in on Toronto Leafs' Ted Kennedy to share the point-scoring leadership.

Each Have 10 Points

The N.H.L.'s weekly statistics, released today, show each of the three leaders with 10 points. Peculiarly, none of the three played up to his usual in last week's games. Howe added two goals and now is tied with Kennedy for goal-scoring honors. Each has six goals and four assists.

Chasing the leaders is the Red Wings' Metro Prystai with nine points.

And look who's right behind with eight points apiece—Richard of Canadiens, tied with Paul Ronty of New York Rangers. Richard is second in the list with no goals and three assists. Richard went scoreless in the two with the Rangers but got a goal and two more assists. Ronty, in the first 10 box men a week ago, tallied his total with one goal and one assist.

In addition to Richard, two other newcomers crowded into the first ten—Wally Hergesheimer and Herb Dickenson of the last place, but suddenly potent Bruins. Each has seven points; tied with Alex Delvecchio and Lorne Ferguson of the Red Wings, who dropped a notch.

Goal Average High

Maybe some of the goalies don't know it or fret over it, but the goal scoring has been plentiful so far this year than last. In 23 games to date the average in 23 games is 5.1 goals. For the first 23 games last year the average was only 4.6. The average for the whole 1951-52 season was 5.0.

Jim Henry of the Boston Bruins is still top goalie. He trimmed his average to 2.00 a week ago to 1.91. Gerry McNeil of Canadiens follows with 1.97, compared with his 2.11 a week ago. Terry Sawchuk of Ravvers and Al Rollins of the second place Chicago Black Hawks also wunted their averages to 2.25 and 2.50, respectively.

Only Sawchuk and Harry Lumley of the fifth-place Toronto Leafs saw their averages worsen. Lumley, in sixth place for the third consecutive week since the season opened, had a 2.57 average compared with 2.40 a week ago.

The doubtful distinction of most penalized player and most penalized team belongs to the Red Wings. Ted Lindsay has spent 30 minutes in the cooler and his team has amassed 138 minutes in penalties, five runners-up place belongs to Toronto Leafs also on both counts. Tod Sloan has served 22 minutes and the Leaf team 138 minutes.

Canada to Send Skating Team To Switzerland

TORONTO (CP)—Canada will send a four-member team to the 1953 world figure-skating championships at Davos, Switzerland Feb. 7-15, it was announced yesterday.

The skaters, chosen at the annual meeting of the governing council of the Canadian Figure-Skating Association, have had previous international experience, including this year's world championships at Paris, and the Oslo, Norway, Olympic games. All from Toronto, they are:

Suzanne Morrow, 21, who placed fourth in the world event and sixth in the Olympics. She will compete in the women's senior singles.

Peter Firstbrook, 23, seventh in the world and fifth in the Olympics. He is the country's representative in the men's singles competition.

Frances Dafoe, 22, and Norris Bowden, 25, who teamed up to win the world title in 1948 and a fifth in the Olympics. They will compete in the senior pairs.

Miss Morrow is the veteran of the team. She placed 16th in the 1947 world event, was third with Wally Diestelmeyer of Kitchener in the 1949 Olympic games at St. Moritz, Switzerland.

The C.F.S.A. decided the Canadian 1953 championships will be at the Sudbury Memorial Gardens early in March.

D. J. Hall, North Bay, was elected an officer of the Association.

Wynn, Roberts Top Majors Night Hurlers

NEW YORK (AP) — Fast-ball pitchers are supposed to fare best in the night games. But Cleveland's Early Wynn, who depends mainly on slow stuff, did right well for himself under the lights during the 1952 major league baseball season.

Wynn, whose repertoire features knucklers, sliders and changes of pace, picked up 13 of his 23 victories in night competition. His .867 percentage, 13-2, topped all American league tournament-lit nighters. Associated Press Roberts of the Philadelphia Phillies racked up 15 triumphs against only three setbacks. In percentage, the husky Phillies' hurler was tied with New York's Roy Wilhelm and Preacher Roe of Brooklyn, each with .833. But the latter pair had only six night decisions.

Shanks Well Up

Bobby Shantz, Philadelphia Athletics' lefty who won 24 and dropped only seven during the year, was runner-up to Wynn with a 10-3 record. New York's Allie Reynolds with 7-3, was third.

Sal Maglie, New York, 8-3, Carl Erskine, Brooklyn, and Bob Rush, Chicago, 3-2 each and Ken Raffensberger, Cincinnati, 11-4, also posted impressive marks among the National League pitchers.

Cliff Mapes, New York Giant southpaw, was the lone unbeaten hurler in the major league crop of "154 innings or more" pitchers. Kozio had a 3-0 slate.

BACK TO ENGLAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Willwyn — who did — returned back to England. The English horse, winner of the 1950 Laurel Handicap, was shipped via air last night. He was accompanied by owner Robert Belcher of England, trainer John Waugh and four grooms.

Schmidt Ready to Quit Every Spring, Comes Fall and He's 'Itchy-Footed'

BOSTON (AP)—Big-time baseball has been Mill Schmidt's way of life with Boston Braves for 15 years and he can't get it out of his system though it costs him money.

"Every spring I say I'm going to quit," says the National Hockey League's oldest player in point of service. "And then it comes fall and I get itchy footed. It's in my blood. I love the ballparks, sliders and changes of pace, picked up 13 of his 23 victories in night competition. The .867 percentage, 13-2, topped all American league tournament-lit nighters. THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

The teams battling in Canada's two great football conferences, the Interprovincial in the east, the Western Interprovincial in the prairies, are nearing the end of the long schedule and the Grey Cup classic played annually in Toronto is almost in sight.

This is Canada's most colorful two-day sports spree, where amid a riot of color and white 10-gallon hats, east meets west, perhaps in snow, perhaps in mud, perhaps on a clear, fast greenish field. It is our greatest sports spectacle, it is also the meeting of two contrasting type of folks, the jovial, friendly westerners and the more reserved easterners.

All this we admit, the glory and the color of it all. But you'll pardon us if we again go on record as stating that we don't believe this great event is being handled in the best manner. We think it is a remark that probably will get us ostracized from better social circles in fair Toronto, it is a remark which will be greeted with scorn and with warmth and hospitality. But even at the risk of suffering the cold shoulder and ice-cold stares from Toronto, college and other centres, we still insist that the football customers, the football fans, the people who make the whole thing possible, aren't getting a fair break.

We're thinking of the good sports folk of Regina, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg who have dug generously and deeply into their jeans when difficult faced their beloved clubs, fans who paid their way in the east and who have been the super mose of the teams could exist. And, the same applies to Ottawa, Montreal and Hamilton, though to a lesser degree, because these cities are within easy reach of Toronto, for those who have planes, cars, buses or train fare, and can pick it.

We think this series should be home-and-home games, at least, in the cities of the two champion teams. Perhaps this would cost a little much money in the one-city shots in Toronto, because none of the other cities have anything approaching the capacity of the huge Toronto Varsity stadium, excepting possibly Mon'real, where the games are played in the baseball park, on a hole-in-the-ground.

But, of course, if money is the fundamental consideration, ser argument is all wrong. We were figuring, merely from the sporting angle for a sort of grand finale in which the customer, instead of being deprived of the finals of the big drama, would get a chance to see the thing he had helped create, like the Stanley Cup, or world's baseball series. These do pretty well financially, at that.

ARE YOU... GOING HUNTING?

If you are, you probably realize all the hazards you may meet. Gunshot wounds, travel accidents, colds, falls, burns, drowning, and many other mishaps may befall you. We have a policy which would cost you less than a box of shells that would insure you for hospitalization, accidental death, loss of limbs or sight while you are hunting. Why don't you drop in and pick up an outdoorsman's insurance policy. It will be issued while you wait. The wise hunter will have one before heading into the bush.

'King Krol', Argos Ex-Triple-Threat Not Ready to Hang Up Grid Gear

By WILF GIBSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Joe Krol, Toronto Argonaut dashing triple-threat star, 39, few years ago, admits he hasn't his old zip, but he won't admit that his football days should be packed up for good after this season.

The all-world veteran, "King Krol" to thousands of fans when he was helping Argonauts to five successive Grey Cup titles in 1945-46-47, still is in the line-up every week. But, what he would like to do one last touch Frank Clair has him doing as an assistant on which the two don't entirely agree.

Clair, who came to the Toronto club after Krol's most successful years, has him doing little else but kicking—a job he's performed as well as when he was in his prime after breaking into pro football with the University of Western Ontario Mustangs in 1938.

Feel Confident

But Joe, a cool, relaxed competitor who got Argonauts out of many a tight spot in the past, believes he still can help them for a few years with his passing and running.

The five-foot-nine, 207-pound halfback-quarterback is somewhat thin naturally after 13 years in senior competition, but not gaunt by any. But while most players at his age are washed up, he wasn't among them.

"I've had better the last couple of years but not as many as in the 1945 season," he said. "I still can run and pass and there's always the threat of a quick kick in my bag of football. It's up to Clair though and I'll go on doing what he wants.

Although Joe warms the bench when he is not trotting on the field for kick-offs and third-down punts, he is well paid for it. He reported $300 when he first came to Argos in 1942 after three seasons with Hamilton Wildcats of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, but is the last few years he has been one of Argonauts' highest-paid players.

This season he's reported to be receiving a minimum of $4,000.

Days Are Numbered

His football pay may be finished after this season as Clair likely will look around for an import who can kick and be used either as an offensive or defensive player as well. There was some doubt that Joe would even make the team this season, but Clair lacked a kicker as dependable as Joe.

He's still booting accurately 39 to 45 yards and his ability to get them away while rushed amazes the fans. He has kicked five field goals and eight converts but no longer holds down the convert kicking job. He took over after Dave Mann and Jim Trimble failed when he missed a couple in a vital game Clair left him on the bench and called on Fred Ettinger to do the job.

Joe's scoring during this season include a touchdown, his first in two years, in game when Argos trounced Montreal Alouettes 43-0, the big lead they piled up early giving Clair time to carry the ball once again. Quarter Nobby Kwiatkowski kept feeding him the ball, much to the delight of the crowd, and they still remember Joe Krol and Royal Copeland were the mainstays of the team with their famous Krol-to-Copeland pass play.

Albert College Hands Trenton 22-0 Defeat

TRENTON (Special) — The Albert College eleven rolled over ground to beat a 22-0 victory over a smaller Trenton High School team here at Bell Memorial Park yesterday afternoon. By virtue of the win the Belleville college squad closed in on the first round of the C.O.S.S.A. play - playoffs. The victory was the fifth straight for Albert in inter-school games this season. Last week Albert's team representing the same school went through to the Central Ontario finals. This year's north took capable of copping the coveted football crown.

It wasn't long after the kicks started to play that the young giants from the eastern centre moved steadily down the field into scoring position. Albert's smashing fullback Mike Goetz lashed the convert ball under his arms and with a spectacular show of broken field running threw for a pass for a touchdown. The educated toe of Malcolm Slack hoisted the convert sailing between the bars for giving Albert a 6 to 0 edge.

Quarterback M. Workman threw passes and used his speedy backfield brains failed to make much headway. However, on brains and brawn combined and Albert retired the enemy threat with brilliant blocking tactics. The play was rough. Trenton handing out every particle as a result of Albert's strong defence from more penalties because their halfback Dennis was piling in on Trenton ball carriers.

Faulkner Stars

One of Belleville's own athletes also halfback Bert Faulkner carried out every assignment with precision and drive. He scored Albert's second major count as end man on a daring intercept. Malcolm Slack failed to convert this one.

Then the agile Mr. Faulkner romped across the Trenton touchline again. Another time he crossed the line but the superb delivery wasn't counted because of line interference.

Then convert sec Slack hit his third drive, galloped through Trenton battlers with the ball that clinched the ball game. Trenton footballers had the clutch out of them continued t othrow up defensive after defense in an action which had turned definitely one-sided by this time.

As light dwindled in the last quarter end Jimmy Hummel ran one of quarterback Larry Burk's hefty heaves across the Trenton goal line for the fourth and last Albert touchdown. Slack couldn't get this convert between the uprights either.

In the stands was Albert College's retired principal Dr. Bert Howard and his successor Rev. R. E. MacKechnie, of Toronto. The pregame fan displayed signs of exhilaration over Albert's win. Dougie MacKenzie, the two-and-a-half-year-old son of the new principal was sporting a player's footballs helmet was surrounded by a pretty cheering squad of loyal fans went into a wild frenzy as their side emerged the winners.

Emil Zatopek, Czech Runner Holds Seven World Records

LONDON (AP)—Emil Zatopek was the incredible Czech runner, has rewritten the world record book for long distance trots.

The holder of three Olympic records, all set in Helsinki this summer, now holds seven world marks—every recognized distance event in the books from 10,000 metres onwards.

He now has seven world marks set at different periods since 1950—the 25,000, 30,000 metres and 15 miles Sunday.

10,000 metres; 29 minutes, 02.6 seconds.

20,000 metres; 59 minutes, 51.8 seconds.

25,000 metres; 1 hour, 19 minutes, 21.8 seconds.

30,000 metres; 1 hour, 33 minutes, 23.8 seconds.

10-mile run: 46 minutes, 12 seconds.

15-mile run: 1 hour, 16 minutes, 26.4 seconds.

One-hour run: 13 miles, 810 yards.

Unofficially, Zatopek also has annihilated the six-mile, world record of 29.02.8 for the 10,000 metres (six miles, 1,093 yards) in 29.01.2, meant that he aped the six-mile mark. Zatopek's time was 1.8 faster than Heino's world record. But on that day in Turku, Finland, the officials had failed to put waiwcbo on him at the six-mile distance.

Gault Wins North American Bantam Title

QUEBEC (CP) — Pappy Gault of Spartanburg, S.C., last night won the North American bantamweight boxing championship with a 12-round unanimous decision over Fernando Zagnon of Quebec.

The 23-year-old holder of a new title sanctioned by the National Boxing Association of the United States weighed 116¾ while Cagnon, Canadian bantam champion, weighed 117½.

The win was almost unmarked after the fight in which he constantly led on points with sharp, accurate left jabs, stinging right hooks and fast foot-work.

There were no knockdowns.

The veteran Quebecer, 29, was cut about the left eye in the fifth round. His main attack was limited to rights and left to the body.

Gagnon was warned twice by referee Ralph McNaughton of Quebec for using his elbows in in-fighting.

Judge Camille Rodgers gave Gault nine rounds, one even and two to Gagnon. Judge Antonio Lavertore called it 8-3-2 for Gault while judge Jack Wilcox's card read 5-4-3 for the champion.

St. Michael's Tie Campbellford In COSSA Game

Beneath overcast skies, St. Michael's Academy and Campbellford Collegiate battled to an 11-11 tie in a C.O.S.S.A. football game at Albert College Monday afternoon. Before the last goal was rung up, it was so dark, one could scarcely see the play.

Both teams scored in the final moments of the last half. With the score standing at 4-4 in favor of St. Mike's, Joe Campbellford, plunged through the centre of the Irish line to put the visitors in the lead and finish the scoring for the game. The convert was good and it looked as if St. Mike's hopes for a victory were to be dashed. Just when it appeared as if there was to be no more scoring, and you couldn't see the players on the field for darkness, the Irish worked their way down to the Campbellford posts with only minutes to go. From the Campbellford 40 yard line, Fox threw the ball to the waiting O'Neil behind the fullback's line for the touchdown. The convert failed.

The play moved smoothly throughout the first quarter with Campbellford in possession of the ball most of the time. In the second, Kelly picked up the ball on an end run for the home team and ran almost to the field before being pulled down on Campbellford's 48 yard line. He repeated his performance in the next play, running for most 30 yards. On the Campbellford 10 yard line the ball changed hands. Kelly raced behind the line and received the pass from quarterback Fox for the first touchdown. He kicked the convert.

An Irish rally proved costly in the third quarter. Once Campbellford got the ball they were powerhouse their way for the touchdown. Fox, carrying again, plunging through the Irish line. An attempt to pass the ball across the line failed, with Campbellford left to be satisfied with five points.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Audiences at my travelling lectures frequently become bored upon this statement of mine: Each to-seven shows another trick; without another trick do not raise the last partnership number.

Typical is the south hand shown here:

♠A Q 9 8 6 5
♥ K Q J 7 5
♦9 3
♣K 6 4

The sixth heart opens with a bid of one heart. Each no opens and shows, among other things, a minimum of five tricks. This hand has exactly five tricks. No more, no less.

Therefore, when south opens with a bid of one heart, he shows the entire number of tricks contained in his hand. Thereafter, during the play, sentiment and tricks will control.

He names his bid again. If he is forced by a signal from partner, he can bid again; if he do so without increasing the last partnership number. But any voluntary raise by him would show another trick.

Suppose north, responding with one spade, a new suit (about half in quality to five cards) south has good support for spades. But he lacks a sixth trick and will not make an inward raise.

Unable to say two spades because it would be a raise, he bids the six-card suit, hearts. This is very disappointing to those who would like to show the spade support. And it is disappointing specially.

But look at it this way: If partner has no more to show, they no more than can, if partner has something more to show he will bid again and south can show his full support without trying.

After south bids one no-trump, suppose north bids two clubs or two diamonds or two hearts. South can now say two spades. This he can do without a raise in number of the bid by North.

North now has the definite information that south has exactly five tricks. He need never be in trouble by passing low and by striking low in their pair. If it is not the best way, show me a better.

Woman Says Her Honesty Was Questioned

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — City Council last night urged the police commission further to investigate the case of a woman who claims she was hustled to Police Chief L.L. Robertson.

Mrs. Lillian Cooper appeared before council to charge the police chief with questioning her honesty in connection with tickets she was holding on a car raffle to raise money for a church building fund. Chief Robertson denied the charge.

Mrs. Cooper entered before the police commission earlier in the week but said she left the room afterward said her complaint. Mayor Clare Drake, who also sits on the police commission, but not in chamber said they were in sympathy with Mrs. Cooper.

Must Bear Heavy Burden for Years Says Editor

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—The Soviet world "will have to bear the burden of world peace to be assured," Marshall, associate editor of the Windsor Daily Star, told yesterday.

Mr. Marshall, who has been covering the United Nations Assembly in New York, told the Windsor Rotary Club he believes Russia is not ready for peace but is still war and is attempting to split the free nations.

"We must be willing to bear heavy burdens perhaps for many years," he said.

Big 'A' Tosses Top Score In Darts League

The Big "A" team piled up the top score yet of Belleville Service Darts League season in the 9th Anti Tank Regiment's Sergeants' mess last night. They defeated the CNE team 9-2.

The league-leading Hasty Pees were chased to the wire by the 9th Anti Tank teamers, edging the "troops" by a 6-5 count. The AMAF's nosed out the Mail Carriers by a similar score with the Brewers Warehouse getting a 7-4 nod over Corbins.

The standing following last night's play is: Hasty Pees 34; Big 'A' 31; 9th AM; Tank 29; AMAF 30; Brewers 18; Corbins 18; Mail Carriers 16; and Corbins 14.

The club dance is being held on November 14th at the RCAF Association club rooms, Front Street.

Tuesday, when south opens with a bid of one heart, he shows the entire number of tricks contained in his hand. Thereafter, during the play, sentiment and tricks will control.

He names his bid again. If he is forced by a signal from partner, he can bid again; if he do so without increasing the last partnership number. But any voluntary raise by him would show another trick.

Suppose north, responding with one spade, a new suit (about half in quality to five cards) south has good support for spades. But he lacks a sixth trick and will not make an inward raise.

Unable to say two spades because it would be a raise, he bids the six-card suit, hearts. This is very disappointing to those who would like to show the spade support. And it is disappointing specially.

Police Admit No Further Clues In Man Hunt

MONTREAL (CP)—Quebec provincial police said last night they had no further clues in their search for Henri Segrin, Sr., Cornwall farm hand, wanted by Ontario police for question in connection with the Aug. 16 slaying of Leonard E. Hurd, Marville, Ont., business man.

The automobile allegedly used by Segrin to make his getaway following Hurd's death, was found Sunday in the Lesbre, Que., area, 20 miles northwest of here, bearing Ontario licence plates.

Hurd, owner of a taxi business and trucking firm, was found dead in one of his own cabs with five bullets in his body.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Cecil B. Demille, still leading a vigorous pace at 71, is planning his next biblical epic to hit the screens in 1953. His next project will be "The 10 Commandments."

"About this time next year, I expect to have a crew shooting somewhere in Egypt," he said. "We plan to shoot at Mount Sinai and other real locations, and I may go along. The following spring, 1954, I will start the filming of the story here in Hollywood. That will take about six months, and the cutting and scoring takes about a year. That will bring us into late 1955.

"The actual shooting is the easiest part of making a picture. It is here in the production office that the picture is really created. A good story is everything. If you have that, the director and the stars do not make much difference. They can spoil the picture a little or hurt it a little. But they can't make a good script into a bad picture or a bad script into a good picture.

Difficult Project

Demille's research into biblical history is thorough. He said his new project is difficult because of the obscurity of the Moses legend.

"There is a paper of 40 years between two version of the Bible," he remarked. "One verse tells of Moses being found among the bulrushes, or the papyrus, by Pharaoh's daughter and in the next verse he is grown and has killed a man.

"We have to find out what happened in his between those two events. There is some data in such books as the Koran, Josephus and the rabbinical writings. We learn that he was a great general, having conquered Ethiopia. Much of the rest has to be surmised.

"And what did the people wear and eat in those times? Did they eat roast beef or lamb chops or what? It would be as bad to show them eating the wrong things as it would to show them dressed in tails and top hat."

Loaded With Obstacles

The producer said his new film will be loaded with spectacles, but the most notable will doubtless be the parting of the Red Sea. He has done it before, in his original "10 Commandments", filmed in 1922. He explained that the old version was a modern story with a flashback to the days of Moses, whereas the new film will deal strictly with the biblical era.

"I don't see how we will part the sea yet," he commented, "but we are already working on methods."

Most of Miners Heed Lewis' Order Go Back to Work

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Most of the 320,000 United States soft-coal diggers, heeding the order of Union President John L. Lewis, trooped back to work today after a week-long strike over a wage dispute with the government.

Special meetings were called throughout the coal fields after Lewis wired local United Mine Workers officials across the country to get their men back on the job. The almost unanimous reaction of the miners: "Let's go to work."

A few scattered pits—in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Illinois and other top coal-producing states —managed to start production last night. But resumption of operations at most mines was delayed by last meetings and safety inspections.

Miners Relieved

Miners generally expressed relief at being called off the walkout. Said one miner in southwestern Pennsylvania:

"Christmas is just around the corner. It would have been pretty rough on the kids if I lost much more time."

The walkout began last Monday after the Wage Stabilization Board lopped 40 cents off the $1.90-daily per hour increase it had received in negotiations with the industry. Miners, however, retained the $18 basic minimum wage for a day's work. It was cut to $17.6, took the stand the government had mulished their contract.

Soon after, Lewis assailed the W.S.B. and told his men to stick "hell tight" until they got the $1.90.

However, President Truman met with the U.M.W. chieftain and Harry M. Moses, chief industry negotiator, at the White House during the week-end and Lewis finally appealed for an end to the strike. Lewis told the miners, however, facing miners they should resume production "in the best interests of the public and, particularly, in the final decision on their pay increase. Both the union and the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association headed by Moses had appealed the W.S.B. ruling. They took their case to Economic Stabilizer Roger Putnam and a Washington source indicated they expect a decision within a few days.

Queen Attends Command Movie Starring Lanza

LONDON (AP)—The Queen and a glamor-spangled audience last night applauded the first Royal Command movie of the young monarch's reign—"Because You're Mine," starring Mario Lanza. But the critics didn't applaud.

Comments in all London's morning newspapers echo the theme — "Why did they have to pick this movie for the royal show?" Critics' remarks ranges from: "The story, frankly, is a stinker" to "You can-wys-Mayer. " not say this is a downright bad film, but just so ordinary."

Outside the theatre, some 20,000 Londoners jammed the streets. London bobbies struggled to keep fans from mobbing the royal cars as the Queen arrived with her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, and her sister, Princess Margaret.

The Queen set a fashion style note by appearing in a black-and-white satin gown with a halter V-shaped neckline instead of the crinolines usually worn by royalty on such occasions.

Princess Margaret wore a black tulle gown with ruched hem.

For the first time in years the principal star was not on hand. Lanza has been suspended by the producing company, Metro-Gold-

AN ASBESTOS TEXTILE
Modern asbestos "magic" in the form of Flexboard is illustrated by the cutaway sample of many brownie shingles which are made from Flexboard. Here you see Flexboard's fine fibre texture combining for the first time in roofing materials with the fine color to cope with roofing. Brownies are the first asbestos shingles to be made entirely from asbestos fibre and even the cements and mineral fillers are blended to an asbestos base.

McCarthy's Talk Unconvincing Says N.Y. Times

NEW YORK (CP)—The Times says in an editorial today that Senator Joseph McCarthy's broadcast "effort to link Governor Stevenson with sympathy for communism was . . . unconvincing."

The Times, which supports Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's Republican candidature but has criticized the general for supporting Republicans such as McCarthy, said:

"The junior senator from Wisconsin, who has made his way to national fame and political fortune via the route of wild charges, gross distortions and assorted forms of demagoguery, said nothing last night to change this estimate of him, although he did in milder terms than had been expected."

The newspaper says the speech was not an official expression of the Republican party as such nor was it approved or enjoyed by Eisenhower.

"It was a move made by the extreme right wing of the Republican party, whose hero McCarthy seems to be. . . . The speech was really made on behalf of extreme right-wingers of the McCarthy stripe who are seeking re-election."

The Times in a newspaper story said it had received about 100 telephone calls and numerous telegrams within 30 minutes last night protesting McCarthy's speech, and objecting to the Times' support of Eisenhower.

U.N. Speakers Awaiting Reply From Vishinsky

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United Nations waited in suspense today for Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky to answer the American indictment of his country's part in the Korean war. His aides said the Soviet foreign minister won't be ready before tomorrow.

Debate on Korea in the general assembly's key political committee has been suspended since last Friday, when the U.S. secretary of state, Dean Acheson, delivered a three-hour "oral white book" accusing Russia of planning, arming and touching off the Korean aggression.

Delegates to the committee met briefly yesterday, but adjourned two minutes later when no speakers came forward. All other countries preferred to wait until after the Russian has spoken.

The American delegation meanwhile was reported in informed circles that talks are going on behind the scenes, or are being arranged through intermediaries, between the U.S. and Soviet blue representatives on the Korean issue.

A U.S. statement said there is "no basis in fact" for any of these "rumors."

Harry Meldrum Moore

"No, lad, she can't get out." Colly scratched his head a little. He found a lantern and lighted it. He was hunting for the door when Paul stopped him. "Don't see," he stopped to think, "We're going to need that muzzle and a couple of ropes and—and oh, you say long leather straps?"

Fuming at Colly's delay, Paul poked around while Colly was in the rear of the cabin. Finally he came out.

"Here, then, lad," he said, "and the way we go."

A few minutes later they were at the pit. Colly handed Paul the lantern, and he was at his knees, flashlight in hand, looking down.

"Yes, lad, you're right, the hunt is indeed over. There she is and she's a beauty, if I ever saw a beauty. Or a wife as well, for at the moment, mad enough to eat you up. What say, Bonny?" he said, and at the sound of his name the animal looked up at him.

"What do you think it is, Dad?" Paul asked.

"Oh, a dog, or rather a bitch, lad." Colly said, "pure Samoyede from Siberia, its stopped its wool that's what the skins are sold in his advertisement in an old paper I found in the cabin. Now I remember. Brought from the Arctic and she got away from the men who came here the city. Her name is Bonny."

"Then—then you know this girl—the time?"

"Not until that morning! I saw the piece in the paper. I wanted to surprise you in a big way and I thought that muzzle in Meriday's store, then bid it so you wouldn't be acting as a lovesick young cub some and have a good look at your old pal." Colly winked out of the way.

Paul looked his eyes on the animal below.

"Colly boy!" he shouted enthusiastically, "you're a wonder!"

"Yes," Colly agreed, "very, very pretty, but I'm not so sure the moment just a wee bit too hot-to handle. Here, lad, you take the rope, put a rope around her neck so we can pull her out of there when's gone and—and then and she's not apt to take very kindly to us."

"If you think it be it I were to go down there on—on her?" Paul asked. Colly looked at him.

"You would think of that, wouldn't you," he said, "Excuse me if I tell you that you're foolishly brave. No, I have other plans. Hand me that rope!"

He took the rope, formed a loop on the end, then lowered it. Paul held the lantern for him. After several vain attempts, Colly was successful, the loops was over Bonny's head and she was struggling frantically to get away. Colly eased the strain, handed the end of the rope to Paul.

"Now, lad, you're the pilot," Paul he said, "Be careful and don't choke her. We must do this in a hurry."

He took a second rope, another it around the head of a stout young and hand-over-hand let himself into the pit. That animal, turned on him but Paul held her in check. It was an easy matter to her then Colly looked back to watch her try vainly to remove the muzzle with her front feet. He wiped the sweat from his face, stepped forward again to strike her fur, to talk to her in a gentle voice.

Bonny was a big dog, standing over two feet at the shoulders. She had a big bushy tail that curled up over her back. Her ears were short and sharp-pointed, her nose and eyes were black but there wasn't another black dog on her and best of all, as far as he was concerned, there was no odor to her. He felt her gentle gentle dog she was this and—and—

"This dog may be a bigger bargain than you figured on," he said, looking up.

"Meaning what?" Paul asked him.

"Well," Colly chuckled, "as your friend Winchell would say, 'Bonny's expecting'!"

He was so great trick to get to Bonny the Samoyede out of the pit that night. Colly lifted, and Paul pulled, and there she was and Paul was ready for the moment that Bonny's feet touched the ground she made a bound to get away. Colly raced out of the pit to help hold her.

"I should have warned you," he said to Paul, following the dogs to the blanket dock. "You must remember that this is a mighty strong animal, and she wants her freedom above all else. Tell you what to do, I'll hold her here until you run over and upset that box trap in the beaver pond—that is, if certain there's nothing in it."

While Paul was away, Colly kept close watch on Bonny, petted her, talked to her, assured her that everything would turn out all right in the end.

But Bonny had other ideas. She fought them all the way home, even though she must have known that her strength was not equal to the efforts of two men. Finally she became more irritable, and was half carried, half led into the stable and set down in a stall with a low door with screen top that Colly had made ready for her—preparations for the arrival of which Paul had been in no wise aware until then. The rope was slipped from her neck, and she was promptly fed. Then Bonny became a caged animal, searching for a place of escape, and finding none, she stood in a far corner on the deeply straw covered stall floor and sullenly watched her captors.

"I think she'll cool off now," Colly said, closing the door. "Keep an eye on her anyway now and then, and then gradually get out. She must be very hungry."

"If you're going into the house" Paul said after that, "Mr. Sandy to come see what we've got."

Colly was back shortly with a pan of water, Sandy with a shawl over her head, followed him with a dish of bread and milk and some scraps from the dinner table. For a second time the door was opened, the food and drink was passed through, and—when Bonny stood impassive, just watching them with mistrustful eyes.

"So that's what you've been after all this time, Sandy," Paul said to Paul."

"Yes," he bemused "that's the pay-off, and all because your dad knew how to catch her, what do you think of her, Sandy? Isn't she a beauty?"

But Sandy didn't appear to be very excited about it.

"She's awful big, isn't she?" she yawned. "And—and are you sure she isn't too dangerous to have around?"

"She's not supposed to be dangerous, Sandy," Colly put in, "but then, we can't afford to be careless with her for awhile. After all, she's been running wild, you know. He stopped and looked at both of them. "I think we better let her be and go to bed. Come on, Paul, don't still be here when you get up in the morning."

Of course Paul—was up early that Sunday morning—and of course he rushed at once to the stable to see, if Bonny was there, and of course Bonny was and she had cleaned up her food to the last scrap.

And it was then that Paul had a real chance to see what she was. In his, naive way he had been many dogs, they called them Malts, and they were not unlike Bonny, except that they were not Samoyed dogs. But this Bonny, this Samoyed—well, she was a bit different Spitzes made into one. In truth she was the most powerful, most beautiful thing he had ever seen—or, for that matter, ever dog. Glad dog! That fascinated him. Already he could see Bonny pulling a sled, with she—the—Dad Bonny, across the lake, and he would be standing there standing at the sleigh and shouting—"Mush, Mush!" As he had seen it done on the screen in pictures of the far north and the Mounted Police. Mounted Police! Funny, he had been in Canada for several months now and he had yet to see a red-coated Mounted Police man and he had been led to believe that the country was alive with them.

After awhile Colly came out the door, took a look at the sky. He chuckled when he saw the stable door open and he came to Paul to enquire:

"Well, lad, is your chum still here?"

"Yes, she is," Paul grinned, "and she appears to be more settled than she was last night. She was lying down as such I can tell, but she's up again. But she has eaten, and she made a clean sweep of everything Sandy gave her, still she is the same unsociable pup."

"Oh, I wouldn't worry about that, lad," Colly said, "that will soon wear off—once she knows that we mean her no harm. Of course it will be a long time yet to gain her confidence in us. But I'll be hopeful, then began again to think that I wouldn't spend Christmas here. After all she's not our property, and if we get the attached to her, we won't relish the idea of giving her up!"

"Giving her up!" Paul questioned, with a look of disappointment, "Why, give her up? After all we've had her, didn't we? And aren't catchers keepers? Besides, didn't she kill your call, and a dozen, and who knows what other animals, she has killed since she got away from the sanctuary!"

"Granted that she killed my call," Colly said wryly, "granted that she killed a fawn, and maybe two or three fawns, granted that she's been responsible for trouble to trap her, yet the fact remains that we don't legally own her. Of course," he stopped to explain, "we might hold her until the call is paid for—that is, if we are mean enough to do that." Colly's face seemed.

"Did you say there was a reward for her, Colly, and disappointed to her owner?"

"Yes—$200. Tell you what, I'll be in the village in the morning and I'll try to get that Arctic doctor to phone, we might be able to make a bargain. However, if he insists that Bonny be returned to him, well, I guess there is not much that we can do about it."

"Just then Sandy, looking as fresh as a daisy, came in with Bonny's breakfast, to remind them, with a hint, that the service at its fullest. Paul made good use of the opportunity to speak his mind.

"Your last plans to return Bonny to her owner," Paul whisked, and Sandy took her father's ally with a frown.

"And what's wrong with that?" Sandy asked soberly.

"I think everything's wrong," Paul protested. "Bonny should belong to us without any question or doubt. And besides, we need her around here."

"We've gotten along these many years without a dog, Sandy said, thinking perhaps of the extra housework entailed where a big fur ball the size of the property.

"But—but Bonny means so much to me," Paul said. "I still believe the protected me, possibly saved my life, I—I don't want to lose him back."

"Well, I'm sick of here." Colly said suddenly, "Bonny won't set while we're standing, wasting about her, and—and besides I'm hungry. Come on, Paul, and don't look so glum—we'll look at you, one would think that you had lost your best friend—"

Egyptian Premier Major General Mohammed Naguib, is seen welcoming famed Sudanese leader Sayyed Abel Rahman Al-Mahdi, left, on the latter's arrival in Cairo from London. On the heels of the Sudanese trip to England came the announcement that Britain has given her approval to a new constitution providing for self-government in the internal affairs for the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Britain's prestige has long been in dispute between England and Egypt, the joint rulers of the territory. The constitution is scheduled to be put into effect in about three weeks. The Egyptians are hoping for an eventual union with the Sudanese. — Central Press Canadian.

"Well, don't care," Paul lamented, "the whole thing doesn't look right to me and if you don't put up a fight to keep her, then—then I will."

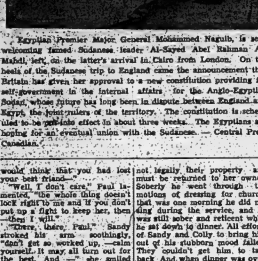
"There, there, Paul," Sandy stroked his arm soothingly, "don't get so worked up, excite yourself. It may all turn out for the best. And she smiled brightly, "why not be like a good Yankee and remember the Alamo?"

Paul's face broke into a sudden grin.

"What do you know about the Alamo?" he asked curiously, and Sandy smiled.

"I don't know a thing," she said, "I heard it on the radio the other day and it sounded so intriguing. What does it mean anyway?"

"Some time I may tell you," he said, face softening again.



"And what's wrong with that?" Sandy asked soberly.

"I think everything's wrong," Paul protested. "Bonny should belong to us without any question or doubt. And besides, we need her around here."

"We've gotten along these many years without a dog, Sandy said, thinking perhaps of the extra housework entailed where a big fur ball the size of the property.

"But—but Bonny means so much to me," Paul said. "I still believe she protected me, possibly saved my life, I—I don't want to lose her back."

"Well, I'm sick of here." Colly said suddenly, "Bonny won't set while we're standing, wasting about her, and—and besides I'm hungry. Come on, Paul, and don't look so glum—we look at you, one

And besides, she will help him out in the long winter nights, and will be less need to patrol the sanctuary—just the call of duty."

"Then when you're talking to the doctor, why not ask him to put a price on her?" Sandy asked, after you tell him about the call, he may be quite reasonable about it and let you have her for—a song. If I were you, I'd tell him that you have a young man here who will be badly broken if she's taken away from him now."

"By George, Sandy!" he said, "that's just what I'll do. And no matter what she costs me, I'm going to consider it money well spent if I can keep my man. Confidentially, Isaac Paul Gates is the proper man for the job, and where is he that could be found to handle his affairs to take his place."

"Well, I'll say this much for him," Sandy replied, "he's certainly no trouble around here. He makes his own bed, keeps his room clean and tidy, and he is always willing to help around. I'd hate to see him go away, indeed I would. For if he did, we would find him only once more when we would care to think about."

Paul left early the next morning when they fed Bonny and Colly left with him. Secretly he was going to join the fence gang. He was washed up and waiting for him when Paul—when Paul returned in late afternoon to ask, first of all, what Colly had learned in his telephone conversation with the Arctic doctor.

"I didn't get him," Colly explained, "but I got a line-up across the country and he won't be back for two or three weeks. I talked with his secretary, but he said he had no authority to act, that it was all left to Ard. Advised me to look after Bonny, and to write direct to the parties here and send them to him by letter. He promised to forward that letter to Dr. Rouselle on tour. And so, yes, there's nothing for us to do but go on about our business and wait and see what happens."

A week passed, two passed, the fence around the sanctuary was finally completed, the gate with white lettering across the entrance and proclaiming to the world that this was the 'Lac Petit Wild Life Sanctuary,' was well and properly hung. And then Paul Gates with hammer and nails, a bundle of "No Trespassing" signs under his arm, a hatch in his pocket, set to carry out to the last letter that section of the game laws regarding the proper procedure to take in the law stick.

Meanwhile, Paul—in his offmoments in the evenings particularly, was spending more and more time by the company of Bonny, the Samoyede, and it wasn't long until she was becoming more and more dependent on his company. She was getting more and more used to him, was in fact permitting him to pet and comb her and hug her for the sheer joy of it.

JOINT COMMISSION APPROVES POWER PROJECT

Five Canadians Win $252,000 In Irish Sweep

Richer Wins Cambridgeshire, Started at Odds of 100 to 6

(By The Canadian Press)

Five Canadians won $252,000 in major prizes in the Irish sweepstakes today.

No Canadians held a ticket on Richer, which won the Cambridgeshire at Newmarket, England, and was worth $140,000. But 4 had tickets worth $56,000 each on the second-place horse, Sunny Breeze. And a Toronto couple won $28,000 when Garrison Hack finished third.

Four of the winners were Ontario residents. The other—unidentified—lives in New Jaw, Sask.

The second-place winner: Sydney A. Carey, Brantford customs appraiser, who used the nom de plume "Hyphen" in betting. Mrs. Meehan, wife of a storekeeper at Erin who used "precious girls" for her two young daughters; a Moose Jaw druggist who used "Irene" for a nom de plume and an Acton woman, now believed holidaying in the Bahamas.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bardwell of Toronto had their luck—at 50-to Garrison Hack.

"This is the time I ever bought a ticket," Mr. Bardwell, a meat-counter lunch counter operator, told reporters. "I only went to buy it and spill 50-50 for good luck. And what a good luck we got!"

The Bardwells live in one room and said they intended to buy a new house. "We may get a new car, too," Mrs. Bardwell added.

Mrs. Meehan, who won $28,000 and will now "will help pay off mortgages and debts and put the children through school."

The winner has three children: Bobby, 4, Gayle 3, and Marcia, 10 months.

Mr. Bardwell said she has been buying sweepstake tickets "a long time", but never has been lucky before.

Liberal Member Will Present Many Bills at Opening

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal member, from Manitoba will ask Parliament at the session opening Nov. 20 to legislate to the effect that living and to declare strikes illegal for the next two years.

John Sinnot, member for Springfield, said today he will ask the view he will place one bill and six resolutions on the sessional order paper when it opens.

Mr. Sinnot, who decided to retire from politics after serving in the Liberal nomination in a recent party convention in Winnipeg, said he will present a bill asking repeal of legislation providing pensions of $1,000 a year for retirement members of the Commons.

Other Nominations

He will support one of the pensions bill at the last session was responsible for his loss of the nomination in the Springfield riding. believed the taxpayers should not be asked to pay pensions for former members of the Commons.

Mr. Sinnot said he plans to remain in the commons until the next election is called.

In his resolution, Mr. Sinnott, a member of the Commons since 1945, will ask that:

1. The $2,000 annual tax-free living allowance paid to members of the Commons be made taxable. Senators already are taxed on a similar allowance.

2. A Senate-Commons committee investigate reasons for the high cost of living, including high prices for clothing and footwear.

3. Strikes be declared illegal for two years because of the urgency of the present prosperity and that arrangements be made for settlement of labor disputes through arbitration.

4. A Commons committee investigate high prices for farm implements.

CULTURAL CITY

WINDSOR (CP)—Max Sheindel, formerly a member of a Viennese ensemble, is the Windsor Symphony throughout Europe as a centre of culture, said that one of the reasons he decided to settle here and form a Jewish theatre group.

NEWMARKET, England (CP)—Richer won the Cambridgeshire Handicap today. There was a photo finish for the other placings.

Richer, one of the better favorites in a large field of 42 starters, sped over a muddy turf to win the 126th running of the classic.

The judge called for a photograph to determine the second and third horses in the 1½-mile race, begin of the third and final Irish hospital sweepstakes of the year. Richer started at odds of 100 to 6 in the handicap.

After looking at the picture, the judge placed Sunny Bree, a 66 to 1 shot, second, and Garrison Hack at 35 to 1, in the show spot.

Late scratches from the race, second half of the Irish "double" were Trespass and Newton Heath. However, Fir Achre won the "Irene" for a nom de plume and an Acton woman, now believed holidaying in the Bahamas.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bardwell of Toronto had their luck—at 50-to Garrison Hack.

Farmers Rushing To Complete All Fall Work

TORONTO (CP) —With cold weather fast approaching, farmers in some areas of Ontario are rushing to complete fall work, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said Tuesday in its weekly crop report.

Some apples in Elgin county were frozen by premature cold weather and heavy frost in Welland county delayed farming operations last week.

Most cattle still are on pasture in Victoria county, with the exception of dairy cattle. Farmers in Lincoln and Russell counties have a surplus of dairy cattle on hand while marketing of livestock in the Sault Ste. Marie and northwestern Ontario is at a standstill.

Guageros Beating the Baches So Citizens of Havana Rejoice

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — It looks as if Havana's guageros are beating the backs. Thanks to a strike thyrat and the intervention of President Fulgencio Batista.

But for a while it was a tossup as to which was the worst menace to life and limb on the streets.

The guageros are known to themselves among them, Havana's guagua henceforth would have no guageros, they announced.

Batista warded no time. At a midnight conference in the presidential palace, he told the public he would not continue to stand by and watch the guageros agreed not to strike.

Now 60 crews of bacheadores are busy fixing the baches.

LIVES OF TEN HOSTAGES DEPEND UPON OUTCOME

Unruly Convicts In Charge for Third Day

CHESTER, Ill. (AP) — Unruly convicts and lackadaisical officials pressed their endurance contest into a third day today with the lives of 10 hostages depending upon the outcome.

The second uprising in two days broke out Tuesday afternoon in Illinois' state prison's psychiatric division. Most of 300 psychiatric division inmates who stormed the kitchen-dining room were herded back to cells, but 84 armed with kitchen cutlery seized three unarmed guards and barricaded themselves in the west cellhouse.

Seven other guards were herded into the cell block and some prisoners who rebelled Monday.

Talk Of Guards Freed

Sherwood Dixon, acting-governor in the absence of Adlai E. Stevenson, said Governor Stevenson scheduled to talk with the psychiatric inmates after providing were released their three hostages.

Earlier, the psychiatrists had called for Governor Stevenson who was carrying his Democratic presidential campaign into the east. Michael F. Seyfrit, director of the state public safety department, arrived last night and said Dixon's planned talk would "set a bad precedent."

Seyfrit said he expected that the rebellious in the psychiatric division would have to be put down and three hostages released before forgetting the seven other guards safely out of the east cell house.

Mrs. Dixon said the 10 hostages in the east cell house were without food or water Tuesday, with one exception. Once food was passed through the bars reserved for officers after prisoners promised the guards would get it. However, the food was given to the officers.

Earlier, prisoners threatened to throw the guards from the top tier of the cell house unless food if an attempt was made to storm the east cell house. They are apparently in control of the new outbreak across the prison yard.

Hospital Needs Greatly Increased Says Mrs. Mikel

TORONTO (CP) — The decrease in home care of the ill and the increase in medical and surgical requirements has created a particular problem in the needs of hospitals, Mrs. W. C. Mikel of Rochester, Sask., told an auxiliaries session of the Ontario Hospital Association convention here.

Mrs. Mikel, first vice-president of the association, announced that Mrs. J. D. Good, one of the original members of the auxiliary, has resigned from the council, has donated a book of memories with a mahogany cabinet to the provincial association.

Canadian Defence of Korea's Little Gibraltar Hill Brings Heaviest Casualty List

OTTAWA (CP)—The Royal Canadian Regiment's stalwart defence of Little Gibraltar Hill last week has resulted in the army's heaviest casualty list of the Korean War.

The army Tuesday announced 56 casualties, including 14 dead and 13 missing.

In a dispatch delayed by censor, Ross Munro, Canadian Press correspondent in Korea, identified the R.C.R.'s 1st Battalion as the Canadian unit helping to defend the massive crest on the west section of the front in the area of the Hook.

A Reuters dispatch said all but a handful of one company were hit when Chinese Communists overran their post.

The dispatch said 148th casualty list since Canadian soldiers entered the Korean fighting early in 1951 reported 30 wounded and nine injured in addition to the dead and missing. Reports of the R.C.R.s, including two officers. Three of the wounded were members of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, another of the Royal 22nd Regiment.

May Be More

There was no indication that the list of casualties was the complete list for the battle or whether the battle is over.

The Chinese radio has claimed that "Baker" company of the R.C.R.s suffered heavier casualties. Although not officially confirmed by Allied authorities because of censorship, this appeared to be correct.

Ross reported the company was commanded by Maj. E. L. Cohen of Pembroke, Ont., and Capt. who commanded "Baker" Company last spring when it was sent to Kojo Island to help quell an uprising of Communist prisoners.

The exact number involved in the Oct. 22 action was not known here. Normal fighting strength of a company in the field is about 100 officers and men, but a combat breakdown goes into action at full strength.

The unit defended a spur of Little Gibraltar, directly under enemy observation from three sides.

A Reuters dispatch after the action said Lat "a handful of men, only fit survivors of a Canadian company which refused to bow to overwhelming odds . . . drew new weapons, eager to get back at the Chinese Communists."

Stumped by Chinese

The company was swamped by 1,000 storming Chinese, but held out until an Allied counter-attack restored the position.

In an earlier dispatch, Ross reported the "Kojo Kids" moved into the position the night of Oct. 21, Canadian time, to face a barrage of shells that continued the next day, reaching at time and then re-opened in the evening with a barrage which dropped 1,000 shells within a half-hour."

The Allied artillery emerged to find their position a shambles—weapon sites blown to, ammunition scattered and communications gone."

The casualty list and news dispatches mentioned one R.C.R. officer, Capt. Ronald Wesley-Smith of Arnprior, Ont. Winner of the Military Cross in an earlier action and previously wounded, he was also wounded in the Gibraltar battle.

The Royal 22nd Regiment as the unit which regained a spur of Little Gibraltar Hill, the night of Oct. 23.

This was the first official identification from the Allied side of the R.C.R. as the regiment which early in the morning of Oct. 24, regained the Korean hill position. Ross had named the regiment in an earlier delayed dispatch dated Oct. 23 and cabled from the Korean front today.

Maj. E. L. Cohen of Pembroke, Ont., and Ottawa commanded the over-run company position.

The dispatch referred to is Canadian company which held a position on Little Gibraltar against heavy Communist attacks. Reuters dispatch said it "was swamped, but later took on until a counter-attack restored the Allied position."

Only fragments of the unit previously came from the Chinese Communist radio at Peiping which said it was "Baker" company of the R.C.R. and suffered heavy casualties. Ross and subsequent Allied authorities would not confirm this at the time.

(Ross' dispatch told something of the bitter action at Little Gibraltar which Ottawa and Canadian headquarters later disclosed cost at least 65 casualties, including 14 dead and 13 missing. Of these 52 were R.C.R.s, including two officers.)

Lieut. Russ Gardner of Arnprior, Ont., personally killed six Communists during the bloody battle.

In an earlier cable Ross reported that the battle lasted two hours before a counter-attack. Allied groups worked their way to help boring companies. The battle finally ended after shelling of Chinese turned the position into a shambles.

Lt.-Col. E. M. D. McNaughton of Ottawa, son of Gen. A. G. McNaughton, Canadian chairman of the Permanent Joint Commission) commanded the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery which pounded the concentrations of Chinese massed for the Communist were in charge. The battery directly supporting the R.C.R.s was commanded by Maj. Gerry Keeler of Winnipeg.

TWO ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH ROBBERY

Hamilton Man Charged, Other Man Released

HAMILTON (CP) — Two men were arrested here last night in connection with the $1,300 robbery of a Preston bank last Friday.

Fred E. Bowers, 42, of Hamilton today was charged with armed robbery in a suburban Dundas police court. The second man was released.

Police believe three men were responsible for the robbery in which manager Leslie A. Gunn foiled their attempt to steal $25,000 from the safe.

First Battalion Of R.C.R. Regains Spur of Hill

This was the first official identification from the Allied side of the R.C.R. as the regiment which early in the morning of Oct. 24, regained the Korean hill position. Ross had named the regiment in an earlier delayed dispatch dated Oct. 23 and cabled from the Korean front today.

Wounds Which May Never Heal Seen as Friendship of Truman, General Irrevocably Broken

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK (CP) —In the breaks of United States presidential election of 1952 will be wounds that likely will never heal.

As the climax roars towards its climax next Tuesday, does the victor in Europe now regret stepping from his pedestal into the hurly-burly of American politics?

Perhaps no one ever will know the answer, to that question which has interested observers of one of the roughest name-calling campaigns in history.

A long cordial relationship between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Harry S. Truman seems irrevocably broken. How does Adlai E. Stevenson view the ex-general whom he admired and respected?

America was Eisenhower's June 16, 1945, when he made his triumphant return to the Europe where he had led the Allied armies to victory. The president could have seen his future shaping.

"Anything You Want"

President Truman himself told the General: "There is nothing that you may want that I won't try to help you get. That definitely applies to your candidacy for the Presidency in 1948."

But Eisenhower said he would never run for the White House. Among his reasons was his belief that he could not be disloyal to his commander-in-chief, President Truman, to whom he had great affection.

In 1948, the President and Eisenhower "talked politics." Truman later related that Eisenhower told him he was not going to run for President.

Little more than two years later Truman said his 1945 offer to help Eisenhower get the presidency in 1952 still held good. He was "just as good for Eisenhower as he can be."

But on Jan. 1, 1952, Truman said he had just found out that Eisenhower was a Republican. He did not like the Republican administration would be of benefit to the country.

The brick-bats began to fly last June. Truman in a speech at the republican's hope for the White House by "unscrupulous politicians" for Eisenhower, have pulled no punches in personal attacks upon each other.

And what of Stevenson, reported reluctant to accept the presidential candidacy on behalf of the Democrats because of his admiration and warm friendship for Truman.

That friendship, too, seems severely strained. In a campaign speech that has seen Eisenhower repeatedly refer scathingly to his opposite with the illinois governor turning as much as he received.

Professor Held For Heckling Sen. McCarthy

CHICAGO (AP)—A college political science professor was arrested for heckling Senator Joseph McCarthy during his television and radio broadcast here last night. And the court yesterday he interrupted because "I am alarmed at what is called fascism in the making in this country."

Professor Fontius, 46, a teacher at Roosevelt College in Chicago, was booked before Judge Harold O'Connell.

Fontius, wearing a Stevenson button, was arrested when he heckled McCarthy.

He happen to be a political science teacher," he said, "I am alarmed at what is called fascism in the making in this country."

Fontius, charged with disorderly conduct, was granted a continuance until Nov. 19.

Worst Drought in Many Years Hits Great Plains in United States

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A prolonged drought evidently spells a dark year ahead for farmers in the Great Plains states.

The bread and meat basket of the United States is dry— too dry for crops, too dry for livestock— too dry for livestock— from the cattle lands of Texas through the wheat plains of Kansas and Oklahoma to Colorado and Nebraska.

Farmer and agriculture expert alike say this is the worst dry spell in many years. Even if moisture were to come, it would be too late in most cases for winter wheat and grain pasture.

To have any winter wheat crop, farmers must have rain—and rain —lots of it— before Nov. 15. After that there's little hope.

Wheat isn't the only whole story. Cattle are being sold for slaughter for lack of grass and waterfilled ponds.

Texas, the last measurable rain was on Oct. 15 Some sections have had no rain since July 1.

Louis P. Merrill, regional director of soil conservation for Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana says there is no improvement in the four states.

Many cities in Texas have water restrictions.

Kansas state and federal department of agriculture made moisture tests in the soil and still found penetration to a depth of 33.1 inches, the general showing since 1940.

A dangerous by-product of dry land is soil blowing in storms.

Thousands of acres are being destroyed by the wind in forest fires. States of emergency have been declared in some areas to control outdoor fires.

Ontario, N.Y. State Will Share Cost Of $400 Million

Decision Commits Canada To Navigational Plan Alone

MONTREAL (CP) —The International Joint Commission today announced approval of a $400,000,000 power project under the St. Lawrence seaway and hydro plan.

The Canada-United States power project involving the Ontario government and possibly the New York State power authority is part of the $700,000,000 seaway and hydro development.

Application to go ahead with the power phase of the seaway project was made jointly to the International Commission by Canada and the United States.

Ont. Govt. Agreed

The Ontario government will act as Canada's agent in the 2,200,000 horsepower project while the New York State power authority is expected to be the U.S. government agency.

Announcement of approval for the power project followed closed executive sessions of the commission yesterday and today and earlier hearings in Canada and the U.S.

The announcement was made by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton and A. G. Slaight, respectively Canadian and United States co-chairmen of the commission.

Shares Cost

Under the hydro plan, as approved, the Ontario and New York State governments would share equally the $400,000,000 cost of development of the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River. They would also share power production equally.

Approval of the power phase by the commission left the Canadian government committee free to undertake alone the $300,000,000 St. Lawrence navigational plan.

Aim of the navigational plan is to provide a 27-foot waterway for ocean-going ships from Montreal to Lake Erie.

The United States Congress has turned down proposals for a joint seaway undertaking.

COMMITTEE WANTS REMOVAL OF METER NEAR WEIGH SCALES

Movement of trucks in and out of the weigh scales has caused traffic congestion at this point and the above move was recommended in an effort to alleviate some of the trouble. The parking mendation came as result of a request from the weights and measures inspector.

Indigent Patients May be Moved To County Home

Removal of indigent patients from the Belleville General Hospital as a means of providing additional accommodation for other patients, was discussed at a meeting of the city council social services and welfare committee held recently.

Kenneth Box, superintendent at St. John's Ambulance attended at the meeting. It was suggested that indigent patients at the hospital be removed to the county home or to nursing homes. This, it was felt, would provide more hospital beds and cut the cost to the hospital and to the city.

George Whitman, welfare administrator for the city, reported that out of the city's allotment of 50 beds at the county home only some of the beds are occupied by city people. The county was using quite a few beds, it admitted. It was stated.

It was decided that Committee Chairman, Alderman Bruce Smith, and the welfare officer, would interview officials of the county, the intendent of the county home, regarding the city making use of all the 50 beds allotted at the county home for city use.

Another speaker to be considered," the speaker continued, "is the increasing population of the country. It is a matter of what to do with our land. We are going to get to eat within the next decade that is going to be in question, or else failure in this country would show us how little food we would have."

In his address, Mr. McLoughry lauded the work done by the two representatives of the Agricultural Committee, Don Taylor of Ameliasburg and A. C. Dalgymple of Stirling. He said, "it is a credit to the committee to have two men of the calibre of these two, working as representatives."

Warden Lee Grills Lauded By County Council at Banquet Held at Masonic Temple

Hastings county council paid tribute to their 1952 Warden Lee Grills, Tuesday evening, when the annual warden's banquet was held at the Masonic Temple. Close to 200 county officials and their wives, together with special guests enjoyed a turkey banquet with all the trimmings served by the ladies' of Alkens' Church in Sidney township.

It was the largest turnout at a warden's banquet seen in Hastings in many years, and the many fin. attributes heard by various speakers attested to the popularity of the current county council head. Guest speaker for the evening was Rev. W. E. Young, padre at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. Chairman for the evening was Reeve Ed. Burgess, county clerk-treasurer.

Tribute Paid

Opening the warden's banquet "one of the biggest events in my life," Reeve Ed. Reid paid tribute to members of county council who, he said, have been among the most sound administrators of county business. He referred to the increased cost of living and prices and the increased taxes this year. He noted that as an alarming trend, but one which could not be avoided.

Warden Grills referred to the good relations existing between the county and the city and said this was a good thing. "So much more can be done when all work together," he said.

Member of Sidney township council, with their wives, attended the banquet in a body. Col. Homer Vandervoort, deputy reeve of Sidney township, and former county warden, also spoke briefly.

Sometimes Unjustly Criticized

As guest speaker Rev. Young spoke on the topic "Conserving Canadian Values" and paid special tribute to municipal office holders, who he said were often unjustly criticized.

"No clean of men are as unjustly criticized as are politicians," he said. He termed their service as public men "a giving of self for the good of the nation and of the world."

Referring to the title of his talk Mr. Young said there were three things in life which a nation had to conserve. These were soil, and soul, all three as important as the three sides of a triangle.

In each he said there was the same element of erosion which tended to destroy and wear away.

Dealing first with soil the speaker said that everything came from the land. Thirty nine percent of all industry he said, as agriculture was dependent on the products of the soil.

The necessity of soil conservation was then stressed. He said that already nearly all the usable soil in the world was being cultivated. At the present time there were 20 million more mouths to feed each year and that each acre of the world's population was already starving.

A Crazy World

"This is a crazy world when in the Western Hemisphere people have more than they can eat, while on the other side of the world people are starving. The problem of all," he said.

He went on to say that Ontario and Canada was going much to conserve its soil but there was still much to do. "It is more than a problem for the farmer—it is a problem for all," he said.

Dealing with self, Mr. Young stressed the importance of self to individual. In democratic countries the individual was a unit and not merely as in a machine. This was because of freedom. Everything rested on the individual's self and his freedom.

Freedom Is Faith

But the spiritual values of life should not be forgotten, the speaker said that freedom and religion had always been closely related.

"The keyword of the future is faith", Mr. Young said. "We must face the future with faith, courage and confidence in God, in ourselves, our fellowmen and in God."

Reeve Charles Buskard of Deseronto village introduced the guest speaker. Reeve Harry Tillcock of Madoc village expressed the thanks to the ladies of Alkens' Church choir. Mrs. Grills was presented with roses by Mrs. Kenneth Box.

Entertainment was provided by Mr. Countryman, Alfred Evans, Dalton Kaye, Jack Todds and Dick Brettingham, local barbershop singers. Harley Tillcock offered several accordion selections. Jimmy Curradi presided at the piano.

At the evening session, "Making the most of the whole year," and "The Bible in the Public chool." All addresses were outstanding and thought provoking.

The Reverend Howard Beare had charge of the worship portion at the afternoon session, and Reverend Lawrence Hall, of Stirling, was in charge of the evening service.

Reverend Beare, Reverend Hall and Reverend Foster were entertained at the home of Mrs. Ernest Hall, Stirling, during their visit.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices continued firm in early afternoon stock market trading.

Industrials led the advance with a gain of more than a point on the exchange's index while golds continued to slip slowly as profit-taking skimmed yesterday's gains.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 641,600 shares—the smallest three-hour volume in months. Triad, a western oil, moved about 25,000 shares for a gain of about four cents.

Utilities and banks advanced and construction, base metals and miscellaneous issues also gained. Textiles and retail stores weakened.

Senior golds gained as McIntyre gained two cents and 12 in the first three hours but junior producers lost strength after a mixed morning. Prosperity showed a narrow list of small gains and losses. Newlund was finally busy for a loss of pennies but Conwest gained. Holding companies held firm.

Western oils recorded a good majority of gains ranging to 30 cents while losers rarely topped 10 cents. Canada Southern led the upward trend.

Base Metals resisted the downward trend of higher-priced issues to show gains in most issues. East Rim, Caslar and United Asbestos gained.

News of Trenton Soldier Reported Missing in Action

TRENTON, (Special) — A former Trenton boy has been reported missing in action in Korea.

On Monday, Barbara Griffiths, young wife of Private George Griffiths, 21, received an official telegram at her home at R.R. 1, Brighton on the Brighton to Campbellford highway. Her husband, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Griffiths, of R.R. 1, Brighton, was fighting with the First Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment. He was a corporal with the Pay Corps in Canada, and reverted to private and transferred to go to the front. He has been in the army over two years.

His brother, Verdon, after spending 13 months with the R.C.M.A., in the Pacific theatre, returned home two months ago.

The George Griffiths have no family.

Private George Griffiths was born in Trenton, moving to north of Brighton with his parents 12 years ago.

FRACTURES COLLAR BONE

While playing with a friend at St. Peter's school yesterday, Kathleen Wood, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanford Wood, West Street, fell heavily and suffered a broken collar bone on the left side. She was rushed to Trenton Memorial Hospital where an X-ray examination revealed the break. She is at home resting comfortably under the care of Dr. C. W. Telfer.

Mayor Couch Undecided About Contesting Office

Trenton (Special) — Mayor Kenneth Couch six times Mayor of Trenton said today that if he did decide to run for office this year it would be because he had unfinished jobs to finish in 1953. "I wouldn't like to pass them up now that they've gone this far," he said.

Mayor Couch will not commit himself at the present but promised to make a statement by the end of the week. "There are reasons why I shouldn't run and there are reasons why I should run," he said.

At the present time there is only one former councillor straining at the starting line in the local political race. He is Councillor Cliff Gunter, chairman of the sanitation department, who ran well last year on his first try. He polled a healthy vote agreeing out some of the old timers.

Nominations will be recorded November 31 which falls on a Friday with the election set for Monday, December 1. In this year's election the colored ballot system will be tested for the first time. The usual cost of running the election $1,300 is not expected to increase.

Those who take pride in making election predictions look for a number of dark horses to enter the field. One large property holder and retired business man calls for life return of a former council member who knows the town and its affairs inside and out.

While present councillors are prone to declare themselves, there are a lot of voters wondering about ex-councillor Ross Burtt who, tendered his resignation earlier this year following differences of opinion with the town engineer. Some say Mr. Burtt will try for mayor again. Some say he'll seek re-election to council. Some say he is satisfied being an ordinary citizen out of public life.

Relaying members of council who have not expressed their intentions include: Chairman of Finance Charles Allore, Norman Banfield, Reg. Armstrong and Claude Graham.

THE DREADED MAU MAU

For some days now our headlines have been noting the terrorist activities of the Mau Mau in Kenya and the extraordinary efforts the British government has taken to stamp them out. This secret society of African blacks is dedicated to ridding their native land of all whites. Since early this summer the deaths of 45 persons have been attributed to its members.

This week, as the colonial governor intensified the campaign to cope with the dreaded Mau Mau by wholesale arrests and the imposition of a virtual state of martial law in Kenya, it was apparent that the unrest there is due to more than the determination of the Mau Mau to eliminate the whites. The governor has announced that an extensive program of welfare and improvement of conditions for the natives is to be undertaken.

As some writers familiar with conditions there have suggested earlier, it is not the Mau Mau which represents the biggest threat to British interests in Kenya but rather a political movement among the native Africans known to have no direct alliance with the terrorists but might be capable of rousing the natives to civil war. While the dreaded Mau Mau have captured the headlines by their horrifying atrocities, the more dreadful menace to restore order and peace in Kenya have been directed as well against the politically powerful Kenya African Union.

A wide roundup carried out a few days ago included a number of native newspaper editors and other native leaders. Among them was a remarkable man called Kenyatta, who is not known to be a member of the Mau Mau but is regarded as more dangerous because of his influence in the Union.

The Kenya African Union has three distinct factions. Kenyatta is the leader of the extremists who advocate immediate self-government for the natives. A moderate radical faction is led by Eliud Mathu, the first African to have become a member of the Kenya Executive Council, which, with the governor, administers the affairs of the colony. A third faction is conservative and supports the administration.

Kenyatta, however, is the most important man in the Union because of his tremendous popularity with the mass of the natives. He is a great orator and has a fine if extraordinary intelligent and well educated. He has a white wife and a son in London. He studied anthropology there and has written a remarkable study of his own tribe. He returned to Kenya in 1946 and is the man most responsible for the building up of the K.A.U.

Some European observers insist that Kenyatta has no association with the Mau Mau but see the possibility that the K.A.U. might be pushed into an alliance with the terrorist society. Perhaps in the reforms announced this week a worthwhile step has been taken to meet some of the ills which aggrieve the natives in Kenya but it is more unlikely that the arrest of their popular idol will do much to settle the unrest which has been provoked.

NO DETERRENT

With evident dissatisfaction the Windsor Star notes that, with perhaps a few major exceptions, it won't be long until all the war criminals in Germany have been set free.

From time to time over the last two or three years we read about the more important members of the Nazi regime being given their freedom. Now most of the lesser Nazis have been released we have no way of knowing. It becomes rather obvious that the war crimes trials have become a farce so far as they were intended to set an example to the world that might arrive as a deterrent to others who, at another time, might be tempted to commit outrages of the kind that were trade marks of Nazi brutality.

Certainly there has been no indication that even the severity with which the few were treated has been any deterrent. The Russians, for instance, started their campaign of horrors upon the Czechs and the communist terror of eastern Europe achieved power. The countless hundreds of thousands that have since been sent to slow deaths in Red slave labor camps, the great numbers of war prisoners who have disappeared, are still unaccounted for, will present a record as black and as bestial as any charged against the Hitler regime.

DAILY NUISANCE

Householders some day may rise as an army and protest against the daily nuisance of door-bell ringers; small children selling tickets, tramps seeking handouts, peddlers selling goods and many others. No wonder most people are closing in their verandahs. — (St. Thomas Times-Journal).

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1952, Edgar A. Guest)

THE INEVITABLE

This comes to all fathers: the time when his son
Will a bicycle want in the day
And a year or two later he'll ask for a car
And hope that the answer will say
For a boy is a boy, and a gun and a bike
Are two of the things it's his nature to like.

You may hope that he won't but he probably will
For these mean a lot to a lad
And never he'll give up his pleading until

The pride of them both can be had.
And the day will arrive, unaware though you are,
When he'll tell his old chevalier to take out the car.

These are certain to happen. So fathers, be wise.
To strangers don't give up your sons.
You the time comes to instruct and advise
Against the dangers of bikes and of guns.
And you be the ones when you buy will insist
When they ask for the car, who will teach them to drive.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

Oct. 29th., 1922

Mrs. Robert Hope, who is leaving shortly to reside in Lindsay, was presented with a pair of lovely silver bud vases by the Women of the Moose in which organization she has been a popular member.

At Queen Alexandra School yesterday the presentation of the St. Julian Chapter IODE prize to the student attaining second highest standing in the entrance examinations to the high school was made to the winner Miss Vera Mason, who has been left motherless with her parents to reside in St. Catharines.

Mr. Grant W. Proctor, for some time with the Bell Telephone Company in Kingston, has been appointed manager of the Bell Telephone Company in this city and district. He succeeds Mr. James A. Coburn, who retires shortly after 44 years service with the company 13 years of which he spent in this city.

Messrs. William and Arthur Waudby and Harry Smith for several residents of this city sailed recently from Montreal on the Empress of Scotland for Bedford for their homes in England.

Oct. 29th., 1922

At a meeting of the city council the question of submitting a by-law to the electors with regard to the appointing of a city manager was discussed at some length and the motion when presented was defeated. The motion was moved by Ald. McCreary and seconded by Ald. Ostrom. Ald. Greenlee was the only member to vote in favor of the motion, in addition to the mover and seconder. Ald. Donohue, French, Foster and Thompson voted against the proposal.

At a meeting of the Belleville rifle association the following officers were elected: president, Dr. Conner; vice president, Dr. Faulkner; secretary, Dr. Hall.

People Are Much Like Nations

(Calgary Herald)

Being interested in what other nations think of us is a very human trait, which follows a fairly well-defined course.

It is of minor importance, though often stoutly denied, in childhood. During adolescence it is of acute importance and consequence. In middle maturity, usually under pressure of bloodied assessment the opinion of others in regard to yourself still counts — but not a high value it for no other reason than that success and social success are peculiarly sensitive thereto. In full maturity, when total confidence has been attained or total resignation accepted, what people think or feel about others think; in fact, they couldn't care less.

What is true of people is, to a large extent, also true of nations. Russia we suppose is pretty much resigned to the fact that nobody likes Ilke her, and can therefore pursue her policies with little difference to public opinion.

In her hey-day, Britain didn't worry over much what she did what she thought was best, and it people still think so. Those days are grevy. The United States, big and mighty and still young, tries very hard to be liked, and now unfortunately gets herself disliked as well as well. Canada, at the tail end of adolescence is extremely touchy upon middle maturity, cares a good deal what others think of her, but is not bothered either way. Her attitude is simply "I'm me."

Mr. Henry Hoorman of the old established family of Thurlow township has purchased the fine residence of Mr. F. S. Rockwell on Oliver Street and will take up residence in the city shortly.

A choral club under the direction of Mr. F. S. Rockwell has been organized in connection with the Tabernacle Church.

The annual inspection of the 15th Battalion A.L.I. took place on the hospital lot, northeast corner of Church Street and Victoria Avenue, in order to avoid the crowds upon the parade, the battalion marched upon the Bridge Street and Front Street electric cars, which were, however, enough mud encountered on Victoria Avenue for all practical purposes. The inspecting officer was Lieut. Col. Hemsling. Following are the officers and companies: Lieut. Col. J. Tait Halliwell, Major W. Bonisteel Fowler and Capt. and Adjutant,

Cent a Day for Year from All Citizens Would Put Fund Over Top

J. J. Trudeau, chairman of the Belleville Community Chest, pointed out today "that if every individual visited by a Chest campaigner gave less than 1 cent a day for a year, the goal of $24,500 would be reached.

"Such an insignificant amount would not upset the family budget of almost any citizen in Belleville," said general canvass chairman P.C. McGuire," and it would provide the necessary funds to carry out the services at the six member organizations.

"I think our friends should understand that none of the six agencies in the Chest, is entirely supported by funds raised in the campaign and each organization attempts to be as self-supporting as possible. However, they must appeal to the general public for interest and support to carry on their services which are very definitely essential to the total welfare of our city."

Weddings

BRADFORD—MOORE

White baby mums and ferns formed a lovely background in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, on Saturday, October 11th, at 10:00 a.m. when the Very Rev. Dean Garvin united in marriage Catherine Ellen Moore, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore, to John Frederic Bradford also of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Bradford.

Miss Dorothy Grassy furnished the wedding music and accompanied the soloist Mr. Ted Morin, of Ottawa, who sang, "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother", "Ave Maria", and "Panis Angelicus".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a charming gown or white silk velvet fashioned with strapless, fitted bodice and matching jacket with mandarin collar and long sheath-like sleeves ending in V-points over the wrists. The skirt was of floor-length and fell in graceful folds. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was caught to a matching velvet shell cap trimmed with seed pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of white carnations tied with white satin bows.

Mrs. Murray LeClair, of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, and Miss Anna Moore, of Montreal, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Both were gowned alike in royal blue velvet gowns similar to that of the bride, with short cap sleeves. They wore matching hats, matching velvet headdresses and carried hand bouquets of bronze yellow carnations.

Mr. William Doyle, of Bayside, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. John Moore, of North Bay, and Mr. Owen Mohler, of Belleville, brothers of the bride, acted as ushers.

At the reception, which was held at Glidden Acre Inn, Sidney Road, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a black silk ensemble, with black accessories, and red corsage. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, gowned in navy blue crepe with insets of Chantilly lace, matching accessories, and corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to Quebec and the New England States, the bride chose a silk accordion pleated red and black dress, with matching accessories and black seal jacket and corsage of red carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Bradford will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Montreal, Ottawa, New York City, Toronto, North Bay, Kingston, Madoc and Picton.

Capable Acting and Direction Seen in Belleville Theatre Guild's Presentation of 'Rebecca'

(By LINTON D. READ)

Standing Room Only! as a capacity audience of local drama lovers assembled to see the first three-act production of the Belleville Theatre Guild in the Collegiate auditorium last evening. A happy combination of capable direction, enthusiastic acting, and efficient behind-the-scenes cooperation rendered this ambitious production worthy of high commendation.

From the opening musical theme and spoken prologue (read loudly enough, read by someone other than the heroine) through to the effective closing scene the performance proved thoroughly satisfying if occasionally woodly and slow moving. Miss du Maurier's adaptation of her well-known novel "Rebecca" proved a real challenge to the talents of a group who previously had excelled in one-act presentations only. Certainly this initial success should encourage them to even finer performances.

Well-balanced Cast

When the curtain rose with incredible and laudable punctuality it heralded the appearance of an extremely well-balanced cast. Perhaps the two most convincing of all were Gladys Simpson as the malevolent housekeeper, Mrs. Danvers, unaccountamingly loyal to the spirit of her dead mistress and Ted Schwab as the vicious and thorough-going cad, Jack Favell. While Mrs. Simpson seemed at first too obviously malicious and almost "sunnish" in appearance, her excellent voice control and frecingly cold demeanour earned her high praise. Mr. Schwab became so provokingly obnoxious at times as to tempt the audience to him him as the villain in a melodrama.

Nicki Thomas and Bruce Ruggles as Beatrice and Giles Lacy provided several scenes of high comedy. One could readily forgive Mrs. Thomas for possessing the only English accent in the cast in admiring her uninhibited and wholly enjoyable acting. Mr. Ruggles served as a splendid foil for his stage wife and on occasion provided amusing, if stagnant merriment. On this subject one might question the wisdom of allowing a heavy drama to deteriorate too quickly and too often into a slapstick farce.

Leads Capably Handled

Syl Quinn and Vera Thompson as the leads in the play had very difficult roles to fill. They did a good job. If Mr. Quinn lacked the polish and maturity of Maxim de Winter, English country gentleman of the 1930's, his passionate sincerity and often moving interpretation compensated in great measure. Occasionally too much sobbing and hysterics were present in his voice yet his long "confession" monologue was well done. Mrs. Thompson, the pretty, inexperienced, young Mrs. de Winter suffered from overly-juvenile costuming yet interpreted her part so naturally and convincingly capable of producing, may we see more, in the near future, under any physical conditions, or of any length they see fit.

Following is a list of the non-acting persons connected with last evening's performance:

Mrs. De Winter's Understudy—Miriam Bishop.

Beatrice Lacy's Understudy—Joy Wentscott.

Thirty-Fifth Wedding Anniversary Honored By Girlhood Friend

A happy event took place on Saturday evening, when Mrs. H. Pickard, Alexander Street, entertained at dinner in honor of her girlhood friend, Mrs. Roy Atyeo and Mr. Atyeo, who were celebrating the 35th anniversary of their marriage.

The table was charmingly appointed with a lovely white linen cloth having a border of pastel-tinted fruits, centred with a silver combination candelabra and flower holder containing yellow 'mums and Sweetheart roses and tall, white candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Atyeo were the recipients of several lovely gifts and many cards of congratulation wishing them much happiness in the years that lie ahead and many more anniversaries together.

Mrs. I. Sills Reaches 82nd Milestone

A number of friends gathered on Friday evening at 278 Front Street, to celebrate the 82nd birthday of Mrs. I. Sills, and to wish her many more happy anniversaries.

Mrs. Sills was the recipient of many lovely gifts as well as the good wishes of all present.

The evening was spent in a social time, following which dainty refreshments were served, featuring a beautifully decorated birthday cake.

Congratulations and wishes of the citizens of the city are added to those of the immediate friends for many more such happy get-togethers.

'Ont. Training Schools, Reformatories,' Topic At Tabernacle Y.W.G.

The October meeting of the Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle United Church was held at Mrs. Archibald's home on Dufferin Avenue and the topic of the evening's discussion was "The training schools and reformatories in Ontario."

Miss Hazel Thompson and Mrs. A. Wells gave a most comprehensive outline of the changes made by the Ontario Department of Reform following the recommendations made by the Archambault Royal Commission of 1938.

Due to the war, these changes were slow in coming, but since 1947 there have been great strides made in the rehabilitation of these offenders, from the examination and classification at the beginning of their term, where they will get the best education for living, and working for a living, trained personnel, as well as crafts for hours of leisure.

Outdoor Function

Miss Thompson outlined the personnel and the function of each branch of the work of administering the reform program, from the medical examination and psychological testing to accumulate accurate information about each inmate as they are received at the reception wing to classify them for educational and vocational training. The training program provides for constructive activities for all hours of the day, and evening. Academic school grades 1 to 8 are taught at skilled trades and ten semi-skilled avocations. All trade credits are given at time of discharge, to cut down on apprenticeship time.

Skills and patterns of play are the physical training program, and a library of 8,000 is at their disposal.

Miss Thompson told about her visit, this past summer, with a group of teachers, to the Brampton Reformatory, where the inmates are in the age group of 16-25 years. The teachers were met by the Gentlemen Executive, who had the trusties who were assigned one trustie to two teachers, to make the tour of inspection, through carpentry and paint shops, welding, motor mechanics and sheet metal shop, a large recreational hall and the chapel for religious services and lastly the dining hall where afternoon tea was served.

Greatly Impressed

The teachers were all greatly impressed by the talents exhibited by their guide, who had done oil painting as a hobby after work hours, and had been studying music as well.

Mrs. Wells told about the program of training in the reformatory schools for girls and boys under 16 years of age, the majority of whom are sent from juvenile courts. The fact that a child is trouble is first recognized, and every facility is at the disposal of the trained staff, to help the children to become healthy minded and physically fit young people, ready to take their places in business and society when they graduate.

Also present at the meeting were Rev. F. Whittington and Mrs. Whittington; Mr. Whittington being the Protestant Chaplain at Kingston Penitentiary, was able to give a most enlightening account of life inside the prison, and the changes which have been instituted toward more humane treatment, which in turn has developed more trust between prisoner and officer, a different atmosphere entirely. Altogether, it was an educational, as well as a most enjoyable evening.

Neighbors Celebrate Joint Birthdays

Two neighbors, Mrs. Lina Asselstine and Mrs. Lisa Bird, who were born on the same day, and who bear the same given name and have the same day of their birth, celebrated this unique event on Saturday evening at the home of the former, 30 Victoria Avenue, with about 20 guests present.

A lovely birthday cake graced the exquisite Italian lace cloth, while the spacious rooms were adorned with gladioli in shades of red, white and pink.

The evening was spent in the appreciation of music played on different instruments, and in dancing which climaxed a most enjoyable occasion.

Club Activities

T'S MENETTES CLUB

On Tuesday evening, the T's Menettes Club met at the Y.M.C.A. The president, Mrs. F. R. Clarke, presided over the meeting. A musical cake plate which plays "Happy Birthday" was on display. This cake plate is to be carried out to members and their friends for a small fee. Final arrangements were made for the card and games party to be held early in November.

After the business portion was completed, Mrs. F. R. Clarke, a representative of a well-known cosmetic company, gave a talk on cosmetics and displayed her wares.

Refreshments were then served by the hostesses for the evening, Mrs. Rose Booth, Mrs. Gerald Hyde, Mrs. M. Moffatt and Mrs. George Wonnacott.

75.16 Per Cent of Daily Papers In U.S. Supporting Eisenhower With Stevenson Getting 15.47

By E. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—The President was not under the collar. He had just returned home after a strenuous give-'em-hell campaign tour on behalf of Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for president of the United States. The President was tired, tired and out of sorts.

Hearing Mr. Truman's exaggeration late one week - end, therefore, was understandable, when, in an off-the-cuff train-platform address to a crowd in Washington, he took a crack at United States news papers. He asserted:

"They're against us a hundred per cent and they're trying to make everything we do appear wrong. I'm not sure yet and I'm not through till the fourth of November."

Most Support Ike

The President wasn't quite correct. As at now, 75.16 per cent of the daily newspapers in the country support Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the man the President hopes to put into the White House. Supporting Stevenson, Illinois Governor who has leaped into national prominence, is 15.47 per cent of the press. The remainder support neither candidate.

Still, that's the greatest editorial support any presidential candidate has had in living memory. It represents 93.25 per cent of national circulation, Papers supporting Stevenson have had 8.34 per cent of the circulation.

Most newspapers draw a line between editorial opinion and news coverage. Stevenson is given fair treatment in the news columns. The same couldn't be said in the controversial third-term campaign of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt when news-columns in some opposition papers touched a low point never before reached in a 20th Century U.S. election.

The percentages of press support in the last five presidential elections:

	Rep.	Dem.
1932	55.5	30.7
1936	60.4	34.5
1940	68.3	20.1
1944	80.1	20.0
1948	65.1	15.9

On the whole, press coverage in this hard-fought, often bitter, campaign has been objective. Reporters covering both candidates express personal opinions in their reports. That hasn't always been the case in past campaigns.

Partisanship Charged

One charge of "partisanship" in news presentation has received wide publicity. That was a statement by 94 American authors alleging that 22 papers singled out for criticism did not present the campaign news fairly in their news columns. A number of papers issued statements denying the allegations.

The authors' statement did not specify the candidate the signers said was being slighted, but four of the authors—John Steinbeck, John Hersey, Herman Wouk and Howard Aiken—said at a press conference that most newspapers are "playing down" Stevenson and favoring Eisenhower. The four said they personally are for Stevenson.

The four authors said the conclusions of the statement were based on samplings from newspapers over a one-week period in seven "doubtful" states: Ohio, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania and California.

'Facts Cited'

The authors said the papers were not free of one or more of the following faults:

(1) Slanted writing of news stories; (2) Prejudiced use of photographs; (3) Unfavorable placement of stories concerning Democrats; (4) Volume of coverage of Democratic news; (5) Inadequate general coverage of the campaign as a whole; (6) Omission of stories favoring Democrats; (7) Use of headlines reflecting meaning of stories inaccurately.

Typical of the newspapers' rejoinders was that of Don Weaver, editor of the Columbus Citizen, which backs Eisenhower:

"I doubt if the 94 authors have read the Citizen consistently all through the campaign. . . We are meticulous to see that coverage is equal."

Editors at a recent meeting of directors of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington said the 1952 campaign has brought more pressure on the press than any other pre-election news coverage. James S. Pope, executive editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, which supports Stevenson, said:

"I have become convinced of one thing: Readers cannot judge the objectivity of a newspaper in a presidential campaign for the simple reason that they cannot read objectively. Most of them do not want objectivity—they want their side favored."

Special Type

Problems other than those of news objectivity faced newspapers in this hard-fought election. One was how to get the 10-letter name "Eisenhower" into a one-column heading with another word to come with good topography. To meet this, the New York Times created a special type for the word "Eisenhower." Called "Latin Condensed," it literally squeezes Eisenhower into a column headline.

"Stevenson," nine letters, just fits in regular type.

MARMORA

I. O. D. E. Chapter Holds Meeting

Marmora—Marmora Chapter I.O.D.E. met in the Masonic hall recently for the regular monthly meeting. Mrs. William Regan, the Regent presided over a fair attendance of members. The meeting opened in the customary manner with Mrs. K. English discharging the duties of standard bearer.

The financial statement presented by Miss Miriam Savage, revealed finances to be in a good condition. Subsequently sums of money were devoted to various funds of the order. A 'thank-you' letter was read from a member. Several provincial circulars were read and dealt with.

Blue Nose Medal Donated

It was mentioned that Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Langford, of Detroit, had donated a fine model of the Blue Nose and that a drawing would be held at a future date in connection therewith to augment the funds of the order.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served.

Sgt. Richardson Who Quit Officers' Course to Join Unit, Praised for Handling Patrol

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE CANADIANS IN KOREA (CP)—The name on everybody's lips when the patrol was over was that of 'Tiger' leader—25-year-old Sgt. John H. Richardson of Victoria.

Richardson, who quit an officers' training course to come to Korea with his unit, fought off one attack, suffered five wounds, fought off a second attack, directed the withdrawal, helped two casualties part of the way and guided artillery and mortar fire being sent down to help the operation. The 26-man patrol from the 1st Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, was out to catch a prisoner on the night of Oct. 15-16.

Instead, they lost two men to the Chinese—the first two Patricias listed missing in almost two years in Korea.

Hill Was Objective

Richardson's objective was the base of a 600-foot hill 2,800 yards ahead of the Patricias' liner. About 100 yards short of it he parcelled them out in two groups.

The first under Cpl. Ed Pachal of Yorkton, Sask., was a fire group to support any attack the other group might make onto the objective. Richardson's party was about 100 yards away from Pachal's.

Leaving L/Cpl. William E. Johnstone of Westville, N.S., in charge of the second party, Richardson went ahead with Sgt. Rhodes Prentice of Toronto, the sniper sergeant, and Cpl. Don Hastings of Calgary, one of Prentice's snipers.

The trio established that Chinese were working right on their objective and withdrew 100 yards to Johnstone's position, where Richardson radioed fire orders.

At once he had a fight on his hands.

At Close Quarters

Pte. C. H. Chute of Bear River, N.S., said:

"When I first saw them there were seven, and they were only six or seven feet away." Chute said he felled them all with his Bren gun.

The Chinese weren't discovered until they were right in among the Canadians, shooting low.

Richardson, Hastings, Prentice, Johnstone and the signaller—Pte. F. M. Holloway of Vancouver—were wounded.

The surprised Canadians fought back grimly. The radio set on Holloway's back probably saved his life. It was riddled by machine-gun bullets—putting the group out of communication with headquarters.

Richardson organized a withdrawal, shouting directions to Pachal's fire group. Chinese bullets laced the 100 yards between the groups, preventing them getting together.

Just as the withdrawal was starting the Chinese launched their second assault, mainly with grenades. It, too, was beaten off.

But Richardson, who had been supporting Prentice on one side and Hastings on the other, was separated from them by the blast of a concussion grenade.

Groping in the darkness, he found Prentice and drew him aside. He could not find Hastings. Nor could the other men find Johnstone, who had been severely injured.

Made Thorough Search

Richardson held up the withdrawal while the ground was searched thoroughly and finally ordered the men back.

It was a laborious process. Nine were wounded, some severely, and they had to improvise stretchers. About 800 yards back they joined forces with Pachal's men.

Hastings and Johnstone are both listed as missing.

Hastings is thought to be alive. Johnstone, however, was more severely wounded, and Pte. Reo Pilon of Duck Lake, Sask., said he doubted that Johnstone lived.

Others wounded that night were Pres. George L. Mark of Carrot River, Sask., Fred E. Waugh of Woodstock, Ont., G. E. McEachen of Brandon, Man., and T. P. Nolan of Brandon.

FARM DAMAGED

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—A grass fire Monday damaged the farm of President Truman. The blaze came within 200 feet of the Truman home before it was put out by two of the President's nephews, Gilbert and Harry Truman.

U.S. Restrictions On Dairy Products Under Heavy Fire

GENEVA, Switzerland (Reuters) —United States' import restrictions on dairy products came under heavy fire yesterday at the seventh session of the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade.

Five countries — Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Denmark and Holland — threatened reprisals against the U.S. for what they called "discriminatory" import regulations in the Defence Products Act.

"In reply, American delegate Raymond Vernon pledged to seek "complete elimination" of the restrictions, which protect U.S. dairy farmers from foreign competition.

H. Van Blankenstein, representing Holland, asked for authorization to cut Dutch imports of U.S. flour next year to 57,000 metric tons.

Canadian delegate C. Isbister called the Dutch request for reprisals "reasonable and justified." He said Canada has not decided on retaliatory measures against the U.S. at the present time, but "my government (reserves) all of its right. . .with respect to possible compensatory action in the future."

New Zealand delegate K. J. Fyfes said that because of the U.S. law New Zealand is losing potential dollar earnings amounting to $14,000,000 a year.

Convicts Use Fog to Cover Escape Attempt

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—Six desperate convicts used fog as a cover for an attempt to escape from Oregon late prison early yesterday but ran into two obstacles: a line of armed guards on the wall and a gate that wouldn't break.

Three of the six are convicted murderers.

Two convicts suffered flesh wounds when guards opened fire. Five guards, nabbed and tied up when they went outside the segregation unit to see what was up, were not hurt.

Kidnapping Wave Believed Solved By Man's Arrest

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday announced the arrest of Charles Edward Hopkins, 37, in connection with a wave of kidnappings, abductions, assaults and armed robberies in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee last week.

Robert Wall, Jr., special agent in charge of the Miami F.B.I. office, said Hopkins was recognized as he left the post office building in Jacksonville, Fla., and was arrested by an F.B.I. agent.

Hopkins is the second person arrested in connection with the kidnapping of 20 persons in three states. Virgil Lemay, 35, was arrested Saturday in Nashville, Tenn. He said the other two members of the group had forced him to take part in their operations. Still at large is James Francis Hill, 29, Florida ex-convict.

Bevan's Band Obeys Labor Party Ultimatum

LONDON (Reuters) — Aneurin Bevan's tight little band of left-wingers yesterday obeyed a Labor party ultimatum to dissolve their group, but refused to accept a muzzle for their individual political opinions.

They voted at a 30-minute meeting to disband rather than face possible expulsion from the party. Labor chief Clement Attlee delivered the ultimatum last Thursday after Labor members of Parliament voted 138 to 82 for his moderate policies.

The Bevanites made no announcement after their session. Their position, they said, will be announced tonight in the magazine Weekly Tribune.

But quarters close to Bevan said the truce is temporary. They said they will still campaign for the right of labor members to meet for the purpose of discussing policy. These sources said dissolution of the group will in no way lessen the need for propagating their views both within Parliament and through the country.

Former American Army Sergeant Branded as Traitor

NEW YORK (AP)—The U.S. government yesterday branded a former American army sergeant a traitor who welcomed the Japanese enemy to Corregidor with the words: "I am at your service."

However, the defence described the veteran, John David Provoo, Alefr peacetime spoiler mcae as as a patriotic American prisoner of war, forced in pain of death to do the bidding of the Japanese.

Provoo is on trial for his life on 12 counts of treason, rowing out of his Second World War imprisonment by the Japanese.

After welcoming the Japanese the government said, Provoo donned the robes of a Buddhist priest and set about betraying his American fellow-captives—one of them Capt. Burton C. Thomson, to death.

Hints Twice-a-Day Mail Delivery in Residential Areas Heard by Liberal Federation

OTTAWA (CP)—Hints that twice-a-day mail delivery will be restored in residential areas of Canadian cities where it was cut off several months ago were heard here Tuesday at a gathering of top Liberal Party leaders. The possibility of tax reductions was also raised.

The advisory council of the National Liberal Federation recommended restoration as soon as possible "of more complete postal service in urban communities."

The subject was mentioned again by Prime Minister St. Laurent, speaking at a banquet closing the two-day annual meeting of the 225-member council—high command of the Liberal Party.

The two hints bolstered persistent reports here that the twice-a-day delivery would be resumed in big-city residential districts.

Seen Tax Reductions

Tax reductions, Mr. St. Laurent said, are possible.

But he said that because of the troubled state of the world "it would not be honest to hold out any too easy hopes for any too great reductions at this time."

The government didn't pretend it could "buy our national security in a bargain basement." But with continued increases in national production and strict control on expenditures "some relief should be possible—and, of course, as and when the danger of war is reduced there will be room for substantial improvement."

One resolution passed at the council's closing session ran counter to government policy on private television stations. It asked for "the development of television in Canada by private enterprise along with the CBC."

Delegates at the closed session said it was adopted over the objections of Revenue Minister McCann, through whom the CBC reports to Parliament. In the debate the Minister set out the government's view that no private television licences should be issued until the CBC has set up stations in key points.

The resolution favoring private broadcasters was proposed by C. Irving Keith of Winnipeg, one of the National Liberal Federation's three vice-presidents.

The conference elected Duncan K. MacTavish of Ottawa president of the federation to succeed Senator J. Gordon Fogo, who died in July. Mr. MacTavish has been president of the Federal District Commission here.

Ghosts Lurk Over Shoulder As You Walk Down Single, Dog-Legged Dirty Street

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

BARKERVILLE, B.C. (CP) They say that the day the salesman nailed the sold-drink sign to a post in Billy Barker's gold town, the graveyard heaved six inches.

It takes no more than a glance through the shattered windows of the abandoned, dilapidated Nicol Hotel to see that any soft-drink man who might have shown up here in the 1860s would have been, at the least, tossed promptly into Lightning Creek.

Though a few people still live here at the end of the Cariboo Road—most work in nearby Wells and some still shuttle the permafrost loot over your shoulder as you walk down the single, dog-legged dirt street. Over all, there is silence. Even the handful of people here seem to move noiselessly and speak in whispers.

60 Miles From Railway

To get to Barkerville from Quesnel, 347 miles north of Vancouver and present northern terminus of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, you travel 60 miles and through 24½ ghost villages—Cottonwood, where a general store built in 1865 is still in use, Wingdam, Stanley and part of Wells.

On either side of the gravel road you can see the litter of nearly 100 years of the feverish search for gold—a tumbledown shacks, shiny bones and heaps of gravel sifted from creek beds decades ago. From the creeks, the hills and mountains rise to the far wilderness horizon.

Gold was found in all these places—$60,000,000 worth of it—and it is still being dug out in small douses. Gold mining companies make the new Wells on Jack of Clubs Lake a thriving community with two hotels and a modern theatre.

Billy Barker discovered gold here in 1862. He met men who scrambled north after him split open the interior of Cariboo and a few years later the Cariboo Road was built from Yale, 130 miles east of Vancouver, to Barkerville, a distance of nearly 400 miles. It is the same road one travels today by car or bus.

Hotel Relics

Most of the buildings here have been beaten naked by the weather. Some have fallen in. Others are badly bent. In the Nicol hotel, dust-laden glasses still are perched on shelves behind the curving bar. Somebody has swiped the brass rail. Moosehead, antlers and bear-skins still adorn the cobwebbed walls.

Near the western end of the street stands St. Saviour's, a tiny, wooden Anglican church built in 1869. An ancient, pot-bellied stove sits in its centre and the vestry is papered with drawings and odd clipped from magazines long since defunct. The vestry also contains an original vacuum cleaner, operated by hand pump.

There is only one plaque in the church, whose plank floor is scrubbed clean and white. In memory of a trapper drowned long ago, the plaque says:

"He bade no one a last farewell.
"He said good-bye to none,
"The heavenly gates were opened wide,
"As loving voice said 'Come.'"

Modern Touch

Next door to the old Nicol Hotel is a latter day tavern—beer only, as in the rest of British Columbia. Billy Barker and his cohorts would probably hold their sides on spying the sign on the door: "Open 4 to 6, 7 to 11 p.m."

Ghosts of prospectors march in ranks across the graveyards overlooking the town and the rushing creek.

The weather has washed the names from most of the wooden slabs marking the graves. Many, apparently, died with their boots on. One board says John Dunn, aged 36, of Wick, Glamorganshire, South Wales, died "1 o'clock a.m. Oct. 6, 1865." One speculates: a bullet between the eyes? a knife in the back?

Though the fence around the graveyard has collapsed and in some places disappeared, a rusty sign says: "Kindly dont the grits."

You close it and tiptoe away from the ghosts of men who defied the wilderness in this still lonely place.

Soft drinks indeed!

"Like I was tellin' the boys, the healthy saving for a purpose ...

Take the way we save our

Same thing happens every day

"In my experience everybody really wants to put something by to be able to fulfill some cherished wish later, to make life easier when our hairs get grey, or to be ready for any unforeseen but urgent need for funds.

For the average man and woman, it seems to me that Canada Savings Bonds furnish just about as convenient a method for saving as is available.

There is a mighty lot of truth in the old saying 'Money burns a hole in the pocket' but if you put your cash into Savings Bonds, it puts both you and it out of temptation.

There is only one thing that I like about Savings Bonds more than another and that is that you can get your money out of them at a moment's notice without any fuss or without a penny's loss on your investment.

In my opinion there is no better way to save than with Canada Savings Bonds."

You're tired of my questions? ...

of thrift creates confidence in the future, freedom from worry and a greater degree of happiness."

Ban on Televising Coronation Boils Into Hot Issue

LONDON (AP)—The ban on televising the coronation next June is boiled up last night into a hot political stew.

Seventy-nine Labor members of Parliament headed by former defence minister Emanuel Shinwell introduced a motion on the subject. It criticized Prime Minister Churchill for refusing to tell the House of Commons of the Conservative government's attitude on the ban.

Since the present session ends Thursday, it seemed unlikely the motion would be debated.

Opponents of the ban contend million of Britons have the same right as the peers to see Queen Elizabeth crowned. Those supporting the ban say the televising would place an added strain on the Queen and would detract from the dignity and religious character of the event.

If the ban sticks, only a few hundred peers and notables in Westminster Abbey will see the crowning. Films will be taken, but it is planned to edit these to remove any possible hitches in the complicated proceedings.

Actually, Churchill has no primary responsibility in this matter. The decision rests with the coronation commission headed by the Duke of Norfolk.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A GOOD TRY!

It wasn't fair but what could one do about it. It seemed a golden opportunity and as soon as the guy showed his face in the editorial rooms he was met with twin salvos. Both, however, drew blanks.

We felt rather sorry for the guy but what would you do if one of the only chaps in the world you knew was in a position, or so we thought, to grab a couple of Grey Cup tickets, suddenly strolled into the office like a freak of manna from football heaven.

It seems things are in a sorry state as far as the football classic tickets are concerned. As Ted Reeve said a year or two ago, there's too much "mickey" business going on. The mink-wearers and others of the blue-blooded fraternity who probably never see a football game between Grey Cup finals will be out in force.

However to get back to the "hero" of the piece. The visitor was none other than Belleville's Bill Fry, genial hard-working secretary of the Ontario Rugby Football Association committee section. Bill formerly resided here and did a lot for football and lacrosse before moving to Toronto and later to Aylmer where he now resides. Incidentally Bill was one of the four guiding lights that started the lacrosse rage in Peterborough several years ago, and naturally he is quite proud of the Little Britch City's twin Mann Cup wins.

However we pulled every angle available regarding the cup tickets but Bill still shook his head. "Can't promise you a thing" he said. "We are dependent on the senior OHFU's generosity".

"But" he added, with a bit of a twinkle in his eye, "should Sarnia win the eastern Canada title, things might be a trifle different regarding those tickets".

And here Bill looked something of a bombshell.

"Don't be surprised" he said seriously, "if one of the biggest upsets in football occurs this year. Assiut don't say I didn't tell you. Sarnia is primed to step off the Big Four representatives and meet either Winnipeg or Edmonton."

Gad, men, that one nearly floored the ruddy sports staff. Three dashed for the water-cooler; another asked Bill if he was feeling all right. And Mike the copy boy stood by with a stretcher. Not for Bill, but for some of the rest.

"I'm not feeling" Bill went on, disregarding the shave of amazement, "Sarnia has one of the best teams in years, and in my opinion and with all respect to the other teams of the OHFU, I do not believe they have been bolstered as yet. They have been building up for this playoff — and this might be the year."

The Imperials have already clinched top spot in the OHFU and Bishop Beach is firmly entrenched in second place. Sarnia thumped the Beaches 30-0 in the opening game of the season and although Beaches may have improved a lot since then, it isn't likely they have done so to the extent of knocking off the powerful Imperials.

We understand Bill's loyalty to the OHFU. He has been one of the bulwarks in the intermediate division, and the absence of that category of late years has been due in large measure to Bill's untiring efforts.

However, we just can't get in line with Bill's optimism regarding the Imperials "taking out" either Hamilton or Argos or whichever team wins the Big Four title.

But imagine what a furore would be caused if such a miracle did happen. It would be the classic bomb of football.

And as Bill left he loosed another herb of intelligence.

"Speaking of these Grey Cup tickets," he smiled as he edged towards the door, "I think I know how you can get a pair".

A hush fell over the news room. Even the teletypes stopped their yakking. News like this was unheard of.

Then somebody bought it, hook, line, sinker, and boat.

"How?" he shrilled from the back bench.

Bill smiled just before he closed the door.

"Buy a ticket to the Grey Cup dinner being held the night before the game. The tab is ten dollars a plate and there's a draw for fifty tickets to the game."

Thirteen slugs rolled on the door as it closed.

* * *

'TWAS EVER THUS!

Speaking of these Grey Cup tickets this corner heartily concurs with Elmer Ferguson who wrote in a recent column that the boys who support the clubs all season should be among the first to get tickets for the classic, or words to that effect.

We know a half dozen football "maniacs" in this city who annually purchase season tickets for the Argonaut's games, not to mention taking treks to Ottawa, Hamilton and occasionally Montreal to witness the Big Four tilts. But come Grey Cup time and they're farther out in the cold than a lost husky sniffing at the North Pole.

HOLLYWOOD, TOO

A report last night has it that Johnny Carpenchuk, Grand Rapids defenceman, slated to join the Glen Boys, chose sunny California instead of the wind-swept, snow-bound slopes of the Moirs.

Well, you can't blame the guy, but the fact remains that the Glens should do something about getting a couple of rearguardsmen before it is too late. As has been mentioned before, the senior "B" teams representing this city the past three or four years have been handicapped by the lack of topflight behind-the-blueliners, despite the fact they reached the playoffs.

Coach Alfie Moore says he is satisfied with the up - front brigade. He feels his attacking divisions will equal any in the circuit, but they can't do it all.

Requires Two Goals to Equal Nels Stewart's Mark of 324; Habs Meet Leafs in Toronto

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's Maurice (Rocket) Richard against Toronto Maple Leafs tonight.

The betting is that the fiery Montreal centre will count one or both of the two goals needed to give him a tie for the all-time scoring record of the National Hockey League.

Hurtling Maurice will be shooting for Nels (Old Poison) Stewart's lifetime mark of 324 goals when the two clubs square away in their first encounter of the young N.H.L. season.

There's a good chance that the purists of hockey fans will cause his passing of that mark to boil up before his widely partisan followers in Montreal Saturday when Canadiens meet New York Rangers.

Rocket is Hot

There's a bad omen for the Leafs—the Rocket is hot. He's fired three goals in the last two games. His blazing shots have done much to power Canadiens to their present league leadership.

Stewart set his mark during 15 years service with the old Montreal Maroons, Boston Bruins and New York Americans. But in the more than 10 years ago, he never played more than 60 games during a season. Richard, now 31 and in his 11th N.H.L. season, plays far more games under today's longer schedules.

Surpassing Stewart would give Richard a big hold on the record books. The 50 goals he scored in '44-45 will probably never be exceeded, while the 31 goals he whacked in during the '45-'46 playoffs also should stand for some time.

"Maurice Has Changed"

Managing Director Frank Selke of Canadiens claims that a summer of making election speeches and refereeing wrestling matches has completely changed dour Richard. Selke says he's "a far different fellow—an extrovert."

Whether the new extrovert can bang in goals may be one of the questions answered tonight.

In tonight's other contest, second place Chicago Black Hawks, only a point behind Montreal, take on the lack-lustre New York Rangers who have won only one out of seven games.

Muzz Patrick Is Versatile Young Man

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nobody ever accused the Patrick family of not working at hockey. And least of all Muzz, son of Lester, brother of Lynn, nephew of Frank, Guy and Stan.

Muzz not only is a majority stockholder in Tacoma Rockets of the Western Hockey League, he also manages and coaches them. He also manages the Tacoma Arena. He sells ads and writes stories for his hockey program. He runs the Pacific northwest agency for a manufacturer of hockey sticks.

Muzz recently appeared on a Seattle television show to talk about hockey. He used a blackboard to outline a "typically thrilling play with all Americans would love to see."

Asked after the show what kind of play he was describing with his confusion of chalk lines, arrows and dots, Muzz confided: "Nobody down here understands the game, so I tried to show something which Americans might recognize. Actually, it was a football play—the only one I remember from my high school days, a cross-buck."

Greenshirts Edge Three Rivers 5-4, Jump to Third

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The visitors don't seem able to get off on the right foot in the new Quebec senior interlocking Junior A hockey schedule.

Three Rivers Reds made the first try by a Quebec team in Ontario last night, when they dropped a close one to Kitchener Greenshirts 5-4. Galt Black Hawks made a similar bad start on their trip to Quebec last week but recovered to win two of their four games on tour.

The Kitchener-Waterloo win put them ahead of Guelph Biltmores and St. Michael's Majors to lead in third place, one point behind the league-leading Barrie Flyers and Galt.

Meanwhile there was a rumpus in the league cellar as Oshawa beat the still winless Windsorites 9-1 to move into a sixth-place tie with St. Catharines Teepees.

In Quebec the top-place Montreal Canadiens trounced their cellar-dwelling neighbors, Montreal Royals, 9-1. The Royals have won once this season.

Hicks Scores Three

A three-goal effort by Greg Hicks in the third period resulted in the Kitchener-Waterloo win. Orv Tessier notched one in the first period to put the home club ahead but Raymond St. Cyr and Jean-Guy Gendron came back to give Quebec a brief second-period lead. Graham tied it early in the end of the period.

Hicks scored two quick ones to open the third period. Goals by Yvan Houle and St. Cyr tied it up then Hicks scored the winner. Three Rivers continue their Ontario trip with a game at Guelph tonight.

In Windsor, Oshawa was never shaded. Though down 2-0 early in the second period Windsor fought all the way after Elmer Sloat got one back. Stan Parker and Bud Hillman scored Oshawa's first two.

Rob Attersley took the pressure off for the visitors when he took his own rebound and scored in the empty Windsor net late in the third.

Claude Provost scored two for Montreal Canadiens in their victory over the Royals. Henri Richard got the other Canadien goal while Eddy Swartzack scored for the losers.

In other action tonight Marlboros go to Galt for a game postponed from last night and Kitchener plays in Sarnia. There are no games in Quebec.

Comebacks rolled 2405 against 2233 for the opposition.

Undefeated Redmen Scuttle Sailors Tied for Lead With Chatham, Mercs

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brantford Redmen are the only undefeated team in the young Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

The Redmen were hosts to Sarnia. Sailors last night and gave them an unhospitable 9-4 trouncing. Thus Redmen moved into a three-way first-place deadlock with the idle Chatham Maroons and Owen Sound Mercurys.

The Mercurys also moved into first place last night as they defeated Stratford Indians 7-3 at Owen Sound.

The Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series was delayed in getting under way last night when Soo Greyhounds were unable to keep their date with Sudbury Wolves because the ice was not ready. The N.O.H.A. will start tonight when the Greyhounds visit North Bay and the Wolves meet Soo Indians in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Last night's play divided the senior seven into three sections. Besides the three teams in top spot, Stratford, Kitchener and Sarnia are in the next slot with two points each and the useless Hamilton Tigers are in the cellar.

Taylor Faces Redmen

Jack Taylor paced the Brantford attack with three goals while Don Oberholtzer and Bill Gill got two each. Sam Kennedy and Joe Hokta won.

A three-goal Brantford splurge in the second period turned the tide after Sarnia had taken a 2-1 lead in the first.

Don Emms led the visitors with two goals. The others were spread among Skip Frezell, Harry O'Connor, Mac Beaton and Martin Zorics.

Owen Sound grabbed a two-goal lead in the first period and stretched it to five before Stratford scored in the second. Bill McComb fired three for the Mercurys with Tommy Burlington, Joe Leslie, Jack Ingoldsby and Johnny MacDonald each getting one.

Chuck Rayner May be Headed For Farm Team

NEW YORK (CP)—Chuck Rayner, veteran New York Rangers goaltender, may be headed for a job in the Rangers farm system, General Manager Frank Boucher hinted yesterday.

Rayner, out of action with a leg injury since late last season, apparently has lost the New York goaltending job to Lorne Worsley who was brought up from Saskatoon Quakers of the Western Canada League at the opening of the National Hockey League season.

The hint about Rayner's future was dropped at the weekly Rangers' hockey luncheon.

Although Boucher didn't indicate where Rayner might wind up, presumably it would be with Saskatoon, New York's farm club. Boucher did indicate that Rayner will not be traded.

Rayner, native of Sutherland, Sask., is 33 and had been with the Rangers for eight years.

Sport in Brief

COBOURG (CP)—Cobourg Galloping Ghosts will travel to Kitchener Saturday for the first of a two-game, total-point series for the Ontario Hockey Division 'A' Intermediate 'B' championship, it was announced yesterday.

The second game will be played here the following Saturday. The winner meets Sudbury for the All-Ontario title.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Gault, Spartanburg, S.C., yesterday challenged Vic Towell, world's welterweight titleholder of Johannesburg, South Africa, to a championship bout. The challenge was issued through the National Boxing Association. In Quebec Monday night, Gault decisioned Fernando Gagnon in a 12-round bout recognized by N.B.A. as for the championship of the Americas.

LONDON (AP)—Wilwyn, the British horse which this month defeated six rivals from four countries in the $50,000 International Race at Laurel, Md., slipped and fell when leaving a Pan-American plane yesterday after arrival from New York. A hind leg slid through a gap at the side of the plane ramp at London Airport. Owner Robert Sangster said: "Apparently Wilwyn was in trouble. The horse's leg was scratched."

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A football player who was unnecessarily injured in scrimmage and had his scholarship cancelled by the University of Florida filed suit yesterday for $50,000 damages. The suit, filed in behalf of Peter Schultz against the state board of control, asked $10,000 for "breach of scholarship agreement" and $25,000 at the result of the University of Florida's alleged failure to provide proper physical examination or medical attention after the 1951 accident that injured his back.

TONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—Direct Gal, a rank outsider, scored a half-length win in the feature event at Yonkers Raceway last night, paying the mile in 2:10 over a sloppy classed as "good" after an afternoon of rain, sleet and snow. Direct Gal returned $31.80, $17.40 and $5.40.

Up to Hips in Cattle, Brood Mares, McPhail Resurrects Old Race Track

NEW YORK (AP)—The last snowy day we drove away from Sam MacPhail's 800-acre farm garden down in Maryland, he was up to his hips in black cattle which he was hoping to win blue ribbons in nearby cow competitions.

Having laid down the burden of running the New York Yankees and banked the cheque for $1,000,000, MacPhail was a contented man. His only interests were the cattle and the life around him.

We recall dimly that a number of concession-selling mares were starting out of their stalls, but MacPhail said they didn't signify anything. He had no intention of getting serious about race horses; Larry was through with sport in all its branches.

Well, it just goes to show. That was something less than five winters ago, and friends insist this is the same MacPhail who sold $135,200 worth of colts and fillies at the last Saratoga auction, and $118,200 worth at the one before that.

Same MacPhail

It also is the same MacPhail, they say, who is president of Bowie Race Track, and who is putting in something like 14 hours a day getting the rebuilt plant ready for its fall meeting which opens on the Nov. 17. Under the driving force of along the man who retired, the old Maryland track is preparing to put on the best added purses, the Maryland Gold Cup for two-year-olds Nov. 22, and the President's Plate Handicap Dec. 6. This is twice-the figure Bowie ever put up for a race before.

For a fellow who once tried to kidnap the Yankee Clipper, who brought night baseball to the big leagues and installed a plush saloon for tired fans at Yankee Stadium, the rehabilitation of an old, rundown horse park appears to have presented no problem at all.

Men of Distinction

MacPhail probably will gain the distinction of being the first baseball man in history to make any keeping money out of horse racing. Numerous figures of the diamond sport, ranging from players to club presidents, have helped support the four - footed pastime though the years, but always from the wrong side of the windows.

The story is that when the breeders knew MacPhail had been bitten and was going around with his pants full of money buying colts and brood mares, there was great rejoicing. They couldn't wait to accommodate him. They only have learned what the baseball man could have told them all along.

Annoyed Wings Swap Players With Farm Club

DETROIT (CP)—Detroit Red Wings, annoyed by a three-game National Hockey League losing streak, yesterday announced two players changed.

Defenceman Larry Zeidel and utility forward Vic Stasiuk were sent to Edmonton Flyers, Detroit's farm club in the Western Canada League. Defencemen Bill Fo ils and right-wing Lou Jankowski were brought up from Edmonton as replacements.

Folk, 25-year-old native of Regina, gets his first real chance after five years in the Detroit farm system. He is rated a heavy body-checker than Zeidel.

Jankowski, 21, also from Regina, is a Detroit hope for more scoring punch. He scored 125 points two years ago with Lethbridge-Coaldale of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. Last year a skull fracture suffered in his first game at Indianapolis kept him out most of the season.

Baseball Council Shapes Up New Bonus Rule

NEW YORK (AP)—Baseball's major-minor executive council in a hush-hush meeting at commissioner Ford Frick's office, shaped up a new bonus rule yesterday which will be presented to the owners for ratification at the annual winter meeting in Phoenix, Ariz., next December.

The rule, stronger than any of its predecessors, was presented by a special recommendation committee which had been wrestling for several months with the problem of stopping the costly scramble for unproven youngsters.

All items discussed at the parley were held strictly "hush-hush." It was learned, however, that the new bonus law was the chief topic.

The new bonus rule will be somewhat similar to the present one which calls for a $6,000 "ceiling" for an 18-yr. old, divided between leagues and open classification; a $4,000 top bonus for class A and a $3,000 limit for other classifications. The latter restriction goes further than the limit now must be brought up to the major league club within a year after signing, or be subject to unrestricted draft.

The big differences in the new proposed bonus law, however, are that more "teeth" will be put into it.

"If this new law is adopted, it will mean that all first year players—no matter how much of a bonus they received—will be subject to draft after one year," a spokesman said. "That should automatically cut out 'under the table' payments above the bonus limit."

An organization meeting of the 1st Frankford Boy Scout Troop was held in the United Church hall on Friday evening. Approximately 25 boys were present, most of them members of the original troop which discontinued activities temporarily a few years ago. Only two adults were present besides the Scoutmaster Clifford Lansley which doesn't speak too well for the support the scoutmaster should be receiving. The Commissioner expects to visit Frankford shortly, at which time another meeting will be called.

Former Patrol Leaders Hugh Lyons and Francis Sickels will be acting assistant scoutmasters, and Harold Baker will be Troop Leader.

North Of Forty-Nine

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

It was nearing the end of August now. One Saturday noon Paul went to Colly McKee to report that the job was done, the ancestry was now fenced, signs were posted. It was then that Colly handed Paul a letter addressed to Mr. Paul Gates, in care of the Sanctuary, Ivanhoe.

Paul took his letter to a bench in the shade of the house, and sat down. The letter was signed by J. M. Rousselle, M.D., and in effect it said: that Bonny was now his, and without cost; that she had not been in pup when she escaped from his kennels, but that if she was in pup now, that she must have conveniently mated with a wolf, in which case her pups might develop into larger animals than she or her sire—possibly a bit mean, more difficult to break to harness, but dogs with much longer legs, and they might end up by being excellent sled dogs. Paul was further informed that there was a valuable Samoyede at service at the doctor's kennels, and if he wished to have some pure breds instead of cross breds to make up a team, that Bonny should be sent to the farm late in March. Relative to the calf and the deer which Bonny had killed, the doctor said he would be willing to forward his cheque in full payment upon receipt of a bill.

Paul read the contents of the letter to Colly and Sandy, who were as much interested as he was, and then he threw discretion to the winds.

"She's mine, Sandy!—all mine!" he shouted, grabbing a surprised Sandy by the hands and twirling her around, much to Colly's amusement.

"Ever make a sled, Ded?" he grinned.

"Well," Colly drawled, "I guess Old-Try-Anything-Once McKee could make a good stab at it, anyway."

August passed into September. There was ground frost at night, a warning in the wind of cooler, stormier days ahead. Cottagers, whose children must resume their studies where they left off in June had departed for their homes. A few of the others with neither chick nor child to think about, remained for the fall fishing, the partridge and duck hunting and of course, those most important days of a hunter's life, those days in fall when a deer, or moose, or bear, could legally be shot.

With the departure of so many Americans, Paul Gates, who had been patrolling the sanctuary daily since the fence had been built around it, was advised by his boss to take things easier. A patrol every second or third day would be sufficient until the deer hunting season opened.

Left with some time on his hands at last, Paul turned his attention to Bonny. He returned from the village one morning with a broad brass-studded collar, a good supply of dog food, and plenty of rope. Morning he was to be seen taking Bonny out for exercise, to the lake for a drink—but not to swim, for she was in no sense a water dog. This done, he would tie her to a tree clump of bushes back of the stable where she would remain until his watered her again and returned her to the stable for night.

Then there was the night that he led Bonny to the shore in the direction of the sawmill, Colly accompanied them, to enquire about some of the materials required to make a sled. Paul had something on his mind, too. There was no one at the mill, so Colly proceeded through the yard up to the office. Paul remained to take Bonny to the small log blacksmith shop and Mose Pelletier, the boss of the mill stables, a public smithy, but only after Fayette's regular work was done first.

Mose Pelletier was of the heavy-set, strong-armed, type of man. He was, in all truth, a strong man, with a hearty laugh which was so pleasant to hear, the laugh of a man in good health and content with his lot. Of course Mose was not to be compared in strength to the fabulous Louis Cyr of Montreal who, in his day, bested every strong man who dared to dispute his right to call himself world champion material. But there was no doubt that Louis Cyr was Mose Pelletier's pin-up man. There was an old smudged portrait of the second French Canadian on the blacksmith shop wall over a bench that was cluttered with the tools of his trade.

Pelletier took to Bonny at once. The beautiful snow-white Samoyede with the long silky fur, and strength in every movement also made, took his mind off everything else for the moment. He admitted that he had never seen such a dog, except in his dream. When a large brindle mongrel came into the mill-yard and Paul was deeply concerned since he had not thought it necessary to muzzle Bonny before coming down to the mill, Pelletier laughed, one of his long, hearty laughs.

"Have no fear, my frun," he said, "a male dog, she's more gentleman than male man, she no hurt a member of another sex."

"They talked about everything, which on this occasion was all dog and Paul broached the reason for his visit. He wanted harness—dog harness for Bonny.

"Why, sure, sure ting," Pelletier laughed again, "the stable's she's full of new harness, old harness, and old Mose she's de boss. Dar's plenty strap, buckle—oh, lots ting. Sure, sure we fix you up. And when I've your sled, cause, I fix him up also. And, you know how much I charge?" He dropped a heavy hand on Paul's shoulder, and Paul's knees sagged slightly.

"No, Mr. Pelletier," he said, "I don't, but I've got the money to pay you, no matter what the cost."

"Your moses round here, she's no good, my Yankee frun," he said, withdrawing his hand. "Nice ting it Mose Pelletier can't help you without charging you. But you give me ride some tam—that OK?"

"I promise," Paul agreed. "Further than that you'll have the first ride."

"And the sled—she's made yes?"

"Not yet, Colly—Mr. McKee is up in the sawmill office, asking about some lumber. Told me he's going to ask you to make some steel braces—"

"Nature—she make 'em," Pelletier laughed, "me get lots wood too—" he stopped and winked Colly coming down the mill road. "Good guy that Colly, eh, Paul?"

Then Mose Pelletier and Colly discussed the makings of Bonny's sled, agreed on what each would do, when they would start on it, decided that the blacksmith shop was the place to steam and bend the runners, put the sled together and paint it a bright red, trimmed with green.

And Old-Try-Anything-Once McKee, the master builder, as he had laughingly dubbed himself, chuckled to himself on the way home, remarking on how easy it had all turned out to be.

"They people we have around here, lad," he said, "they never let you down—remember that."

"I will," Paul said.

There was some fall gardening to do, some vegetables to lift before the frost reached them, some of Colly's flower beds that must be recovered and stored in a cool place until spring.

But no matter what else happened, no matter what else had to be done, nothing was to ever deter Paul Gates from his official duties as guard of the sanctuary. And since there are hunters in every country who must jump the gun, must go hunting before the season legally opens, there are such hunters in the Lake Petit Area. There followed much shooting and a sudden unexpected appearance of game wardens who were prepared to make arrests.

Now the sanctuary had never been invaded from the lake side, and for obvious reasons, but there had never been anything to prevent entry in the sanctuary from the east or west sides or from the north. So, with all this shooting going on, Paul Gates had something to think about. One thing certain, since Bonny's unrestricted depredations had stopped when she was trapped, the wild life returned to the lower part of the sanctuary and it was nothing now to see deer on the flat in early morning or late evening.

Democratic Official Fired By Committee Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP)—An official of the Democratic national committee was fired yesterday for allegedly helping negotiate a $6,000,000 government contract while working for the committee.

Democratic chairman Stephen A. Mitchell identified him last night as Col. Lawrence Westbrook, a research and development engineer.

Westbrook said Democratic Senator House Speaker Sam Rayburn in the Democratic presidential campaign in Texas, and said by telephone from Dallas there was "nothing wrong" with the contract or his negotiations.

Westbrook's dismissal came shortly before midnight last night as a result of a copyrighted story by Bert Andrews in the New York Herald Tribune.

The Herald Tribune story said Westbrook and two other men stood to share a $450,000 commission.

Jess Larson, who signed the contract for the government in his capacity as head of the defence materials procurement agency said today Westbrook signed the deal for tungsten between a Portuguese company and his agency.

The contract, in effect since Sept. 15, was cancelled by the government Monday for the announced reason that the company had violated terms by going into the open market for tungsten.

FEDERAL, ONTARIO GOVTS. CONCLUDE TAX AGREEMENT

Abbott and Frost Sign for Parties

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal and Ontario governments yesterday formally concluded a five-year tax rental agreement amid indications that neither party is entirely satisfied.

At a brief ceremony, Finance Minister Abbott signed for the federal government and Premier Frost for Ontario. Dr. W. C. Clark, deputy minister of finance, presented to Chester S. Walters, Ontario's provincial treasurer, two cheques totalling $61,000,000. They represented federal payments to Ontario for the first six months of the agreement.

A good-natured banter as they posed for photographers, Mr. Abbott and Mr. Frost exchanged views on the agreement. The Ontario premier said he wished to say that provinces that he was prepared to sign a different type of agreement, one that would cover personal income tax alone.

'Writing Big Wart'

Said Mr. Abbott as he signed: "Here goes $60,000,000 and how it wrings my heart. The prem'er could have got more a little longer and I would not have minded a bit."

Mr. Frost smiled and replied that he was prepared to remain outside an agreement under certain conditions.

This was taken as a reference to Ontario's efforts in recent years to have the federal government collect a five-per-cent personal income tax for the province. The federal government declined to collect the tax for Ontario, but offered to collect it for any province a deduction of up to five per cent on their federal income tax.

Details of the agreement, ratified this month by the Ontario legislature, were made public Aug. 28. Ontario agreed to give the federal government exclusive use of personal income, corporation and succession tax fields in return for annual payments based on population and the value of gross national production.

The province is expected to get between $120,000,000 and $130,000,-000 during each of the five years of the agreement.

Newfoundland took the brunt of the gales, worst of the storm, yesterday.

The Boston-based trawler Newton was left a battered derelict when her pumps couldn't cope with ahead of 8 leak. First attempts by the crew proved fruitless. A lifeboat was then launched.

Daring Rescue

Then the St. Nicholas, another of the American trawler fleet, dashed to the side of the pitching, 130-foot craft. Skipper Arthur Crew clambered aboard. None was injured.

The Newton sent an S O S in the afternoon but the crew didn't abandon her until 6 o'clock. Skipper captain, Pete Doucette of Gloucester, Mass., remained aboard to help running lights on so he could get if his pumps could be restarted.

His ship was still afloat at 11:30 p.m. EST last night.

Argentia, Nfld., air base reported that either the U.S. coast guard cutter Barataria or U.S. Atlantic Coast patrol boat Half Moon would pick up the survivors from the Nicholas.

Near the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the Canadian Pacific Steamships freighter Beavercrest and tug Foundation Vera received the blow's full fury. The Vera refused to abandon "standing her own" against the whitecapped seas at the height of the storm.

The 9,034-ton freighter lost her rudder Monday night. She is owned by the United Kingdom with a load of potash. Captain Ian Hislop, formerly of Ontario Josephine II, was slated to put a line aboard her today, to Master Capt. Ian Hislop.

She is expected to arrive there Saturday.

Power Cost to Municipalities In Southern Area of Ontario Increased 14.8 P.C. on Jan. 1

TORONTO (CP)—The cost of power to municipalities in the southern area of Ontario will increase by an average of 14.8 per cent from Jan. 1, Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the Ontario Hydro, announced last night.

He said it was expected that municipal and rural rates would increase throughout the province with the exception of municipalities in the Thunder Bay section. A report on rural rates would be given later, but the increase is expected to be less than 15 per cent.

Mr. Saunders said the increase in wholesale rates should not increase the retail cost in the majority of municipalities and in most other areas the retail increase would be less than the wholesale boost.

Steam Is Costly

The Hydro chairman commented in a radio address that the increase is due to higher costs generally, but particularly to the greater use of steam generation to meet the increased needs of the province. Last year, steam generated power represented 30 per cent of the power cost, whereas next year it will represent 50 per cent.

Speaking of the probable increase in retail rates, Mr. Saunders said calculations on the effects of the wholesale change indicated there would be no increase in retail rates in 384 municipalities in the Southern Ontario system. In the remainder of the 211 municipalities would have increases ranging from less than five per cent to more than 15 per cent.

These figures were based on the assumption that there would be no increase in local costs of distribution.

Mr. Saunders said all sections of the province receiving the more expensive steam generated power will bear the additional cost. If costs are two per cent higher than anticipated, municipalities will receive an extra bill at the end of the year.

Niagara Steam Brunt

In Southern Ontario, the brunt of the increase will be borne by Niagara division, the old 25-cycle area, partly because of a levy to provide for the cost of conversion to 60-cycle power.

The increase in the Georgian Bay and eastern divisions of the Hydro system will be substantially less because they are on 60-cycle now. Municipalities in these divisions will also benefit from the fact that rates paid by them in 1951 and 1952 are sufficient to provide a fund for the partial stabilization of rates in 1953.

Mr. Saunders gave three examples of the effect the increases in wholesale rates might have on retail costs. In Toronto, the increase on a monthly domestic bill of $6.38 would be 70 cents. In London home without a water heater would pay four percent increase or nine cents on a bill of $2.25. Ottawa, however, would not get an increase.

Ten-Saved from American Trawler as Ships Tossed About Like Matchwood on Atlantic

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Ships were tossed like matchwood Wednesday as gales with hurricane gales raked the Canadian seaboard with fury.

No casualties were reported but the scrambled rescue of a unidentified trawler captain probably saved the lives of 10 fishermen some 300 miles off Newfoundland's rugged, whipped coast.

In the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a disabled freighter and her tug expected barely hold their own against the angry seas off the dangerous Magdalen Islands. And fishermen on land feared.

Newfoundland took the brunt of the gales, worst of the storm, yesterday.

Acting Governor Hopeful Convicts Will End Riots

CHESTER, Ill. (AP)—Acting-Governor Sherwood Dixon expressed strong hope today that 322 mutinous but hungry convicts would end their rebellion at Menard State Prison and release seven hostage guards.

The feeling among state and prison authorities that prospects for a peaceful settlement of the four-day deadlock were favorable grew swiftly last night as hunger began to gnaw at the rebels.

The haggard prisoners have been without food since seizing their cell block of this southern Illinois prison late Monday. Their hostages are prison lieutenants and other guards—have been without food since noon Monday.

Three Hostages Freed

Three hostages already have been freed. Five came Wednesday when 38 psychiatric inmates surrendered and gave up their weapons in return for Dixon's promise to hear their grievances.

Late last night two prison chaplains entered the cell block at the prisoners' request. They returned with word that the seven hostages were apparently in good health. They transmitted a list of the demands drafted by the prisoners, but Dixon refused to disclose their wants.

"They ask increased medical service," Dixon said, "and a better food supply. And of course, they all want to get out."

He added that he was confident that hostages would be released unharmed and the trouble ended, perhaps sometime today.

FAVORS SLOW TRAVEL

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Pope had a nostalgic word yesterday for the horse-and-buggy days of travel. At a special audience for directors of tourist clubs, the Pope said modern travel has lost "many of some of its "precious advantages." He added one learned to know a country and its people on slow and meditative journey.

ALLIES WIN BACK PINPOINT HILL WITH COLD STEEL

5,789 Casualties To Reds in Last Week

SEOUL (AP)—Allied infantry won back Pinpoint Hill with clubbed rifles and cold steel today. Earlier 2,000 Chinese Communists, bursting out of the mouth of a long, uphill tunnel, had gained control of the vital central Korean front peak.

Heavy artillery fire from both sides churned the rocky summit during the savage fighting and was continuing without letup. An Eighth Army staff officer said it probably would rate as the most intense shelling of the war.

The Allied troops were dug in 50 yards down the slope from the summit of Pinpoint, taking cover from the hail of shells which blistered the crest.

They drove the Chinese off that highest hill of Seiger Ridge at mid-afternoon.

Then they split into three assault forces and tried to smash the Chinese all the way back to the Yoke, a maze of caves and tunnels guarding the northern end of 19-mile-long Bloody Ridge.

Assault Turned Back

But intense Communist shelling and small-arms fire turned back the assault forces.

The United States Eighth Army said its troops had inflicted 3,789 casualties on the Reds in the week ended Tuesday, bringing the total for the first four weeks of October to 32,835—the heaviest month of the year. Comparative Allied figures were not released.

In 17 days of fighting, Allied soldiers have had to claw their way up Pinpoint Hill's shell-pocked slopes nine times.

Earlier this morning, Chinese burst out of a long tunnel which opened on the summit and forced the Allied defenders off the peak. The shallow tunnel protected the Reds from Allied artillery.

Allied fighter-bombers pounded the six-foot-wide Seiger Ridge Thursday but heavy Communist fire from the tunnel met them.

At U.S. Eighth Army headquarters a battle officer commented:

"It's virtually impossible to stop their reinforcements because of the tunnel."

Elsewhere along the front small-scale fighting was reported.

Mother Wounded During Quarrel In Montreal Home

MONTREAL (CP)—A frail, 54-year-old post office worker was shot to death and his wife wounded early today during a quarrel with their two teen-aged sons, both captured by police soon afterward.

Philippe Bedard, Second World War veteran, was found dead in his three-room home in Montreal's north end.

The body was found after his wife, Marguerite, 48, ran to a neighbor's home, blood streaming from her shoulder. She was taken to hospital where her condition was reported not serious.

Captain Henry Bond, head of the homicide squad, said Bedard's son Robert, 18, and Yvon, 14, were held for investigation and will appear as material witnesses at an inquest set for tomorrow.

Came Home Late

He said he wasn't sure, so far, just what started the quarrel in the home but thought the argument may have been provoked by the boys coming home late. The mother's report was that Bob and some jewelry, a revolver and a hunting knife were found on the boys.

They were arrested, less than a half-hour after the shooting, by Constables Gerard Charbonneau and Rene Maddock, who were on duty in a radio car.

"When I saw the boys walking near some cars we decided to investigate," he said. "It was about 5 a.m. I searched the younger lad first and found a hunting knife on him.

"Then the second boy said: 'Okay, you've got us. I have the revolver.'

"I didn't know what he was talking about but I jumped on him fast. He had a .32 and it was almost fully loaded.

"They both got in the car then and I asked what he meant by 'You've got us.' He replied: 'You'll here about it on your radio.'"

Charbonneau checked headquarters by radio and learned there had been a shooting at the Bedard home. He said the boys then admitted their identity and Robert added, "I shot my father."

Following up the police broadcast, Constables Jean Pelletier and Andre Delongchamp were first to reach the Bedard house. They said they had recovered a stolen car and had thought the boys may have first taken this in an attempt to escape.

In Night Attire

Bedard's brother, Joseph, told police he heard a shot and noticed a rifle but was unable to say where the boys got it. He said Robert and Yvon were "very shy" and seldom got into trouble.

At the neighborhood drawings of various kinds of guns and the plan of a store. They said the boys may have intended robbing the place.

Bedard's body was found in the front-door entrance of the modest house which he himself had built. He apparently was running out when he was shot. He was dressed in his shirt.

Police said Mrs. Bedard ran to the home of her neighbor, Armand Urbain, for help.

Donald Denike Suffers Broken Leg in Fall

Donald Denike, 19, of 35 Dundas Street, suffered a broken leg Wednesday afternoon, when the ladder on which he was standing at work was knocked off balance and he fell 18 feet to the sidewalk. He was taken to hospital by ambulance.

Denike was engaged in painting the exterior of the Dundas Street bus terminal. He was standing near the top of the ladder at the east corner of the building when a taxi driven by Leslie Potts, 54 Pinnacle Street swung around the corner. The driver applied his brakes but was unable to stop in time and the bumper unbalanced the ladder, dumping Denike to the pavement.

News of Trenton Airmen Captured After Wild Chase In Swampland

Trenton (Special) — A wild chase through backyards and swamp lands of Bay Street early Wednesday ended in the capture by police of a man and the apprehension of another a short time later. Arrests were charged after housebreaking and will appear at the next session of police court.

At 2.30 a.m., while checking property in the industrial area, constables John Graham and Allan Ormshaw saw a special attempting to pry back Simpson property on Dundas Street east. While Graham stood in the car watching the front door Ormshaw went around to the rear of the premises. He was startled by a man darting out from the shadows and gave chase. Graham circled with the cruiser, coming out on Bay Street in time to watch his fellow constable make the arrest.

A closer check of the Simpson store revealed that a storm window had been forced and removed and the inside window forced. A large carton of cigarettes, cigars and other tobacco chandise was found just inside the window while another was packed with similar articles at the back door. A suitable ready to be carried away.

Arrested after the chase was A.C. 1 Edward Mervin, who recently arrived at the Trenton Air Station. He was found with a silver barrel with a white imitation pearl handle, was found on his person. The car gun had been remodelled to look like amateur pistols and the chambers were loaded with live .22 shells. There was no firing pin in the gun so that it would be almost impossible to discharge the bullets by firing the weapon. Police were intrigued by the "real" look of the service pistol, however.

Later in the morning Detective Sergeant R. J. Rutherford and Constable Bruce Westfall apprehended Mervin in connection with A.C.1 Gerald Cockburn of Stanley Township, with whom for 17 years old. Mervin's home is at Kmarne, Manitoba, and Cockburn's at Woodstock.

Rev. A. E. MacKenzie Inducted As Principal Albert College In Service of Dignity, Simplicity

In a service of quiet dignity and simplicity the induction of the Rev. Andrew E. MacKenzie, B.A., into the Principalship of Albert College took place in the Memorial Chapel on Wednesday evening, with Rev. G. A. Puttenham, B.D., chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, presiding.

The dedication of the new church, a gift of Mr. W. S. Corbon, Tweed, marked this auspicious occasion as a memorable one. The table at the rear of the chancel held a decorative bowl of flowers flanked by branched candelabras.

The processional entered with the choir leading to the strains of "Lord of All Being," followed by the representatives and clergy of the United Church.

Taking part in the service were Rev. Duncan McTavish, who read the Scripture lesson; Rev. C. W. Bishop, former principal of Albert College, who offered prayer, and Rev. E. D. Warriner, chairman of the Board of Governors, who presented Mr. MacKenzie for induction.

Mr. Warriner paid tribute to Dr. Bert Howard, Principal Emeritus, who had built well and courageously during his years. He had taken the committee two years to find a successor to Dr. Howard and their decision had finally concentrated on Mr. MacKenzie. Mr. Warriner summed up Mr. MacKenzie's qualifications by saying that he was ordained, well-read, well-mannered and well-liked. Amplifying this observation, Mr. Warriner said that the new principal was the son of Christian parents, he had graduated widely to complete his education for the ministry and was continually reading and studying. His personal character had all the attributes of a successful minister and his preaching attracted friends to any institution where he served. He was a man of prayer to God, and was a recognized leader of youth in Christian service.

Spoke on Christian Church

Rev. George Telford, D.D., spoke on the Christian Church and the application stating that the church felt that it had to educate the whole person to be truly Christian as well as sacred knowledge.

"The highest knowledge and the highest faith go together," said Dr. Telford. The Christian Church has always proclaimed freedom for man, especially freedom from ignorance, poverty, sinfulness and to learn.

"Attitudes are changing," the speaker continued. "From remote rural areas many young people seeking education. Large cities have been made in adult education, and many interests and activities are carried on here, in the United States and Great Britain. There are increasing numbers of lecture rooms.

"At one time it was thought that the great hope of humanity lay in Christian education of God would be brought nearer as mankind was enlightened. Education was intended to make us wise and good. But we want to examine this theory to see if it has succeeded.

"The actual child is introduced to the world around him by learning symbols and sounds, and the facts of reading, writing and history. Later he learns the objectives, of technology, physical behavior, health and of other lands and peoples. He gets such an accumulation of facts that it takes whole libraries to hold them. With all this accumulation of facts we have not arrived at the world we want. We need more than facts and knowledge. We must ask the query what is the purpose of learning facts? We live in a time of living with each other, many things in the field of culture, how to make a living and how to live a life. Have to Develop a Philosophy

"The chief problem is oneself, and we have to develop a philosophy. The essential to add to facts is value. Unless we have something of values we are lost.

"The Bible is the only standard which presents true values. The beginning and the end of wisdom is the discovery of insight about God. If we are after wisdom we must have a combination of facts and value by seeking first the kingdom of God and the necessary things will be added."

The induction was conducted by Rev. G. A. Puttenham with the responses by the congregation concluding with Veni Creator Spiritus, repeated in unison.

With Mr. J. MacKay directing the school choir sang the anthem, "Praise ye the Father."

Greetings were brought by Rev. Harold Young, D.D., secretary of the Board of Colleges and Secondary Schools who listed some of the attributes of a principal. The church expects he will be a recognized authority in the fields of culture and learning, an economic genius, an expert on public relations, a builder of character, able to give Christian instruction, and with the ability to guide the feet of the young in paths of Christian service.

Serves Long Expected

From Ontario Ladies College at Whitby, the Principal, Dr. Stanley Lyle, sent his greetings and congratulations. He was followed by Dr. A. B. Moore, President of Victoria University and Dr. Waldo Smith, Chaplain of Wycliffe College. A cable expressing best wishes was read from Miss Jessie Tulle, former Dean of women, who is now residing in Australia. Telegrams were received from Dr. P. S. Dobson, Principal of Alma Ladies College, Thornton, who was able to be present.

Principal Kennedy made the act of dedication of the beautiful new chancel to the glory of God. He also made the appeal for the completion of the debt on the chapel. He spoke of the capacity registration in the past and of the tentative registrations already in for next year. Of the 84 students are 11 candidates for the ministry and one girl who will enter the United Church training school. The principal praised the loyal efficient staff of the school, and said their aim was to maintain the high standard which would think clearly and make wise decisions, recognizing that they were servants of God and entrusted to them by God, which means to teach and minister to God and their fellow man. Mr. MacKenzie thanked all those who had offered their good wishes, and said that he considered it a privilege to be in charge of one of the finest people in the land. Hoped that he have I offer freely he concluded.

Dr. Howard Heard

Dr. Beart Howard, who was welcomed back to the city Mr. MacKenzie, spoke feelingly of his profound gratitude to God who had led him by successive steps to this evening. He could not conceive of any life he could have lived that would have brought greater happiness. He had "reached the stage," he said, "where I could look back and see the Christian way was the only satisfactory life and from the vantage of the old men shall dream dreams and the young men shall see visions." The speaker stated his belief that unless the old men dream dreams and the young men cannot see visions. If they were true to this belief they would look back and into paths of light that would be ever expanding. He paid tribute to friends and our dreams became realities.

Dr. Howard escorted Mr. W. S. Gordon who donated the chancel to a seat of honor on the platform.

The recessional hymns was played on the organ by Mr. William Connor. After the service a reception was held in Ackerman hall where the guests were introduced to the new principal. Visitors, and refreshments were served.

Israel Making Great Strides Toward Being Self-Sufficient Speaker Tells Belleville Group

The tremendous impetus, economically and otherwise, of the past four years clearly indicates that Israel will be an industrial and agricultural nation within five or six years, Mr. Jack Brass, public relations director of the Hebrew University, declared here last night.

Mr. Brass, on his first visit to Canada, is conducting a lecture tour in Ontario in the interests of the university. He was born and educated in England and immigrated to Israel in 1946. He served in the British Army and again in the Army of Israel with the rank of captain. He headed the first Zionist unit and the Secretary supervising relief and rescue work among concentration camp survivors. He was for eigh months commanding officer of the relief camp at former concentration camp at Bergen Belzen.

He spoke to the Belleville Kronzoil Zionist organization at the home of Mrs. Morris Segration synagogue.

He outlined the terrific struggle Israel had waged and is waging to regainher independence.

"This country of some 10,000 square miles, smaller than the state of Vermont, Israel has tripled from the miseries of war and is now accomplishing miracles in every way both without and within" he said.

Big Problem

One of the country's main problems is the "bringing back" of its people from 54 countries, the speaker told his audience. To these, he said, it is difficult to explain the policy of democracy.

Through its efforts to bring back its people, Israel has tripled its population to 1½ million in four years, Mr. Brass pointed out. Financial aid from many sources and charitable appeals from many parts of the globe are sought in all countries in Europe, especially in Britain, France and Curtain. Feeding, clothing, hospitalization and transportation are listed amongst to a terrific figure.

In the last four years, 850,000 of these people have been brought back. There has been but a trickle from the satellite countries of Russia, and these come through the Iron Curtain, Red cost.

"We pay "ransom-money" for them but they are brought completely before they are allowed to leave. They come in with nothing," Mr. Brass said.

"Nobody under thirty-five years of age is allowed to leave these countries except under extreme pressure," he added.

While Israel cannot afford to be militarily unprepared, Mr. Brass said, for this reason, she maintains friendly relations with America, Canada and Britain.

No Strings

"If other peoples want to help Israel, they can do so, but there will be no political strings attached nor ideologies involved," he said. "Israel wants to be the right to pray freely, mingle freely with other peoples, and in building a decent country. It is a tough row to hoe, but we feel that tomorrow will be better," Mr. Brass said.

Dr. Ben Gurion, another phase, Mr. Brass pointed out that 175,000 Arabs remain in Israel, and in the other country in the Near East are many Arabs who have left. Israel do Arabs enjoy such a high standing as in Israel. The educational system is such that Arabs are represented in the many municipal offices, civic posts and other responsible positions in the country.

The young men of the country serve nine months in the Army which is operated along British lines, and another 15 months in reserve training. The Israel army has its doctors, nurses, scientists and engineers.

Mr. Brass believed that Egypt's new reform will see the beginning of the end of the Israeli left wing as the leader of the Israeli left wing in the Knesset was thrown in to prison and has remained there for the past nine months while he was on a good-will tour of Czechoslovakia.

Since his arrival in Canada, he has found that Canadians and Israelis alike are interested in what is going on in Israel and its gallant fight for political independence. Expatriated Englishmen have England to fall back on. Frenchmen have France. Israel wants to be "always a home" for its people in other parts of the world.

Turning again to the good standard of living of the Arabs in his country Mr. Brass said "if we are not able to raise this standard we must not expect to exist in a vacuum of the Near East. We hope by raising this standard to show Arabs in other parts what a de-

Sixty Animals Burned to Death In $12,000 Fire

BRAMPTON (CP) — Sixty animals waiting to be butchered were burned to death early today when a $12,000 fire destroyed an abattoir half a mile east of here.

The slaughterhouse was owned by Jack and Harold Marshall, of town 25 miles northwest of Toronto.

Watching crowds could hear the cries of the trapped animals as the flames raced through the building.

cent standard of living in a decent standard will be."

Tourists Lured

Nor has the tourist business in Israel been neglected. The tourist business is one of the country's priority industries. From five to six thousand a few years ago, the total tourist population last year was 30,000.

Speaking of the Hebrew University, which he said "was cut of by the Arabs" Mr. Brass said he will try to convey to Canadian audiences what has been done and what is being planned for the future. The student body has been tripled to some 2,500 and next year it is anticipated this number will exceed 3,000. Help from Christian organizations has made this possible and Mr. Brass expressed thanks to Canadian again.

The university lacks the facilities of its western counterparts, but Mr. Brass said, "it is not so much the beauty of campus as it is what is being taught. Friends of the Hebrew University organizations, (and there is one group in Belleville in the western counties, provide greatly appreciated assistance.

IN MEMORIAM

TURNER. — In loving memory of a beloved mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Harriett Ann Turner, who passed away October 30th, 1951.
Remembrance is a golden chain
That links our hearts to you again.
Sweet memories are all we have
To keep us company.
In the greatest sorrow of one's heart,
In the deepest grief of one's soul,
But this they wipe out never —
The memory of those sweet days.
When we were all together
And you were with us, dear miss you!
No one knows what I miss you
We have suffered, since we lost you
Life has been hard and lonely,
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Sweet memories are all we have.
Sadly missed by daughter and son-in-law, Daisy, Ross and Ruth. C30

Police Force Will be On Alert For Property Damage Hallowe'en

Police Chief Walter Probert today asked the co-operation of the many Hallowe'en celebrants who Friday night will be out in force and asked that the night's fun be kept on a strictly innocent plane.

"The police department will have extra officers on duty and will be on a sharp lookout for any indication of property damage," he said. "Not only will we be out to prevent property damage, but where damage is done every effort will be made to apprehend the responsible parties."

The police chief pointed out there were many ways in which Hallowe'en can be enjoyed by fun seekers without resorting to property damage. There will be all sorts of parties, both public and private as well as many other innocent ways to spend the night.

"The police department is not out to spoil any innocent fun that may be planned, but property damages of any sort will be frowned on," the chief emphasized.

HOW IT ACTUALLY WORKS

There has never been a presidential election in the United States in which Canadians have been more keenly interested than the Eisenhower-Stevenson contest which has now entered the home stretch. There have been few presidential elections in which the outcome was more in doubt since the development of public opinion polls by Dr. George Gallup.

Four years ago, the public polls on the Gallup pattern were charged with their only major error in predicting that Dewey would defeat Truman. As a result there is a good deal less certainty in the calculations of the pollsters in this campaign. That uncertainty has been heightened on this occasion, too, by the fact that there have been few other times when so many of the American voters have remained undecided themselves at such a late hour in the campaign.

It has been the concensus of all political experts that in the early stages of the 1952 campaign General Eisenhower was conceded a hands down victory. But gradually the picture changed in the hustings that Governor Stevenson is not only an established contender but is being given the call by many. There is the distinct possibility that the final count will be so close that, in contrast to most elections, this one will still be in doubt after the polling figures have been posted.

Most Canadians are unaware that the President of the United States is actually chosen by an Electoral College, something which is completely foreign to our own electoral system. Here is how it works out:

Under the Constitution "each state shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress, but no Senator or Representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector."

Furthermore, the Constitution provides that the Electors meet in their respective states and they make out distinct lists of votes recorded in their state for President and Vice-President. This is a formality of certification which, in most elections, is quite unnecessary to establish the final result. However, in the absence of a clear-cut decision it may be necessary.

It is stipulated that the person having the greatest number of votes for President "shall be the President, only if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed." If this is a confusing system to Canadians it can be said that it is also a matter of some confusion to Americans if they are required to explain how it works.

It is mathematically possible for a President to be elected in the United States and have a minority vote. However, in the period of 1844 to 1948, it has only occurred once, in 1887, when Harrison with about 200,000 fewer votes than Tilden was the final choice under the Electoral College system. This incident was almost repeated in 1916 in one of the biggest upsets in American political records. Mr. Hughes went to bed on election night thinking he was a winner, but by morning returns from outlying precincts in California had changed the result. It was only a matter of a few hundred votes, but had they been in Hughes favor he would have been a minority president.

In 1948 three states upset the predictions of a Dewey victory. In Illinois, California and Ohio Truman finally emerged with a majority of 60,000 out of 11,000,000 votes cast in those states. Had the margin been in Dewey's favor he would have been elected.

It is little wonder that the pollsters are confounded at this late date in the 1952 campaign.

HIDDEN PAYROLLS

There is a new phrase in our language which has become familiar to most Canadians and is a matter of personal interest to a goodly number of citizens. It is "fringe benefits."

It now enters into the terms of almost every contract negotiated by a Union and in less specific conditions applies in some respect at least to almost every salaried worker. Recently the Canadian Manufacturers' Association made a survey that revealed these fringe figures including how much the fringes mean in the Canadian sales dollar. It was found that they actually add up to a hidden payroll of impressive proportions.

Over 700 firms reported to the C.M.A. in its survey. Figures show a total of over $64,000,000 or an average of nearly $192 per each employee, was being paid out by these companies for such things as pension plans, group life, sickness and hospitalization insurance, workmen's compensation, unemployment insurance, medical services, cafeterias, welfare funds, etc.

And it is noted that this figure alone was more than half as much as these companies paid out in dividends to shareholders. But even the total of fringe benefits and dividends was less than one-third of the amount taken out of the sales dollar in taxes — money that puts neither labor or capital into business.

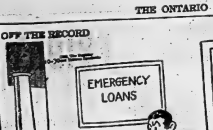
REVISED BIBLE

Another Holy Bible new
By millions to be sold;
Some verses changed a word or two
To clarify the old.

A Bible being advertised
To fit the urgent need;
By scholars brilliant revised
For all of us to read.



I'll run the changes through and through,
And find that I can't improve a few
But let the truth be told,
Though I admire the Bible new,
I'll better love the old.

The family Bible came to me
With pages thumbed and worn
And there recorded I can see
The day when I was born.

And when shall come my time to die
And I must pass it on
I hope they'll love it, as have I,
Long after I have gone.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 30th., 1932

His Worship Mayor George O. The has been requested by many citizens to offer himself for re-election to the office of mayor for the year 1933 and he has decided to do so. He is now contesting his third year as mayor after serving five years as alderman and as an alderman and as mayor he has served the city well.

The steel girders to be used in the construction of the Kresge store on Front Street have arrived and are today being placed in position.

Moose are more numerous in the north country this fall than for some years, especially in the Rancroft district.

Eighty men and girls, employees of the distillery at Corbyville who were laid off some time ago, will now back on their jobs.

Mrs. Stanley Ford and son of Rochester, N.Y., are spending a few days here with Mrs. Ford's mother, Mrs. Effie Manchester, Reg. N. of Ottawa, is the guest of Miss F. Sullivan, Victoria Avenue.

30 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 30th., 1922

The best league football game of this season was played Saturday afternoon on the campus at Albert College between the G.T.R. and the G.W.V.A. teams. It was a keenly contested game and resulted in a draw, the score being 1 to 1. The line-ups composed the teams: G.T.R. — Joe Knott, Sam Taylor, J. Gerrard, Gerald Gerrard, H. Robinson, C. Gill, H. Baker, W. Moore, W. Harvey, Harold Gerrard and G. Lancaster; G.W.V.A. — H. Peters, F. Davies, V. A. — H. Peters, F. Davies, V. A. — H. Peters, T. Eadie, P. Grant, T. Yorke, J. Barrie, J. Griffith, T. Doge and Jack Hill. The referee was Jack Woods and he handled the game in his usual satisfactory manner.

"Gunner" Arnott, who played hockey with Belleville last winter, is now residing in Prescott and will likely play with Stan Burgoyne's team. Arnott was Eddie Thomas' scoring ace last winter and bagged most of the goals for the Belleville team.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Northrup, who spent the summer at their home here on North Front Street have left for Ottawa where they have purchased a house.

40 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 30th., 1912

Mr. Fred J. Smith of Campbellford was in town today.

Mr. Robert Cook of Rawdon, M.P.P. for North Hastings, was in town today.

Mr. Charlie Green has returned to his home after visiting friends here.

Mrs. Robert Fenn and Mrs. Arthur Fenn have returned to the city after spending some time in Saskatoon, Sask.

Mrs. George W. Anderson of Stirling was in town today.

Mr. R. H. Cuming of Toronto is renewing acquaintances in town.

Messrs. J. Stinson, Guy Marshall, D. Sinclair, R. Burke and J. O'Brien have left to hunt deer in the northern part of the county.

50 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 30th., 1902

At a meeting of the city council the following committee was appointed to look into the matter of the city taking over the management of the waterworks system: Ald. Bleecker, Calbraith, and Ald. Mills. Ald. Pope brought up the matter in council and it stated that there are now some 800 paying customers here while there are 1,500 consumers in Brockville, 2,000 consumers in Guelph and 2,500 consumers in Brantford. The costs here are too high and water consumption are a necessity. The committee will make a report at an early date and have gone into the matter thoroughly.

Mr. Joseph D. Clarke has returned to his home here after spending some time in the Klondike.

Should be More Hallowe'ens

(Montreal Gazette)

Despite the introduction of comic books, radio and television into their lives, children will celebrate Hallowe'en this Friday night, in traditional fashion. If the weather permits, Montreal streets will be patrolled by hordes of pint-sized ghosts and witches and cowboys and Indians, all determined to Brother's-clothes, with fierce burnt-cork moustaches for good measure. And young boys will clump along in Mother's shoes, occasionally tripping over a drooping edge of the voluminous house dresses they borrow for the evening.

The distinctly Montreal touch will be provided by the calfs and collars of heavy sweaters peltch will peek out of the most fancy costumes. The last day of October in Montreal is no time for doddling in the hula dancer or a South African tribesman. Dressing up is a job for the more sensible.

What for the attraction of Hallowe'en remain so much the same, decade after decade, when so many other factors in children's lives are changing? The idea of "dressing up" of play-acting is always dear to children, of course. But there is more to it than that.

On Hallowe'en, children make their own fun. Most of them "design — or scrounge — their own costume. It's a participation game. In an age and a part of the world where so much is done by the professionals, children and adults, is mechanical or spectator, such opportunities are becoming increasingly rare.

So many apartment-bred children have no opportunity to learn how to play. Without a room of their own, confined to a small corner of the adults' quarters, they never know the fun of hoarding a whole room into a country store or a pirate ship — or the comforts of a space rocket. They grow more and more dependent on radio and television and comic books which do their imagining for them and which may become in one of the most treasured experiences of life.

How better they become pervous and irritable and "difficult." Perhaps that should be more Hallowe'ens in the year.

Clowns And Kids

Window Star)

Among the many categories in the field of entertainment it is doubtful if any, on a mass to man basis, brings more real pleasure to more people than does the clown. Especially pleasure to little people, those who are uninhibited in their laughter.

One of the great stars of circus history, Emmett Landolf, of Springfield, Mass., is dead at 73. He spent decades under the big top, and died a rich man. He displayed his art to millions, and made them all laugh at his antics.

The humor of a good clown is not over-sophisticated. It appears easy, but it isn't. Most of it is conveyed by pantomime, but even that isn't able to resort to the wit expressed in words. He is a man and the same time funny and pathetic, but even funny in his pathos.

It is relatively easy to make children laugh. They have a ready sense of humor and see nothing undignified in a good belly laugh at something silly. But to make good clowns such as Mr. Landolf could make even the most sophisticated man or the most straight-laced dowager go into gales of laughter.

The antics of the clown generally are based on a low form of humor. And, laughter being good for the soul, we wonder if a clown such as Mr. Landolf didn't during his lifetime contribute more to the health of millions of people than some leaders of other more dignified professions.

Color And Design

(Sudbury Star)

No one envies the municipal councillor who is suddenly confronted with such problems as trying to decide whether color is an integral part of design.

Members of Sudbury's township council, found themselves in this predicament when Planning Board Secretary-Manager Ken Keeling inspector placed a stop order against an apartment building construction when it was revealed that the contractors were painting the concrete blocks instead of the conventional red or buff.

Keeling said that the use of multi-colored brick was an infringement of the building by-law. The councillors sought their solicitor who offered the opinion that the stop order would not stand the test of court. They then instructed the order to be lifted.

Council unsettled, however, was the academic question: Is color an integral part of design?

Smarter Pigeons

(Winnipeg Tribune)

Are pigeons getting smarter or are they just going to the dogs?

Australian pigeon fanciers are broadcasting what happened in that country recently. A pigeon named Lucky won a race after delivering messages by covering 1,40° miles between Sydney and Melbourne in 14 hours and 13 minutes. This set a record.

Later Lucky was again performed the feat again in almost the same time. This time it aroused some suspicion and raised eyebrows. Blending was called in. Rapid Beauty was seen riding the roof of the express train that runs between Sydney and Townsville. The pigeon made the distance in 10 hours, 11 minutes.

Rapid Beauty has been barred from future races for cheating. The racing fraternity has given the pigeon equivalent of the bird. A foul affair.

Looted Hospitals

(Edinburgh Scotsman)

Since the hospitals were nationalised five years ago, the Western Regional Board for Scotland have lost 20,000 pounds worth of equipment, mainly because of pilfering.

Linen formed a large proportion of the losses, but other items included crockery, cutlery, surgical instruments, fire extinguishers and two sewing machines.

Ex-Provost E. Fyfe, Dumfries, convener of the committee, is in disagreement with the Board. Health measures to prevent such losses of equipment.

Provost Fyfe said later that the matter was one which "caused considerable headaches. Large though the sum of 20,000 pounds may be, I do not feel that it necessarily represented the total sum involved."

BUT WHAT'S ESSENTIAL?

(Edmonton Journal)

Premier Bennett of British Columbia announces that he will cut costs by millions without any reduction in essential services. Now comes the battle of the century, to decide what's essential.

TOO MUCH MUD

(Woodstock Sentinal-Review)

If the election campaigners in the United States aren't more sensible in their handling of mud, it would be more sensible to abolish it. Voters don't mind mud-slinging if it amounts to a beauty treatment.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Apparently the purpose, the function, of modern art is to make us uncomfortable, uneasy, restless. Lately I was in the home of a friend who has recently become converted to the modern trend in design. His whole house, living room, dining room, even the kitchen, was a mass of angles and slashes of soft, ill-matched colors, but every article of furniture looks as if it had arthritis. All the ornaments, the vases, jugs, bowls, were twisted and bent from the gripes. Hanging from the ceiling in his living room is one of those highly grotesque studies in nothing-at-all. Made of thin curving sheets of aluminum and painted plastics, from the points and corners of which fine threads are strung in meaningless criss-cross.

When we came into the house and took off our coats, hats and galoshes, my friend hastily stuffed all of them out of sight, in a cupboard with no hanger in it, and shut the door, as though their earthly things bore no relation to the tone of the atmosphere of the house.

If I was uneasy, restless, he was worse. His wife came down stairs to meet us, nice, normal housedress. I at least hoped she would be normal, but she was busy hopping on one foot. But no: very conventionally she came down with a run, and then three of us, in ordinary clothes, surrounded by distorted furniture, twist, and the beads looked to one another like toads in the matter of comfort, we talked and it each other, the more uneasy we grew. We didn't know what to do with it. The wife went and got tea. As I feared, she had it in a set of pottery, and of a ghastly pea color. It was as though the cups were trying to think twice.

We talked loud, drank the tea, disagreed on everything, took frequent deep breaths and left as early as decency allowed the weird room.

"What do you say?" cried my friend, "Let's go to a Chinese restaurant and have tea in a proper cup?"

Which we did, and were soon back to normal. The function of modern art, it seems to me, is not moving, to whip you up, to get you out of the house. Anything for a rest.

GENEROUS WITH LAKES

(Vancouver Province)

British Columbia was generously supplied by nature with lakes. There are 85 bodies of fresh water more than 10 square miles each, and hundreds of smaller lakes and ponds. From the top of Hamilton Mountain, near Mt. James, upwards of 100 lakes may be viewed. While there is in Central British Columbia an abundance of water, the same is generally true of the whole province, for the lakes are generously distributed.

ONLY A CAPTAIN

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

A married man may be the captain of his boat, but the chances are that his wife is the major of it.

WHY THE DIFFERENCE?

(Niagara Falls Review)

Why is it that so many American magazines and periodicals still find a ready market in Canada, but the United States, when our money is above par with U.S.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IN THE RED OR IN THE BLACK

Recently our local paper carried the story of a man who started an unusual savings campaign six years ago. Everyday he would put his pennies from the change in his pocket and put them in an empty jar. Eventually he had to transfer them to a larger container, and then into a still larger one. Each year, when he heard got too large to handle conveniently, he took them to the bank. He was amazed to find that he had about nineteen thousand pennies — almost two hundred dollars saved toward a trip to Europe.

The growth of the tiny daily contribution into a considerable total sum appears in other aspects of life, too. Human character is built the same way. The man who makes the right choice in the major issues of every-day living, who resists little temptations, who performs minor acts of unselfishness, finds himself eventually with a great reserve of moral strength. Just as the man who saved nickels never felt pinched for dollars, adds and subtracts his amount regularly, so the habitual practice of good ethics becomes relatively painless and easy.

Unfortunately, the reverse is true, also. Habitual selfishness, petty dishonesty, lying, and so forth build up a big penalty deficit in time. When the moral crisis comes, just as is the case with financial crisis, it is not the man with the deficit who is the strongest; it is the man with the reserve.

Personal Health Talks

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letters from readers nor furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

EXTRAORDINARY REQUEST

Acquaintances seeing the truck unloading mail here every morning sometimes comment: "I suppose you must get a lot of queer letters."

My answer to that is "Well, there are a lot of queer people in the world besides these and me."

The queerest letters are anonymous—until we learned to look first at the signature line, and drop into the chucker unread letters that lacked a signature. These hampered prompt handling of the mail. Why should any one show so courtesy expect courtesy?

But I did receive the other day this extraordinary request:

Dear Doctor:

I read your column regularly, with great interest and feel I am fifty years old and in fine health. I'd like to stay that way if possible. My weight is 2 inches 25c and s.s.s. for a copy of your booklet "The Seven Keys to Vile.

Thank you,

M. LaJ.

Some twenty years ago a medical society launched a campaign to persuade people to get the habit of undergoing a medical examination annually for the purpose of maintaining health and preventing premature degeneration, and perhaps detecting such insidious diseases as diabetes, chronic nephritis (Bright's disease) and tuberculosis in their incipiency (time when the chance for cure is good. The idea sounded so good that we medical decided that the doctors themselves should set an example by having periodic health examinations . . . but, shucks, only a few of the doctors did so, and only a few of the people enjoyed the annual health ever got around to having an examination. So in a few years the great project faded from memory.

Human nature.

Mr. LaJ. is fifty and feels fine.

And yet, by jingo, he is sufficiently interested in his own fine feltie to send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope for a 72-page booklet telling how to "preserve the youthful secrets of youth and promote better-than-average nutritional condition, better growth and development, extension of the prime of life and health directions, material improvement of life expectation, higher average level of positive health throughout the life cycle, greater pep...adequate fund of reserve power to tide over emergencies and strains"—in short the man wants V-I-t-a-m-i-n-s.

The seven keys described in the booklet are (1) regeneration diet, (2) sunscreen, (3) essential vitamins and minerals, (4) efficient mastication, (5) exercise, (6) how to breathe and (7) the iodin ration.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Watch Out, Doctor!

Sept. 3, '52, you said "If you can find anyone who doesn't, you will concede I'm one I'll send you with my compliments a full set of Little Leaves in the Path of Health." Some time ago when I quoted you to our dear daughter, he said, "The trouble with that fellow is that he is ten years ahead of the medical profession in general." (J. D. R.)

Answer—Thank you. Now if we can pin it on the doctor so he can't disavow it, the publishers will come along promptly—the same 72 volume set that the publishers' contributor back five simoleons. But I warn you, most medical doctors are afraid to express even mild approval of or agreement with anything I write here—afraid their colleagues and competitors will think them crackpots. Lacking any commendable teaching in their curriculums. The real doctors have to be wary about that.— It is different in print—I suppose I have no reputation at stake, so I can tell the truth without any compunction about what other doctors may say.

Young Daughter's Nutritional Condition

My 15 year old daughter has some gray hair, and she is very sensitive about it.—(Mrs. R. W. fine

Answer—Girls in their early teens are sensitive, naturally. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for booklet telling (do not use a clipping) for the pamphlet The Iodin Ration.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE REMEDY OF BOOKS

Nothing has revealed the world to me, as well as human books, as have books. When I feel most lost, lonely, and least appreciated, I go to one of my books and find a friend in whom I trust. Books are the expression of people. They are the people still, as no physician could offer.

I have met more characters, and made them by intimate books, than I can ever have in my every-day life. And these are the friends that I cannot do without, as no physician could offer.

I have met more characters, and made them by intimate books, than I can ever have in my every-day life. And these are the friends that I cannot do without, as no physician could offer.

I have met more characters, and made them by intimate books, than I can ever have in my every-day life. And these are the friends that I cannot do without, as no physician could offer.

I have a carefully selected group of such friends. I have put between bookends that I go to time and again for their soothing and inspiring effects upon my mind. They are upon a variety of subjects. Books that bring me messages to them for the soul, I can always find a comforting voice in any one of them.

When I am troubled or confused I go to my books, as I would to an intimate friend. They hold the remedy for many a problem. They are distilled life!

Carnilton United Church, beautifully decorated with large baskets of "mums", was the scene of a pretty wedding when Edna Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Furmidge, of Corbyville, was united in marriage to Ronald Theodore Bissett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bissett, of Vineland. Rev. W. H. Warwick officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. H. Farnham and the soloist, Miss Joan Shindell, sang before the ceremony, "A Wedding Prayer", and during the signing of the register, "Because".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin with molded bodice and full skirt. A pillbox cap held her floor-length veil of Chantilly lace and she carried a cascade of Joanna Hill roses and stephanotis.

Miss Flora Furmidge, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, gowned in orchid taffeta with a nylon net and she carried a cascade of pink carnations and white "mums."

Mr. Charles Hibbett was the groomsman for his brother, and the ushers were, Messrs. Fred Furmidge and Earl Hibbett.

The reception, was held in the church hall, tastefully decorated, with the Women's Auxiliary catering. The bride's table was centred by a three-tier wedding cake and flanked by carnations and roses.

The bride's mother, gowned in rose crepe, wore a red corsage of bronze "mums, with the bridegroom's mother, gowned in grey floral crepe, with bronze "mums," with the bridal party, received the guests.

Mr. Merrick proposed the toast to the bride, to which the bridegroom replied.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was a matching set of gold brooch and earrings; The bride's gift to her bridegroom, a pen and pencil set. The gifts to the ushers were gold tie-clip sets and to the best man a gold pen.

Amid showers of confetti the bride and bridegroom left for points east. They will reside in Belleville.

Guests were present from Port Hope, Kinsale, Vineland, Picton, Toronto, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Hamilton and Welland.

NOLAN—SMITH

White standards and multi-colored gladioli and ferns formed a pretty setting on Saturday, October 18th, at 10:30 a.m. in Bridge Street United Church parsonage, when the Rev. Duncan McTavish united in marriage, Noreen Gwynne Smith, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orvis Smith, of Belleville, to William John Nolan, also of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nolan.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her bridal gown of white Chantilly lace over net, fashioned with molded bodice and matching Chantilly lace insets having a small mandarin collar and long, tight-fitting sleeves ending in lily-points over the wrists. The full skirt was of ballerina length. A Juliet cap of matching lace, accented by tiny clusters of white flowers, held her fingertip veil of tulle illusion and she carried a hand bouquet of white roses tied with white satin ribbon.

Miss Jean Nolan, of Belleville, was the only attendant, attractively gowned in mauve Chantilly lace over taffeta in ballerina length, with matching bolero and short sleeves. She wore a Juliet cap of net, matching mitts, and carried a hand bouquet of yellow Talisman roses.

Mr. Robert F. Nolan, of Belleville, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman.

The reception was held at the home of the bride, where the bride's mother wore a mauve nylon ensemble with navy accessories and corsage of white carnations, assisted by the bride's mother, gowned in navy with contrasting white, with navy jacket, and grey accessories, with corsage of white carnations and red roses.

Following the reception, the young couple left for Niagara Falls, Hamilton, and Buffalo, the bride travelling in a dress grey wool gabardine suit with navy accessories, and corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Nolan will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Oshawa and Demorestville.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was entertained at a shower given in her honor at the home of Mrs. L. Hicker on North Front Street; and at a shower at the home of Mrs. J. McCrory, John Street, and also by the staff of the Bell Telephone Company, of which the bride is an employee.

Women's Canadian Club Celebrates Diamond Jubilee With Delightful Luncheon

Yesterday afternoon was a time of special significance for the Women's Canadian Club as it met in the newly renovated Booth hall of Bridge Street United Church for the annual luncheon and diamond jubilee, with Mr. Jack Booth, noted caricaturist and phrenologist, as guest speaker.

Previous to introducing the speaker, Mrs. H. Hickey, president of the club, briefly mentioned that there were 75 different Women's Canadian Clubs across Canada, celebrating this jubilee with a membership of 40,000; of the part they play in stimulating lives, widening horizons, and instilling high ideals. Mrs. Hickey also expressed her appreciation in being the presiding officer at this signal luncheon.

Mr. Booth, in spite of his affirmation that appearing before so many women was a "frightening experience" soon showed that he was master of the situation as he hailed the various ladies, whose traits had captivated him, to the platform for a reproduction of their skilful sketch. This was preceded by trepidation of the subjects, as they from time to time stole side long glances at the emerging portrait (cartoon) while gales of laughter echoed from the delighted audience.

To perfect his drawing, Mr. Booth gave a short talk on phrenology, showing by a general outline of the human head, the various characteristics, 45 in all, which go to make up the divisions, using as he did so, a sketch of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin, in depicting the three out-standing personalities. These in turn showed a receding forehead, denoting quick thinking, a good bump of reverence, denoting ability, and a receding chin which typified quick action, as Hitler.

Mussolini, showed a protruding forehead, a slow thinker, poor membone and prominent chin, showing slow action. Taken altogether, it denoted one likely to get into a lot of trouble, which subsequent events proved.

Stalin's characteristics showed one who thinks clearly and well and acts quickly.

The last cartoon was that of Winston Churchill, which, said the speaker was the exception to the rule, Mr. Booth also intimated that phrenology could only be of value when dealing with those of the DOG, as the bony structure of different races, was the cause of the difference between the white and the black.

Preceding luncheon, the invocation prayer, "We Praise Thee, O God, Our Redeemer, Creator," was most pleasingly rendered by Mrs. F. Houston.

A full hour of delightful music was also rendered by Mr. Dorland Houston at the console of the church organ, and included the following selections: "Priere A Notre Dame," from the Cotique Suite; "Romance" by Rubenstein; "Evening Star," by Wagner; and "Barcarolle," from Tales from Hoffman.

The ladies who posed included Mrs. E. Hickey; Mrs. Doolittle, Mrs. R. Martin of Stirling; Mrs. A. C. Cameron; Mrs. F. S. Wilson; Mrs. G. Faulkner and Mrs. T. E. Argue.

Appreciation was voiced to Mr. Booth by Mrs. I. Langlois, secretary at the club, for his humorous versatile, informative and unique portrayal of an interesting subject.

The delightful luncheon was provided by groups from the Women's Association of Bridge Street United Church, with special thanks being tendered by Mrs. Hickey to Mrs. Harley Wray, to Mrs. E. Falman, to Mrs. F. Houston, to Mrs. T. K. Franklin and to Mr. Dorland Houston, who so kindly gave of his time and talent, making the afternoon one of such signal success.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Five persons were injured yesterday when a bus and dump truck collided at an intersection. Three bus passengers—Mrs. Lawson of Hornell, N.Y., Mrs. Henry Robinson of Grimsby Beach and William Best of Hamilton—were taken to hospital with cuts and undetermined injuries. W. Mr., Mrs. C. Cannons Honored by Family, Relatives, Friends

A gathering of 40 relatives and friends, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cannons, Consecon, R.R. 2, on Sunday evening, to honor them on their 45th wedding anniversary.

The first part of the evening was spent with watching television and visiting. A contest was given by Miss Marjorie Cannons, which was won by Mrs. Ralph Margetson and Mr. William Fry.

At ten o'clock, the honored couple were called forward and were presented with a bouquet of white and yellow baby 'mums, tied with a white bow, from the 13 grandchildren and one great grandchild, such as the bride carried on her wedding day. They were also given a plant and a table radio by the family of three sons and one daughter, being Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cannons, (at home), Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cannons and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cannons, Consecon, R.R. 1, and Mr. and Mrs. William Fry, of Belleville.

Mrs. Cannons' costume was completed by a yellow and white baby 'mums corsage, tied with silver ribbon for this happy occasion.

As Mr. Cannons is leaving in the near future for a trip to England, to visit his 91-year-old mother, and other relatives, he was presented with a stationwagon coat, also from the family.

After both had expressed their thanks for the lovely gifts, also for the many cards and congratulations received, "For They Are Jolly Fellows" was sung.

Bounteous refreshments were then served with an anniversary cake. There were four generations present, which added to the event of the evening. Relatives were present from Oshawa, Peterborough, Belleville and Consecon.

All wished the bride and groom, many more happy wedded years together.

On Wednesday evening a novel and most successful euchre was held in the senior room of Prince of Wales School by the Home and School Association with the proceeds going to the playground equipment fund.

The winners were: Ladies, Mrs. Pymer, A. Thompson; consolation, Mrs. Nevery, Men's, D. Dickens, K. Carter; consolation, T. Bedford.

Delicious refreshments were served by the room mothers for the occasion. The door prize was won by Mrs. Corneal.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's jealous—shall she make him so, too?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going steady with Joe for over two years, and love him very much. I believe he loves me very much, too, but the trouble is that he takes me for granted.

We usually go out every Saturday, and he never bothers to ask me if I ever want to go out or to tell me what time he will call for me. He just comes over to my home and expects me to be ready.

I have a very jealous nature, and I get angry because he tells me about how much fun the girls in his school are and how he often kids around with them. You see, we go to different schools. He doesn't see my reason for not to be jealous because he says that he loves only me. We often have arguns about this, and I don't want to break off with him, but if he keeps on this way I break-up. I will be inevitable. Do you think it would be wise for me to try and make him jealous?—A. L.

Dear A.L.:

A break-up certainly will be inevitable if you set about doing anything so foolish as to deliberately try to make your boy friend jealous. Nothing could speed up about a break-up faster than for you to stir up trouble between you.

You evidently don't believe your boy friend when he says that you are his only girl. If he is someone in whom you have so little confidence, why would you want him anyhow? No relationship between two people can last if either distrusts the other.

As for what you say about his taking you for granted, there are very simple ways to deal with that matter, if you really wish to. For one thing, since you are accustomed to spending Saturdays together, ask him the night before—or the last time you see him before Saturday—what time you should expect him that day, explaining that you have a lot of things to do on Saturdays and want to plan to get everything in. Or, if you want to go that far, you could be out many Saturday afternoon, so that when he arrives he finds you gone. However, either of these seems to me rather foolish, since you say you have been going steadily for over two years and your Saturday routine has become established in a certain pattern.

Your best chance of holding this boy is to let him know, act as though you were interested in what he had to tell about the other girls and give no hint whatever that you mind. If you listened to keen eye-rolling and arguing with him about what he does, you might as well say good-bye to him right now.

How conventional must an engaged couple be?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 30 years old, and recently became engaged after a courtship of over two years.

Now I have a problem. My fiance asks me to go away with him on weekends, and previous to this I have gone, but always had a chaperone. Is it still necessary to have someone accompany me, or would it be proper to go alone? I want to do the right thing and not have everyone whisper about me.

My fiance is a fine man, but I hesitate because I don't want to do anything that would not be wise.—M. H.

Dear M.H.:

Of course if you wish to keep yourself absolutely above the possibility of criticism or gossip, you can only do it by living completely in accord with the conventions. Actually, I can see no possible harm in you and your fiance spending a week-end at the same place without a chaperone, provided, of course, that you do nothing to which anyone could possibly take exception. I am assuming that you are not talking about spending the week-end with mutual friends, which obviously is quite proper, but about going to some week-end resort.

However, as I say, the only way to be sure you will not be criticized; "whispered about", as you put it, is to "lean over backward" in the conventional direction. You will just have to make your own decision on that basis.

Food For Thought

Feeding The Two Hundred

By Mary Moore

You talked me into it. Yes you did. For once I was going to keep quiet about the big party our local Press Club held, but so many of you want quantities for fancy sandwiches for the days you are throwing and fancy cookies, too, that I have decided I couldn't do better than to tell you what we did for that bridge party.

We limit the tables to fifty, which means we have to prepare food for two hundred people.

Last year, you will remember, I was convener of this bridge party, and made all of the sandwiches for it in my kitchen. This year I'm president and did not need to do this work, for we have a very capable and willing convener, but we decided to make the sandwiches together at my house anyway—for fun.

It took quite a bit of figuring to arrive at the following amounts so if there are ambitious hostesses reading this who intend to hold receptions or weddings for their daughters—or who have been tagged as conveners in the clubs they belong to—I would be glad if you would clip this. Once a year is enough.

AMOUNT OF BREAD FOR SANDWICHES FOR 200

I ordered 12 loaves of bread sliced lengthwise of the loaves. Two were colored pink, 2 green, 2 yellow, 3 were whole wheat and 4 were white loaves. There is considerable waste in crusts so be sure to plan some way to dispose of these crusts without wasting them. Surely some of your friends have chickens, or will need to stuff a turkey!

FIVE DIFFERENT SANDWICH FILLINGS

(1) Chicken—I cooked 2 boiling fowl weighing 7 1-2 lbs altogether, in the pressure cooker (with 4 cups water) at 10 lbs. pressure for 1 hour. Then I let them cool in a tray until I could slip the meat from the bones. I put it through the coarse knife of the food grinder and add 1-4 lb. soft butter, 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon salt, about 1-2 teaspoon pepper. This we made up into nice pinwheel sandwiches by spreading on full-length slices of bread in all of the different colors. They should be wrapped in wax paper then in damp towel and chilled all day to put into good pinwheels. We also made 3-decker ribbon sandwiches with this, using the egg-mixture (below) in combination with it in the second layer.

(2) Egg—I hard-boiled 1 dozen eggs by simmering them 1-2 hour. Chilled, peeled, then put them through grinder with 1-2 small onion. Added butter, mayonnaise, salt and pepper as above. To 1-3 of this I added 1-2 cup green relish well-drained. To second 1-3 I added 1-2 cup chopped pimento olives. The we made into all varieties of sandwiches with each of the different colors of bread.

(3) Lobster—3 7-oz. tins lobster were drained and boned and then stretched with 1-2 cup finely chopped celery and butter, mayonnaise, salt and pepper as above and we added 1-2 tablespoon paprika.

(4) To 1 lb. nippy cream cheese we added 1-2 lb. butter and 1-3 cup mayonnaise. Divided it in halves and to 1-2 added 1-4 lb. chopped pecans. To second 1-3 we added 1-2 cup chopped pimento olives.

(5) To 1 lb. soft dates put through chopper we added 1-2 lb. peanuts, juice of 1-2 lemon, 3 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon salt.

Some of the sandwiches we made into just two slices and cut into triangles. We made up open face sandwiches cut with fancy cutters to top each plate. In all with the five different colors of bread, five different fillings, and different shapes we had 30 varieties of sandwiches, which made a very pretty picture on each plate. Each plate contained from 18 to 16 sandwiches. We put two pretty paper doilies on each plate and made a wall by joining them at the centre. Sandwiches were on one side—fancy cookies on the other.

I haven't space for the fancy cookies here today so will have to give them to you next week. I hope you feel stronger than I did the day after.

Fashion Flashes

SAME THOUGHT expressed for stoles on gloves applies to hose —we hope the sparklers stick through the laundering. Any way, a handsome new stocking has a hand-detailed, face-like heel pattern, outlined in black and sparkled with rhinestones. There is a co-ordinated pump for the toe, making for a very dressy twosome.

EASY TO WEAR, and right for almost any daytime occasion, is a dress of supple wool jersey in beautiful pastel shades. The sample bodice is a swirl of sunburst pattern, and in the skirt, swirls the wide-midriff section in plain.

SOFT AND FEMININE lingerie this season is going in for yards of 'em, and not all of the accordion variety. For instance, a bandeau bra and nylon tricot petticoat is made entirely of wavy, honeycomb pleats. At the hem there's a deep ruffle of embroidered nylon organdie, but same pleats.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

If no "R.s.v.p." on invitation, should one reply?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I have twice lately received wedding invitations addressed on the outside envelope to Mrs. Frank Smith, and on the inside envelope my husband's name included, and Mrs. Frank Smith. I had always thought that the outside envelope should also be addressed to both husband and wife. Which is correct, please?

2. When an engraved invitation to an At Home, does not have R.s.v.p. on it, should the invitation be replied to, whether one is accepting or declining?—Wondering Reader.

(1) You are right. Both the outside and inside envelopes should carry the names of both husband and wife. The outside envelope includes the full name: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith. The inside envelope carries the last name only: Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

2. Any invitation that carries R.s.v.p. on it, should, of course, be answered. And although it is not strictly necessary to reply to an invitation that does not have R.s.v.p. on it, many people do courteously reply to these invitations. . .taking the gracious point of view that although no answer is required, it is, naturally, polite, to reply, to thank for the invitation and to say whether or not they can accept.

"Here Comes the Bride". . . and the groom sinks into his seat!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When two girls and two men go to a church wedding together, what is the proper seating arrangement for them in the pew to which the bride escorts them? —The girls.

It's a wedding . . . and "the girls" should have the seats nearest the "romantic aisle", so . . to speak. In the wedding party at close range when "Here Comes the Bride" is played. Their men companions may pass by the girls in the pew as gallantly as they please, but in the circumstances . . . or else the girls may stand at the end of the pew and let the men step in first. This is a procedure where "gentlemen first" is proper, more convenient for the ladies in the aisle-seat at a wedding!

PLANT TO RENFREW

BRANTFORD (CP) — The Brantford division of Cockshutt Aircraft Limited is being transferred to Renfrew, it was announced yesterday. The move unites the two parts of the company which took over the Brantford plant at the request of the Canadian government. It is one of the 400 companies under contract to A.V. Roe Company at Malton, near Toronto, to make parts for Orenda jet engines.

More Opportunities in Public Service, Politics Demanded At Liberal Women's Meeting

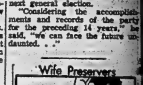
OTTAWA (CP)—A demand for more opportunities in politics and public service was made yesterday at the biennial meeting of the National Federation of Liberal Women.

More than 300 delegates at the convention passed resolutions calling for a larger political role for women, following discussions on problems of organization needed to win elections.

One resolution said that when women are prepared to run as federal candidates in federal or provincial elections, they receive "official party support." It did not elaborate.

Other resolutions asked that women now "mean business" in politics. They had been lackadaisical in the past but from now on would be "right in there."

British Columbia president Mrs. G. W. Klesick said that B.C.'s June provincial election, which put a Social Credit government in power, may not have reflected the wishes of the people.



Cherrier Confident

"We feel that the people protested louder than they thought—that many of those registering disapproval were shocked by the accumulated results," said Mrs. Klesick, referring to the Liberal government's defeat. ". . . We must see that we regain our rightful place as the true party of the people."

Transport Minister Cherrier told delegates at a luncheon he was confident of the outcome of the next general election.

"Considering the accomplishments and records of the party for the preceding 14 years," he said, "we can face the future undaunted. . ."

Mrs. Bell's group will be in charge of flowers for the church for the month of November, except for anniversary Sunday when the Guild will provided suitable flowers.

Mrs. R. Price, one of the Guild leaders, is leaving the city for the near future, regrets were expressed at losing a valuable worker.

For the November meeting the Friendship Group will provide entertainment, while Mrs. Bell's group will furnish refreshments.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker of the evening, Mrs. A. Wonnacott, who was introduced by Mrs. C. Ryan, spoke on her recent trip by air to Scotland, the land of her birth. Boarding the plane at New York, at 6:30 in the evening, the following morning at 7:30 they were flying above Scottish soil, which from the sky resembled a brightly colored patchwork quilt.

Their first trip was visiting three Lochs, Loch Lomond containing 34 lakes and dozens of horsebeauty could be seen in its waters. In the second Loch they viewed the British fleet at anchor. The largest battleship, the "King George", was seen among many others. No matter what your means of travel, at no time are you very far from some body of water.

The potato crop in Scotland being heavier this year, it was said that eighteen hundred children from Glasgow, under supervision of their teachers, were sent to the farms to assist in gathering in the potato crop. The potatoes are gathered and stored in trenches, buried with straw and earth which protects them from the frost, then taken out as needed.

Glamis Castle

One of the highlights of the trip was a visit to Glamis Castle, the home of the beloved Queen Mother. Here they were privileged to see the Queen Mother's private sitting room containing petite point chairs. Also of interest was a replica of Bonnie Prince Charles' bed which has the names of 11 grandchildren embroidered in circles on the canopy as was the large four-poster bed.

At either side of a large open fireplace stand two small hand-carved chairs which the Queen and Princess Margaret Rose used to occupy, as children, when visiting their grandparents at Glamis.

The Countess of Strathmore was noted for her beautiful embroidery.

Not to be forgotten was the trip by bus to Balmoral Castle and the adventurous journey over the Balmoral hills.

Balmoral Castle is very secluded and is closed entirely to tourists during the time the royal family are there. On this particular day, the Queen Mother was seen, on her way to attend some social function, as she is very popular.

The homes of famous people such as Sir James Barrie, R. L. Stevenson, Lady Tweedsmuir and Robinson Crusoe, were visited.

No trip to Scotland would be complete without seeing Edinburgh visiting its stores, the famous floral clock and historical St. Giles Cathedral.

Valley of the Tay

Journeying up the valley of the Tay can be seen many ruins of old castles. At Stirling is Wallace's monument and Stirling Castle.

When the speaker finished, her listeners felt they too had been in Scotland.

Thanks were expressed by Mrs. Wallace Marner on behalf of all present.

A social half hour was enjoyed with Mrs. Fleming's group serving refreshments.

Kinette Play Host To Hallowe'en Ghost

The monthly meeting of the Belleville Kinette Club was held at St. Thomas' Parish Hall, Oct. 27th, with thirty-nine members present. Amid eerie surroundings members were greeted by a witch and her kettle of brew. The tables were decorated with pumpkins, cats, friendly lizards and worms.

After a delightful dinner, a short business session was held with reports given from various committees. The members of the club voted and passed on the following items: that the club contribute $25 to the Community Chest; also that the proceeds from the swimming pool canteen operated by the Kinette, during the summer, be allocated to the purchase of an under water vacuum cleaner for the swimming pool, which will cost about $200. Plans presented.

Attendance pins were presented by past president Maude Sollins. Nine members received 100 per cent pins; two members 200 per cent pins, and 12 members received 300 per cent pins.

The remainder of the evening took the form of a hastily committed murder and mock trial. The corpse, Kinette Marg. Hallam, the prosecuting attorney Kinette Eve Yenover, with the following suspects, Jean Smith, Celia Lipes, Ruth Polwell, Mary Colling, and Agnes Walker.

Several games were played such as ducking for apples and guessing "Whose Ghost Am I?", which lent a further Hallowe'en spirit to ag already bewitching evening.

Kinette Mary Collin introduced four prospective members, Marg Baker, Muriel Brophy, Sophie Davidson, Lois Gill and a guest of the evening, Dorothy Wilbur.

President Ruth Polwell presided while Kinette Isobel Mundy was sergeant-at-arms and the song leader, Betty Sullivan.

More and More Daytime Shoe Styles Losing Height Since Queen in Canada

By MURREL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, (CP)—Since the Queen, then Princess Elizabeth, stepped on Canadian soil in high-lacing pumps with "sensible" heels, more and more daytime shoe styles have been losing height.

At a footwear exhibition in London's exclusive Mayfair district, where silk-clad ladies in Louis heels stepped from horse-drawn carriages in another era, shoe manufacturers showed press and buyers what smart women will be wearing in coronation year.

For long hours of standing and sight-seeing, part of royal pageantry, the wide variety of "town walkers", aimed as smart accessories for coronation suits and dresses, will be popular. Perfect balance and easy walking are achieved by smart court styles with Cuban or medium heels, built-up leather heels and high heels that are "just right".

General Trend

Even light-weight strap sandals have lower heels than were fashionable just after the Second World War. There are, of course, spindly heels in day wear, sandals and evening wear for those who must have them, but smart styles for every occasion, with heels as low as one inch, are more up-to-date.

And, of course, the latest thing is backless shoes could not be worn with a too-high heel. Even the "mule" look fashion fad of the moment achieved by "windows" of plastic leathers, have "comfy" heels.

Fight For Sales

One thing is obvious, said a trade paper, coronation business will have to be fought for. Retailers and manufacturers feel that with money still tight, the many calls on the pocket for coronation festivities will result in footwear becoming one of the more neglected items of new wardrobes.

Despite this, however, a number of coronation styles that are

Contact Club Prepares For Bazaar, Tea

The regular meeting of the Contact Club was held on Monday evening, with the president, Jeanne Jackson, in the chair.

Plans were made to send another Christmas box to the Bishop Hordon Memorial School at Moose Factory, Ontario. Mary remembered the interesting talk on the school which the Rev. H. Seegmiller gave last year. The members were asked to help fill the box for these deserving children.

Everyone was pleased with the results of the recent sales, an auction sale among the members themselves, and a rummage sale last Saturday. Also, a special vote of thanks was given to Grace Young and Isabel Rainbird who made the delicious grape jam and jelly from the Harvest Festival decorations, and realized a tidy sum for the bazaar.

Evelyn Warham is to take charge of the sale of the booklet, "Forward", and Betty Fraser will be managing the sale of the church calendars. Members were urged to have one of these fine calendars in their homes.

At the parish tea and bazaar to be held early in December, the club has again decided to have a nursery and Grace Young will be in charge.

Mary Fletcher is to be convener of the Christmas party to be held on the last meeting in December. She will be assisted by Marion Huson, Hilda Smith, and Betty Fraser.

After the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Hilda Smith, Jean Adams and Marg Cooke.

CHARGE DISMISSED

KITCHENER (CP)—A charge of breach of the rules of the road against Eric Arndt of Brantford was dismissed in court yesterday by Magistrate J. B. H. Kirkpatrick. Arndt allegedly made a left turn in front of approaching traffic. The magistrate ordered Arndt to have another driver's test.

HAD BIG SEASON

HARTLAND, N.B. (CP)—August Fraser looks back on a great summer of fishing. Between May and the end of September he caught 15 salmon in a St. John River pool near here, the largest weighing 18 pounds four ounces.

WHAT THE AUTUMN BRINGS.

What does the autumn bring us?
Wind and cloud and rain,
Golden, mellow sunlight,
Parting the clouds again,
And a cavalcade of color
Passing o'er hill and plain.

She never fails to bring us
Of fruits a golden store,
And freighted fields of harvest
And barn bins running o'er,
And at eve a cozy fire-side
Within a close-shut door.

What does the autumn bring us?
The maple's crimson crown,
The blazing trees on the hill-top
Like sentinels looking down
On the river's edge, where the sumachs
Are wearing their scarlet gown.

But soon the trees will be barren,
And winds will wail and weep,
And all the world of nature
Be folded in winter sleep—
But oh! that the days might bring us
World peace, so calm and deep.
—Helen B. Anderson.

Coronation Fashion Parade Illustrates Revolution Now Taking Place in Fabrics

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—London's first coronation fashion parade, held in the spacious Royal Festival Hall, illustrated the revolution now taking place in fashion fabrics.

Older generations may still say there's nothing to beat a real wool or silk, but the race is on between synthetic and natural yarn fabrics —and synthetics are in the lead.

This is because business women in general have their money on synthetics. An anthracite sheath dress with deep, beaded cummerband, three-quarter sleeves and high neckline in rayon alpaca, is cheaper than one of smooth worsted suiting. And many think the rayon looks every inch as smart. Fabric Exhibition

The show, featuring a parade of more than 60 models, was primarily a fabric exhibition and foremost theme of the dress display was to show how luxurious effect achieved by synthetic fabrics when handled by some of Britain's foremost couture designers.

Take, for instance, the group of models designed by Michael Sherard as a boutique collection. The fabrics are inexpensive babycord, rayon seersucker lipped with velvet, tailored denim and waffle cotton.

In black and gold check with slim lines and back pleating on the skirt, the rayon seersucker is a smart street dress with a couture look that is emphasized by the black velvet roll collar, cuffs and belt.

The royal look is seen in the constant use of velvets from cotton velvets to nylon and street velvets in everything from princess-line coats to the ermine-tipped coronation robes of a viscountess. The royal purple velvet was worn over a white satin damask gown woven with thread of gold heraldic symbols, the gown in traditional court style with square neckline, slim lines and folds of material forming a train.

Fashion Flashes

CAN'T THINK how any gal is going to sidestep choosing at least one wool dress this fall. This fabric has fine new qualities, handles well and is a bargain at every price level. Afternoon jersey dresses have bits of glitter, for example, being a tiny collar encrusted with pearls and sequins.

THERE'S INTEREST still in the full, quilted skirt of felt or woollen for informal evening or smart at-home wear. A new one is of white woollen, lavishly embroidered with black braid, and worn with a black jersey top with an off-shoulder berthe, also braid-edged.

ALL WE HOPE is that there have been techniques worked out to hold fast all the bead trims favored for gloves this season. A short white glace glove, for instance, has a cuff outlined with rhinestones. The same sparkling stones, only much smaller, outlining the thumb.

bags, just now, is shell. A handsome handbag is of navy suede, a contoured box with an elongated, flat, trunk-like effect, trapped by a small shell handle and shell buckle closing.

WITH US NOW are chilly evenings, which lend opportunities to show off handsome indoor fashions. Color and lovely is a red or dark fuchsia velvet, made with length coachman coat in dark blue elbow-length dolman sleeves, all skirt pockets, surplice bodice and rhinestone button trimming.

BEAUTY

WATCH DRESS DETAILS FOR ELEGANCE

Between godliness and cleanliness comes the nose we are told, and daintiness is synonymous with cleanliness.

Plain Jane cannot discard the nose as have dowdy ears bobbed, but she can be dainty, look as fresh as a daisy, be well groomed. The pretty girl with perfect features and a stunning figure is by-passed by the critical observer if she is not mindful of certain details of appearance. Let her powder her face with a soiled powder puff, for instance, or encase her hands in gloves that are not spotless! One knows at a glance that she is not fastidious. Perfect grooming is the order of the day. It costs nothing but time.

The daily bath possesses cosmetic value, has a refreshing effect upon the complexion. The up-and-coming beauty - quester will never skip it. She will change undies frequently, put on clean stockings every day, change shoes every other day and keep them shined and in order. She will use a deodorant or deterrent in her arm-pits every so often. One never knows!

On the subject of perfume she will do some heavy thinking, being careful to select a scent that is delicate and refreshing. She realizes that the perfume she wears may not be perceptible to her own nose after a few minutes, but it may strike a wallop when it comes in contact with somebody else's nose, so she keeps it toned down, refrains from applying it lavishly.

The system that works out with success is to use the pure essence sparingly, to spray with toilet water after the bath and to place sachets between piles of lingerie, and inside handkerchief and glove boxes.

No girl need be told that nightly creaming of the complexion is necessary to keep the skin smooth and functioning normally. But girls should realize that the neck also requires cosmetic attention, unless it is to appear darker than the facial surface. Then there is the nape line around which, all too often, flutter straight bobs falls that have escaped the pin curling project the night before.

Elbows can be disillusioning, look grey and crinkled on arms that, otherwise are attractive. Give them the leavings when you anoint your complexion. Cream the palm of your hand, cup elbow in it and friction deeply. Nail polish that has gone patchy is a beauty error. Watch the little things, they count.

Women's Institute

CHAPMAN W.I.

The regular meeting of Chapman W.I., was held recently at the home of Mrs. Wm. Woods, with 21 members and three visitors present.

Mrs. Roscoe Robson, district president, brought greetings from Bethel-Zion W.I. She mentioned reasons for and against the printing of district programs, and advised the W.I. to keep the current events section of the Tweedsmuir History up-to-date. She then gave an interesting account of the opening of the Ontario Legislature, and told of some of Ontario's responsibilities in the Cabinet. She closed by advising women to take more interest in government affairs. Mrs. Robson also gave an amusing, yet thought-provoking reading entitled "Women and Flowers".

Historical Research

The program on "Historical Research", was under the leadership of Mrs. Albert Baker, the first number being a story on the early days of Hungerford township. This covered methods of boating and lighting, how foods were stored for winter, also some of the foods eaten, which gave corn in its various forms, a high place in the diet. The earliest medicine was mentioned. The making and the sale of potash was important in those days.

Mrs. L. Elliott read of the African revilla. Indolence, waste of soil, and the tastes fly are considered Africa's greatest drawbacks. Education and fertilizers are recommended to help the food problem. Mrs. S. H. Dafoe reported that her son, Sam Fisher, is now the fourth generation on their farm, it having been in the family since 1847. Mrs. Lincoln Elliott reported that they have the original deed of their farm.

Good Farming

Under standing committees, Mrs. B. Hunt reported on Agriculture in a reading, "Good Farming". For Historical Research, Mrs. Borden Countryman, read excerpts from the Arss Conveners report.

Cards were to be sent to several members of the community who were reported ill.

Refreshments, prepared by Mrs. Harold Fowler, Mrs. E. Bateman, Mrs. H. Countryman, Mrs. T. C. Graham and Mrs. W. Woods, were served while all enjoyed a social half hour.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Fred McCaw, on November 12.

Members were reminded to bring as many articles as possible to the bazaar to be held on November 12.

Approved Deep Waterway Will Float Ocean Shipping Into Lakes, Provide 2,200,000 H.P.

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The long-time dream of St. Lawrence seaway planners is a big stride nearer reality today with the International Joint Commission's authorization for Canada and the United States to go ahead with the power development of the $700,000,000 project.

The move is the next-to-last step in clearing the way for Canadian and U.S. agencies to develop hydro jointly on the International Rapids and for the Canadian government to build alone the deep waterway that will float ocean shipping into the Great Lakes.

If the last hurdle—the designation of a U.S. agency to share the power job—is taken in the next few months, the actual construction job can open in the spring of 1953.

That would bring to fruition an idea that has been, by turns, nursed along and kicked around for more than half a century by successive governments, official bodies and unofficial advocates and opponents on both sides of the big river linking the Atlantic with the inland sea of the Great Lakes.

Signed Pact In 1941

Much of this activity, after many years of off-and-on action and debate, has been concentrated in the last 11 years. It was in 1941 that the two countries signed the latest seaway treaty that led indirectly to today's position. This treaty called for the U.S. and Canada to build both the navigation and power works jointly.

But the U.S. Congress persistently refused to act on it. The Canadian government finally determined last year to go ahead alone with the navigation job, provided a joint power deal could be worked. It got President Truman to join with this country in making the power application to the commission, doing away with the need of congressional action on the treaty.

Now, the double-barrelled project stands this way:

Power: the Ontario Hydro Commission to share with a U.S. entity —perhaps the New York State power authority—the, $400,000,000 cost and the 2,200,000 horsepower of electricity in the harnessing of the plunging Long Sault Rapids upriver from Cornwall, Ont.

Navigation: the federal government to build new canals and enlarge existing facilities—at a cost of about $300,000,000—to provide a 27-foot channel from Montreal into Lake Erie. Only ships up to 14-foot draught now can navigate that stretch.

Power Job Feature

Main feature of the power job will be a dam system locking up the river waters to create a vast pool about 40 miles long in the stretch above Cornwall. Power houses at the lower end will tap the pool for hydro, and locks will accommodate shipping.

The turbulent Long Sault Rapids will be engulfed, and so will several communities on the Canadian side of the International Rapids area. Flooded out completely will be the villages of Mille Roches, Moulinette, Wales, Dickinson's Landing, Farran's Point, Aultsville, East Williamsburg and Iroquois. The largest of the communities—Morrisburg with 1,500 people—will be partly flooded.

Rail and highway facilities running close to the shoreline also will be covered as the water level rises, about 50 feet. The Ontario government introduced a bill in the legislature Oct. 20 to provide compensation for the flooded properties.

Will Remove Dam

Concurrently with the seaway building—though not an actual part of the job—will be the Canadian government's removal of Cot Dam, a 900-foot structure built in 1901 to protect water levels in the canal system. It has been blamed by some for destructively-high water levels in the Great Lakes in recent years. The government recently announced it would remove the dam if the I.J.C. gave authority for the power project.

Elimination of the dam may take about 18 months. The hydro-seaway task, according to latest Canadian estimates, will take five or 5½ years for power and about six years for navigation, including locks near Montreal below the power works.

The seaway phase of the undertaking will be constructed and later administered by a federal "seaway authority" authorized by Parliament late last year. The government has been waiting for the I.J.C. decision before actually setting up the authority.

It has been awaiting this decision too, before proclaiming the federal-Ontario treaty of December, 1951, under which the province is given the right to handle the power development.

Prizes Awarded To Cheesemakers Of Quinte District

PICTON — The Quinte District Cheesemakers' factory improvement competition was climaxed here last night by the presentation of many trophies and prizes for improvement to factories and for high quality cheese. Three hundred attended the annual banquet at which the guest speaker was J. M. Bain, chief dairy instructor central and Western Ontario.

Other features included entertainment by Toronto artists, Doug Romaine, Rudy's Musical Trio and Johnny Dasch all of whom appeared through the generosity of Mayor H. J. McFarland.

FRANKFORD

Scouts to Help In Poppy Sale

FRANKFORD. — Branch 367 of the Canadian Legion held their regular bi-monthly meeting in the Legion Hall on King Street Monday evening, with a fine turnout. As always, the Comrades remembered those who did not return, as they observed a period of silence in tribute to the martyrs of the two great wars. President Holt Madill was in charge of the meeting.

A work party has been called for Saturday, and Comrades are requested to be out Saturday morning to help finish the room on the new kitchen. It will be an all day job, so if anyone cannot be present in the morning, come along in the afternoon.

It was reported that the Legion will shortly be starting bi-monthly "Fun Nights". Watch this paper for further word.

Scouts to Assist

Poppy Day is to be on November 8, and the 1st Frankford Boy Scouts Troop is going to assist in selling of poppies. The Legion is most grateful to Scoutmaster Lazenby and the boys for their Remembrance Day services will be held in the Memorial Park, and all veterans are requested to be present on that day.

A letter from Comrade George Manning, in Kingston Hospital, was read. Friends in Frankford will be happy to know that Com. Manning is coming along well, and will be able to leave the hospital shortly. He plans to spend the winter with his brother in Kingston, before returning home to his cottage north of Frankford.

Comrade Norman was officially welcomed into the Frankford Branch of the Legion, coming by transfer from the Owen Sound Branch.

A donation of $10 was received from Comrade Earle Sadler, to go to the building fund. Another donation of $2 was received from a person who prefers to remain anonymous.

Crowds Fill Church

Last Sunday evening marked the closing of the special meetings which have been held at Emmanuel Gospel Church, with Mrs. Mary Buczynski, of Preston, Ontario. The church was more than filled to capacity with an overflow crowd, many standing, as people gathered from miles around.

Special selections for the evening were a mixed trio, featuring Mrs. Ruth Reilly, Miss Lorraine Arnott and Mr. Paul Spurrell, who sang "Deeper in Thy Love", also a vocal solo by Miss Alfrida Buczynski, of Preston, Ontario, entitled "He is the Theme of My Song."

Services were held every evening except Monday last week, and many gathered to hear the outstanding prophetic teachings of Mrs. Buczynski, Rev. and Mrs. Jarvis, of Athens, Ontario, and Rev. and Mrs. Mason, of Trenton, assisted in the services.

The lovely church interior is set off by a beautiful painting of the River of Jordan, over the baptistry.

Many responded to the call for salvation, healing, baptism and deliverance.

Meetings are continuing with Evangelist Charles Olsen preaching vital messages.

The public is invited to visit Emmanuel Gospel Church opposite the post office. The church has a fine young people's group, and a growing Sunday School, with classes for all ages.

Pastor R. P. Spurrell and the congregation will give all a hearty welcome.

The Lions Club will be holding a Hallowe'en party for the children of the village at the school on Friday evening of this week. All kiddies of Frankford are urged to be out in costume. There will be a good program of entertainment. Prizes will be given for the best costumes. Parents are welcome to accompany their children.

The quartet from the Frankford United Church took part in the morning service in Warkworth United Church, Sunday, and at Minto United Church in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer visited their son, Fred, Mrs. Spencer and baby, in Syracuse, this week.

Basic English classes are being held in the Sacred Heart School in Batawa. It is reported that 47 have thus far enrolled.

RAWDON

RAWDON. — Mount Pleasant Rawdon Sunbeam Mission Band convened at the church Sunday morning, with a large attendance. Several adults were present and 25 children answered roll call.

The offering which included part of the autumn thank offering was gathered by Roger Smith and Rastfern Scott.

Mrs. Rose Jeffs read the story "Samuel" and the 23rd Psalm was Mrs. Herbert Smith as leader conducted a quiz on "The Catechism", dealing with "Our duty to God", "What is Prayer", and "What prayer did Christ give for our guidance".

Miss Eleanor Smith read a Thanksgiving story entitled, "Our Daily Bread", from World Friendship Stories. This little girl thought she could take bread all by herself but through experience she found out that she had to visit the grocer, the miller, the farmer, in order to purchase the grain and that after all it was God who caused the grain to grow. The story closed with the prayer "We Thank Thee O Father for this our Daily Bread".

Plans were made to canvass the community at an early date to sell Christmas cards to augment the funds.

Campaigners Seek New Issue As Last Chance to Get Votes Draws Near in U.S. Election

By E.J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—Weary veterans of the campaign trail sought desperately today for something new to say, some new issue, to sway the last waverers among the United States electorate.

The lines were drawn, the decision probably made, but still the torrent of words poured out as one of the last fifteen campaigns in years drove to a roaring finish.

Five days before the vote, the Korean War was still the dominent issue. It seemed that nothing new could be said about it.

Seeking the presidency are Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Republicans and Adlai E. Stevenson for the Democrats. President Truman is campaigning so vigorously for Stevenson that he's almost a candidate, too.

Korean Responsibility

The hot-button about Korea—who is responsible for the war there and what should be done about it—flew freely last night as the campaigners moved about the country in their final whistle-stop tours.

Eisenhower has said that more South Korean troops than now are used should be trained and thrown against the Communists, with United Nations troops pulled back to defensive positions.

The General, who led the Allied forces to victory in Europe in the Second World War, blames the Administration for starting something it can't finish. He said in New York that "American boys" are fighting again for freedom and he asked: "Did they have to do it?

Stevenson, campaigning through Pennsylvania, claimed that his opponent had made "soft promises" about bringing our troops home from Korea and—promises that he knows as well as you and I that he could not keep."

Truman in Chicago accused Eisenhower in effect of posing as a superman—of promising quick, easy solutions to Korean and other problems that actually are too big for him.

Over and over Eisenhower reiterated his pledge that, if elected, he will go personally to Korea to seek a settlement of the war.

Nixon Is News

Another tempest blew up over the financial affairs of California's Senator Richard Nixon, the Republican vice-presidential candidate. Nixon branded as a "lie" a Democratic statement that he and his relatives own real estate valued at $250,000.

He has said that when he got out of the Navy in 1946, he was "too poor to buy stamps for political campaigning."

The Democrats demanded, too, that Nixon produce his income-tax returns for public inspection.

Indicative of the level of this campaign was a full-page advertisement today in New York newspapers, published by the New York Citizens' Committee which works for Eisenhower's election, of a picture of a good-looking boy of perhaps 12 or 14. The caption says: "Is your boy America's only answer to Korea?"

Three-Car Crash Causes $2,800 Property Damage

HAMILTON (CP)—Five persons were taken to hospital and more than $2,800 property damage resulted from a three-car collision involving a police cruiser here early today.

The cars involved were driven by Thomas Turner, 38, of Simcoe, Jack Turner, 30, Stoney Creek, and Morality Officer Louis Kingsley, 33, of Hamilton.

David Allan, 31, of Stoney Creek, was the only one admitted at the General Hospital. A passenger in the car driven by Jack Turner, he suffered from shock and a forehead cut.

Five others treated but later released.

Bevan's Leftists Will Obey Labor Order to Disband

LONDON (Reuters) — Aneurin Bevan's leftists announced last night they will obey a Labor party ultimatum to disband their organized group but will fight for its early restoration.

The ultimatum, approved by a vote of 188 to 31 among all Socialist members of Parliament last week, threatened party expulsion unless the Bevanites broke up their little band. The left-wingers had campaigned for a reduced defence program and less dependence on U. foreign policy.

Last night's announcement said: "We accept the majority decision of our colleagues and for our part, we will abide loyally by it.

"Each of us, however, will take every legitimate step to persuade the Parliamentary Labor party to reverse the decisions and to restore as soon as possible to Labor M.P.s the full rights of free association."

Another Typhoon Hits Indo Chinese Coast

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP) — A typhoon with winds of 120 miles an hour struck the central Indo-Chinese coast today. Reports said it caused heavy damage at the French air and naval base of Tourane.

There were no immediate reports of deaths.

It was the third such storm to hit Indo-China in 10 days. The first, Oct. 21, caused nearly 600 deaths.

Charges Nazi Flung Babies Out Windows

BERLIN (Reuters) — Heinrich Schwindt "took small, crying babies by the scruff of the neck like little cats" and hurled them from upper-storey windows into crowded trucks below when he was a Nazis chief in the Lodz ghetto in Poland, a court was told today.

Lais Kate, former inmate of the ghetto giving evidence at Schwindt's trial, said he saw this happen when the Germans evacuated it in the face of the advancing Soviet armies during the war.

Schwindt is accused of 72 murders, three attempted murders and one rape. He has pleaded not guilty to all charges.

Two Are Killed, Car Crashes Into Abutment

CHATHAM (CP)—Michael John Dundo, 29, and Elizabeth Martha Vellings, 17, were killed early today when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a bridge abutment near here.

Dundo, survived by his widow and two young children, moved to Chatham from Windsor, Ont., in 1948. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dundo, live in Windsor. He was Chatham manager of the Johnston - Turner Electric Company.

Surviving miss Vellings are eight brothers and a sister.

Reindeer Return To Highlands Of North Scotland

EDINBURGH — (Reuters) — Reindeer have returned to the barren highlands of northern Scotland for the first time in 700 years under a government-sponsored experiment aimed at easing Britain's food shortage.

Taking a lesson from the Lapps of Scandinavia and Finland, experts on the reindeer council of Britain look forward to the day when thousands of herds in Scotland provide Britain with milk, food, hides and other products.

The government-backed council released eight Swedish reindeer-cousins of the North American caribou—in Sutherland, remote northwest county of Scotland, last April. Three died, but the other five are reported to be well acclimated.

Ten other reindeer arrived last week-end and are in quarantine waiting to go to the council's special reserve in Sutherland, a sparsely-populated land of hilly moors and bogs.

HAROLD WORTH DIES

MONTREAL (CP)—Harold R. Worth of Montreal, 37, assistant to the general superintendent of the Quebec district, Canadian Pacific Railway, died in hospital Monday night. His first job with the C.P.R. was in 1915 as assistant agent at Cobourg, Ont. He served also at St. Thomas and London, Ont., later becoming dispatcher at Schreiber, Ont., and Toronto.

Vishinsky Asks Assembly To Form Commission, Seek Peace, Unification in Korea

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Russia's Andrei Vishinsky asked the United Nations Assembly last night to form an international commission to seek peace in Korea and unification of that war-torn country. United States delegates at the U.N. generally viewed the proposal as the same old Soviet stuff.

On the commission proposed by Vishinsky would be "the parties directly concerned and other states, including states not participating in the war in Korea."

Vishinsky's resolution would open the door for the Soviet Union to become directly involved. The Russians so far have abstained from a direct, public role in the Korean conflict.

Lashes U.S. Stand

The new Soviet proposal came at the end of a fiery speech in which Vishinsky, for three hours and 39 minutes, lashed back at the U.S. stand outlined last Friday by State Secretary Dean Acheson.

Secretary Lloyd of Britain was the first Western big-power spokesman scheduled to reply to Vishinsky in the assembly's political committee this afternoon.

But Acheson commented last night to reporters that the Soviet foreign minister said "nothing we have not heard a thousand times before, at Panmunjom and here."

Acheson earlier had reiterated the West's determination not to bow to Communist demands for forced repatriation of prisoners. He told reporters Vishinsky "still argued that we must send prisoners home at the point of a bayonet, which, of course, we have no intention of doing."

Vishinsky Wednesday repeated the Soviet charges that U.S. capitalists touched off the Korean War to save a wavering economy.

He scorned the resolution Acheson introduced asking the General Assembly to approve the U.N. command's stand against forcibly repatriating prisoners of war and to urge Communist acceptance of a truce on those terms.

He endorsed as the "only way to achieve peace in Korea" a Polish omnibus resolution which includes a call for immediate cessation of hostilities, repatriation of all prisoners and withdrawal of all foreign troops two to three months after the end of the fighting.

Vishinsky's own resolution asked the assembly to "establish a commission for the peaceful settlement of the Korean question with participation of the parties directly concerned and of other states, including states not participating in the war in Korea."

This would permit Russia to take part in a peace settlement along with possibly such neutral countries as India.

Vishinsky accused the South Korean president, Syngman Rhee, of collaborating with the Japanese years ago, and assailed his regime as one of "repression in the sheepskin of democracy."

FICTON

Secondary School Concert Attracts Large Audience

Ficton—First of three secondary school concerts held here last night attracted an audience of nearly 600 music lovers. The Kenanyeo Club has undertaken sponsorship of the series with 350 regular subscribers. Last night's artists were Ralph Boose, baritone, soloist at St. Paul's Church, Toronto; Beauna Somerville, concert violinist; Loy Markley, coloratura soprano, with Mrs. Minnie McCurdy as pianist. All proved to be gifted artists and many encores testified to the enjoyment of the program.

Mr. Boose opened the program with a group of three numbers, "It is Enough", from Mendelsohn's "Elijah"; "None But a Lonely Heart" by Tschaikowsky, and "Song of the Open Road", by Hallotte.

Violin selection by Miss Somerville included "Rondo Capriccioso" by Saint-Saens; Dvorak's "Humoresque"; Thams and Professional from "Peter and the Wolf" by Prokofieff.

Mrs. McCurdy gave a group of numbers including La Chasse by Liszt; Tweetie (Grieg), Arabesque (Arnold), Impromptu (Faure) Nocturne (Respighi), and in addition was a sympathetic accompanist to the singers.

Miss Markley revealed beauty of tone and a wide range in her group of songs. These included Care Selve from "Atlanta" (Handel); Musetta's Waltz from "La Boheme" (Puccini); Queen of the Night from "The Magic Flute" (Mozart), and Spirit Flower (Tipton).

Mr. Boose and Miss Markley were heard to advantage in several duets. These included My Hero from "The Chocolate Soldier" (Strauss); Rose Marie (Friml and Hammerstein); Wanting You from "New Moon" (Friml and Hammerstein); and Thine Alone from Victor Herbert's "Eileen."

The variety of offerings and the ease with which the singers and musicians performed combined to make the concert the best of its kind yet given here.

Re-Elected Commodore

Mayor H. J. McFarland was re-elected Commodore of Prince Edward Yacht Club at the annual meeting. Donald Thomas and Jack Cole are Vice-Commodores; Herb. Daubney, Rear Commodore; Dick Hart, secretary; W. D. MacArthur, treasurer. Chairman of the House Committee is Herbert Hyatt.

Report of the year revealed that while the regatta had been an outstanding event, financial returns were smaller and the club had an operating deficit of $1,596. Expenses of operating the National championship races here were heavier than usual and added to the deficit. Cost of staging the regatta was $2,826.00.

C. R. Hadrill, Q.C., gave an interesting talk in which he recalled early boating on the Bay of Quinte.

Mr. B. C. Tucker, Bethel, also spoke briefly. Mr. Royal Herman, Chatterton was in attendance.

On Saturday, November 1st, a bee will be held at the cemetery to cut brush and weeds and give the property a general cleaning. The ladies, under the supervision of Mrs. Carr and Mrs. McIntosh, are catering for a pot-luck dinner at noon. Everyone interested in this pioneer cemetery are invited to attend the bee on Saturday.

Hallowe'en Bazaar Attracts Large Crowd

MADOC. — Hallowe'en colors and candles were attractively used as decorations in St. John's Parish Hall on Saturday, when the Madoc Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star held a successful bazaar and tea.

Mrs. Mary Marlatton graciously welcomed the guests, and directed them to the bazaar stalls where they could examine, admire and purchase the many and varied articles on display. The fancy-work table which also included a corner for "Waits Elephants" was particularly interesting.

The beautiful knitted articles, the sewing and other handwork were revealing examples of the talents and ingenuity of the members, while the gift ideas and the "Elephants" were both useful and amusing. Mrs. Flora Kincaid and Mrs. Ida Brad, who were in charge did a brisk business all afternoon.

Corne ref Color

A corner of color and beauty, presided over by Mrs. Elsie Franks, was the 'plant table' and the home cooking table, attracted both men and ladies. Mrs. Theresa Ellsplatrick and Mrs. Mabel Lloyd were completely sold out early in the afternoon not because of quantity of goodies but because of the well-known quality of home cooking.

After a leisurely round of the hall, the tea tables were a pleasant and restful change. Presiding there were Mrs. W. Whytock, who poured tea at the tea table, beautifully decorated with bronze and yellow 'mums and white tapers. Serving were Mrs. Roswell Dafoe, Mrs. George Duffin, Mrs. Ken West, Mrs. V. Batson, Mrs. Kernahan, Mrs. Keller and Mrs. E. T. Naylor. The treasurer for the tea room was Mrs. F. Derry, who also had charge of a draw on a beautiful oil painting. Much credit is due the conveners of the different departments and to all who helped to make the bazaar and tea, a splendid success both financially and socially.

Nature Brings Misery to Poor of Naples

Homeless victims of the worst rain storm to hit the Italian city of Naples in years are shown sitting amid the rubble left in'wake of the storm. The storm damage was estimated in the millions. No deaths were reported, but a number of persons were injured. Twenty inches of water was backed up in the narrow streets of the city's old quarters.—Central Press Canadian.

Minister Says Certain Classes Of Patients Should be Relieved

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Health Minister Phillips said yesterday it is time the private and semi-private hospital patient stopped paying for nursing training "and a lot of other things." He did not elaborate.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Ontario Hospital Association, Dr. Phillips said under the present set-up the province pays $1,800 a bed toward the building of new nurses' homes and the federal government $500.

Cheerful living quarters where a student nurse would not be ashamed to bring her friends or family would help attract young women to the profession, the minister said.

"I favor keeping the admission and other standards for nurses at the highest level."

Against National Plan

Arthur A. Schmon, chairman of St. Catharines General Hospital board of governors, said subsidization of low-income groups to allow them to enrol in Blue Cross, pre-paid hospital car plan "could be supported by those who believe in free enterprise."

He said a national health plan with the government running the hospitals should be "strenuously opposed." But the government should subsidize hospitals to the extent of 40 to 50 per cent.

More than $30,000,000 will be received by Ontario hospitals this year through the Blue Cross scheme, said D. W. Gaffer, director of the Blue Cross plan, in a report to the convention.

The scheme now covers about 1,600,000 persons or 25 per cent of the people of Ontario, he said. Hospitals in Brantford, Toronto, Brockville, Cornwall, Oshawa, Port Colborne and St. Thomas will receive 40 to 50 per cent of their total patient income from blue cross this year.

CAR RANSACKED

TILLSONBURG (CP) — Returning from a wedding in Chicago W. W. Macmillan, well-known St. Catharines druggist, was robbed of clothing valued at $400 when he decided to stay overnight with friends here. Mr. Macmillan parked his car in front of the home of engineer William Botsch on Rolph Street. Yesterday he found that the car had been ransacked.

GAS PLANT TO CLOSE

STRATFORD (CP) — Stratford's gas plant will be closed May 1, 1953 or earlier if the plant breaks down before then. City Council last night approved a sub-committee recommendation that the plant be closed and that the approximately 600 gas consumers be officially advised by the Public Utilities Commission.

Pacific Natives Plunge to Rocks To Show Courage

VILA, New Hebrides. (Reuters)—Mankind has strange ways of choosing its leader. In remote Pacific Isles, where the ballot box is unknown, the choice may depend on feats of endurance almost unbelievable to the western world.

Travellers returning yesterday from Pentecost Island, on the northwest flank of the New Hebrides Islands in the Southwest Pacific, brought with them this tale of how 26 chieftains proved their fitness to rule.

60-Foot Tower

One by one, the 26 Malanesian warriors mounted a 60-foot tower and from varying heights leaped head-first toward the ground. Each walked off without injury. Their lives depended on ropes which pulled them up within a few inches of the crushed coral.

As ton toms rose to a furious crescendo, the final jumper dived earthward in a wide arc.

The crude native rope pulled taut with a loud crack and like the others, he dangled exactly four inches from the ground, upside down. A great throated roar rose from the crowd, signalling the climax of a rite which occurs only once in 100 years.

By risking their lives, the 26 had proved their courage and their right to rule.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking in back of his paper, and ma said, Really, I mean really. William, some women must be blind.

Maybe so, my dear, they say it takes all kinds to make a world, pop said, and ma said, I met Blanche Hipple's sister today, and at first glance she seemed like quite an intelligent person, so you could of knocked me over with a feather when she told me I reminded her of Connie Carmelle. It was utterly ridiculus, ma said.

It was heh? pop said still reading his paper, and ma said, Well naturally, considering that Connie Carmelle has just been voted among the 5 most glammerous women in the movies.

She has, heh? pop said, and ma said, It made me laff, really, I mean really. Connie Carmelle's figure has been sought after by artists, so she could hardly of meant my figure.

I suppose not, pop said, and ma said, She mite of been alluding to my speckling voice, If you want to take a charitable view of her remark, but even that is the bile of absurdity, because Connie Carmelle's singing records sell by the million. In fact she could almost sing in grand opera, ma se'd.

She could, heh? pop said, and ma said, The whole thing is just too preposterous, because when you come to Connie Carmelle's face, she won dozens of beauty contests before she became a star. So there cant be a single point of resemblans, can there, William? she said.

What's that? pop said, and ma said, Would I reconsidy remind you of Connie Carmelle even in your most insane moments?

Why, yes, in a general overall way, now that I think of it, pop said, and ma said, William, you're even more absurd than Hipple's sister.

And she laffed like somebody feeling better instead of worse.

Look for Start On Seaway-Power Project Next Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government looks for a start on construction of the St. Lawrence seaway-power project next year, Transport Minister Chevrier said yesterday.

Mr. Chevrier, elated by a go-ahead order issued by the International Joint Commission in Montreal, made the prediction before the National Federation of Liberal Women at a luncheon.

The minister, who would be in charge of Canada's end of the huge development, expressed the hope that the last major obstacle—securing the United States agency to join with the Ontario government in the project—would be overcome in time for a 1953 beginning.

"Given the same co-operation by the U.S. authorities as we have received up to now," he said, "there is in my mind no doubt that actual construction work will start next year."

Govt. "Delighted"

Mr. Chevrier said the government is "delighted" at the order of the commission, the six-man Canada-U.S. body that regulates use of boundary waters.

He did not discuss the terms of the I.J.C. order—understood to be highly technical—but he said Canada will abide by them. One of the points in the order, it was expected, would be that of making sure the huge hydro development in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River takes into account water levels in the Great Lakes.

High water in the lakes has caused heavy damage along the shorelins during the last few years. Recently, the Canadian government announced that if it got the seaway-power order it would remove Gut Dam in the river. The dam has been blamed by some for the rise of lake waters.

In his speech, Mr. Chevrier placed the over-all cost of the hydro and navigation project at $750,000,000. Previous Canadian estimates have run to about $700,000,000.

The minister said in a later interview that his new figure is based on $450,000,000 for the hydro development on the international rapids just upstream from Cornwall and $300,000,000 for the navigation system which the Canadian government will build alone concurrently with the U.S.-Canada power development.

10 More Canadians Indicted by Grand Jury in Detroit

WINDSOR (CP)—Federal court trials are scheduled for 10 more Canadians indicted by a grand jury in Detroit yesterday on charges of making false statements to obtain visas.

Yesterday's indictments bring to 23 the number of Canadians accused since a full-scale investigation of illegal entry into the U.S. began several months ago. Of these, 54 have already been sentenced to one year's imprisonment or condition that they leave the U.S and do not return for at least five years.

The 10 indicted yesterday will be arraigned Friday morning before Federal Judge Thomas P. Thornton. They face charges of making false statement to obtain visas, then using the visas with the knowledge that they were obtained fraudulently.

Those indicted yesterday are: George and Audry Brown, Eugene and Anna Thelma John, and Mary Oliver, Joseph L. Ducharme, Lyall and Gwendolyn Hodgson, and Harold F. Idsardi.

A-Bombs Keeping Reds at Bay Drew Declares

MORRIS, Man. (CP)— Progressive Conservative leader George Drew said yesterday that only the threat of "dreadful retribution" through atomic energy prevents Russian armies from moving westward.

Mr. Drew spoke at a public meeting here, winding up a five-day tour of rural Manitoba. Earlier he described inequalities under Communist rule to schoolchildren at Steinbach.

"I've seen commissars riding in Rolls Royces," he said.

Speaking here, Mr. Drew delivered a blast at the "Red" dean of Canterbury, Dr. Hewlett Johnson.

"As an Anglican, . . . I regret that he could participate in such shameless dishonesty," Mr. Drew said.

He attended a square dance in Winnipeg last night and today will address the Empire Club at a luncheon. He will attend a nominating convention tonight at a Winnipeg high school.

U. of T. May Have Private Station

TORONTO (CP)—The University of Toronto may have its own private radio station. The Students' Administrative Council yesterday voted to set up a wired radio system that would cover most building on the campus.

Wired radio differs from ordinary radio in that a low-powered transmitter is connected directly to the wiring of University buildings. The broadcast signal is carried by ordinary electrical wiring to listeners.

Student broadcasting has been carried out at Queen's University, Kingston, for several years and recently students at the University of Western Ontario, London, resumed a system of their own.

Hon. O.S. Tyndale Suffers Fatal Heart Seizure

MONTREAL (CP) — Associate Chief Justice O. S. Tyndale of the Quebec Superior Court and former chancellor of McGill University, died last night in his 68th year.

He died in Montreal Neurological Institute from a cerebral haemorrhage. He suffered an attack about a month ago and appeared to be recovering but re-entered the hospital more than a week ago. He suffered a second attack yesterday.

He retired from the chancellorship of McGill last May after serving five years. He was succeeded by E. C. Gardiner, president of the Royal Bank of Canada.

He was the first graduate of McGill to become its chancellor and also the first chancellor who had ever been a member of the McGill faculty prior to his election.

Orville Sherwright Tyndale was born in Montreal June 4, 1887, and was educated in this city, later graduating from the Sorbonne in Paris.

Immediately after his admission to the Quebec bar in the summer of 1913, he entered the armed forces to serve in the First World War. He was gazetted a lieutenant in the 5th Overseas University Company and joined the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in June, 1916.

Wounded in September of that year, he returned to Canada and served on the headquarters staff in Ottawa until December, 1918, when he was demobilized with the rank of lieutenant major.

He started law practice at the start of 1919 and in the same year became a lecturer at McGill in the faculty of law.

He was named associate chief justice in 1942, succeeding the late Mr. Justice W. L. Bond.

Cost of Hospital Care Increased Says Official

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Hospital Association last year approached the provincial government concerning a possible grant to help maintain approved schools of nursing within Ontario hospitals, John Hornal, chairman of the hospital convention's resolution committee, said yesterday.

In spite of pressure, he told the 28th annual convention, nothing had yet been heard from the government in the matter.

Mr. Hornal said the public hospitals in the province carry on approved schools of nursing at great extra expense to themselves and so provide, in addition to their usual services, an important public service.

Mr. Hornal reported that the cost of hospital care has increased substantially during the last few years. Municipalities are in many cases refusing to supplement the statutory rate to make up the loss incurred in caring for their indigent sick.

Dr. G. Harvey Agnew, professor of hospital administration at the University of Toronto, said that to go on providing more and more beds at present day costs, and with continually rising standards in facilities and equipment, is fast becoming a financial impossibility.

A total of 132 cases of tuberculosis were discovered in Ontario in the year ending last March 31 by a program of X-raying patients in general hospitals, Dr. S. A. Holling of the provincial department of health said.

DUKE MAY FLY

LONDON —(Reuters) — The Duke of Edinburgh, husband of the Queen, is "considering the suggestion" that he learn to fly. The RAF and the Royal Naval Air Service have been vying for the job or training him. Reports last night indicated that the Duke will accept the invitation.

Queen's Speech Closing House Read to Lords

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen's speech closing Parliament today said she had watched with hope and confidence the measures taken by the Atlantic treaty countries to secure themselves against the threat of armed aggression.

The royal speech, traditional method of winding up a session of Parliament, was read for the Queen in the House of Lords by a commission of peers headed by the lord chancellor, Baron Simonds. As usual it was mainly a recital of the government's achievements in home and foreign affairs during the session.

The address closed Parliament for a week's recess. It will reassemble for a new session Nov. 4.

The address stressed the United States leadership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, paying tribute to "the notable contributions made to the strengthening of the organization and of its member countries by the people of the United States of America who are bearing so large a share of the heavy cost of mutual defence."

Winning Fight

On Britain's fight for economic recovery the Queen said: "My government, with the help of other Commonwealth governments and of the sterling area as a whole, have taken effective steps to redress the balance of payments and to maintain the strength of sterling as an international currency."

The address, written by the cabinet, began with a reference to the late King: "My beloved father whose death was so deeply mourned throughout the Commonwealth and beyond."

It added: "The countless expressions of devotion to him have moved me deeply and encouraged me in my resolute determination to prove worthy of a sacred trust."

On Korea, the speech said Britain had "worked ceaselessly to achieve an armistice agreement in conformity with the principles for which the United Nations stand."

On the war in Malaya: "My forces and the civil administration are carrying out a difficult task with patience and determination. In spite of great loss and suffering all communities are playing an ever more-active part in the defence of their freedom."

New Relationship

"My ministers have supported the inclusion of the German federal republic in the European community and by ratifying the Bonn conventions have formed a new Kingdom and Germany," the speech continued.

"I regret, however, that prolonged exchanges between my government and the Soviet government have not yet ended in agreement upon the unification of Germany."

NARCOTICS SENTENCE

TORONTO (CP)—Fred Lee Washington, the Buck of the Buck and Bubbles vaudeville team, yesterday was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $200 or an additional six months for illegal possession of marijuana. Jointly charged with Washington, Benjamin Wheeler also was sentenced to six months and fined $200 or another six months.

Nixon Charged With Plotting Election Deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gerald L. K. Smith charged today that a representative of Senator Richard Nixon had tried to make a deal with him to withdraw the Christian Nationalist party ticket before Tuesday's election.

The Republican vice-presidential candidate's campaign manager denied the charge. The senator in a speech had termed Smith an advocate of racist theories.

Said Smith, who heads the Christian Nationalists:

"Senator Nixon's attack on me in his nation-wide radio broadcast (Wednesday) revealed him as a complete and conscienceless hypocrite.

"Less than one week ago a representative of the Nixon strategy committee headed by Dana Smith propositioned me for support. They made extravagant and flattering promises provided Senator Jack B. Tenney (of the California legislature) and I would pull the Mac-Arthur-Tenney presidential ticket out of the national contest.

"For Nixon's agents to proposition me secretly on one hand while attacking me publicly on another only reveals and emphasizes the president's hypocrisy of the whole Eisenhower-Nixon outfit."

The Christian Nationalists are running Gen. Douglas MacArthur for president and Tenney for vice-president.

And, with all that shooting going on, Pal had to go out in early morning, and stay out until late in the day. With a thousand muzzled Bonny with him for company to shorten his miles, he had something to talk to and he was ever alert for poachers. Bonny was a good companion; she was obedient, she was always near enough to be neared she might try to escape to the wilds again.

But there was one morning Bonny did not go with him on patrol, although he had been figuring that she would. As a matter of fact, Bonny did not go on patrol with him until the sanctuary had under a blanket of heavy snow and the hunting season was a thing of the past.

That morning Pal stepped into the stable, went into the stall to brush her and muzzle her. And then, he glanced, and his eyes grew wide open for astonishment. He stood back and his face broke into a broad grin.

Bonny had company. Bonny, the Saucy Mare was a mother. In the straw in a corner of the stall there lay a fluffy little bay foal. Like little bears they were, but little bears whose ears were not used to light. He picked them up one by one and he cuddled them. They were all snuggly. No two were alike in their markings, not one of them was pure white like the mother. All had white legs and feet. Black and white they appeared to be, but on closer examination that wasn't black, but a dark grey, a wolf grey. Their tails were different too, they were straight and bushy. While Bonny's tail was bushy too, it was arched over her hindquarters. And even though they were but a few hours old these pups were already trying to find their way around on unsteady legs, the while their proud mother was indulging them, nosing them back into the corner only to have them separate again.

Suddenly Paul had an inspiration. He grabbed one of the pups, held it under his left arm and he got into the kitchen without Sandy knowing it. At the moment Sandy was sitting out some dough on a corner table. He set the pup flat on the floor, touched Sandy on the back.

Sandy gave a sharp shriek and shot sideways.

"Good heavens, Paul!" she cried. "What do you want to scare me like that for?" Then as her nerves pointed to the floor.

Sandy looked and stepped back gingerly.

"What—is—it?" she gasped.

"A pup," he grinned, "Bonny's pup—the stock came last night."

Sandy swooped the pup into her arms, held it against her cheek. "The little dear," she cooed, "isn't it just cute."

"There are two more such cuties in the stable," Paul ventured.

"Two more—three all told!"

"Yep—triplets. And no two alike."

"Then, what are we waiting for, Paul?" Sandy asked, going out the door with the pup in her arms and Paul hustling to keep up with her.

But just at that moment Colly coming up from the boat and returning from the village yelled to them and they stopped.

"Now, what do you call this?" he asked, taking the pup out of Sandy's hand and holding it out at arm's length. "Will I'll be doggoned" he chuckled.

"There's three of them, Dad," Paul said.

"Three, eh! First thing you know you'll have enough for a good dog team— and for free. You—you lucky son-of-a-gun!"

"But, they're only half breeds" Paul pointed out.

"Half breeds or no, lad," Colly observed soberly, "that should never do 'em any harm. In my book, if the mother is right the offspring—whether it be male or female—must be right. And by that on your piano sometime."

And since it was obvious that Colly's mother, that Sandy and then were right, then Paul Gates understood Colly better. A painful implication, his face reddened, and he said:

EXPORT
CANADA'S FINEST CIGARETTE

"I'm sorry dad, I didn't mean any offence."

The arrival of Bonny's "three sons," as Sandy called them, created a problem—what to name them. But it was obvious from the first that it was a problem that Paul Gates would have to solve on his own, since the pups were his and his alone, and he had more of an idea what they should be called than anyone else. So why not?

The unnamed pups grew like weeds and in a few days they were a lively bundle of unrestrainable activity, bumping into each other, rolling and tumbling over each other with reckless abandon. And going through such stunts, one of them at least soon named themselves.

In his early teens Paul had seen the famous red-costumed actors perform on stage in A New York Hippodrome. The bumblers were billed as "Nid and Ned" and of course they were "the world's greatest."

But try as he might he could not tell which was which for the third pup, so he went to Colly and Sandy to help him out.

"Why, that's easy," Colly grinned, "that's Ned, Nid and Ned and Ned, what more can be said" he rhymed. Then, with a chuckle he turned to Sandy, "Bet you never knew I was a poet before."

"Why, Colly McKee," Sandy laughed, "we never did."

"Make him prove it, lad," Colly faced pup with white patches on his sides was Nid, the pup with all white collar and one white tip was Ned, while Ned could be identified by his white ear tips, his white rump. And to make the matching complete, Sandy tied a ribbon of a different color around three different necks. And from then on Nid and Ned and Ned became personages in the course of the daily rounds at the McKee home in the sanctuary.

Mid-September, and one forenoon Colly returned from the village to take Paul Gates aside "Bonny boy, we're going on his annual holidays, he and his wife would leave on Sunday. They would go to the city for the fair, as they wanted Sandy to go with them as well, see?

"Look Paul," Colly appealed, "Our Sandy hasn't had a holiday in a dog's age. And knowing that she wants me so hard, I feel that she has certainly earned a holiday and will be a shame if she doesn't get one when she had the chance. Besides, there are some things that she can get for us in the city, there are old friends that she would like to revisit. But, Paul, as you must have realized by now, Sandy is pretty set in her ways, she might think that we can't get along here with out her, so I want you to give me a hand in case she balks, we got to sell her—"

"I can do the house-work," Paul offered, "I can even help with the cooking."

"Cooking my eye," Colly said, "As long as we keep a supply of can openers on hand, we'll be well away. And a half starvation diet for a week or two shouldn't do us any harm—what do you think?"

But they need not have been so concerned about Sandy. When Colly told her that the Mcleker and his wife would like her to go on a holiday with them as their guest, she stepped to a mirror, ran her fingers through her hair, and they knew before she spoke what her answer would be.

So Sunday saw Sandy with a wan list as long as her arm taken across the lake to join the Mcmizes, and they were not to see her for two long weeks As Colly said afterwards, two of the longest weeks that he could ever remember—until then.

Sandy's departure coincided with the arrival at Lac Petit of red-shirted men carrying the first leading hound dogs in preparation for the opening of the deer season next morning. The baying of the dogs across Lac Petit, that evening brought Colly and Paul to the front door at the sanctuary.

"Well, Paul," Colly observed, "this is it!"

As he spoke boats loaded with men and dogs were heading up the lake to hunting camps up river. Other men and dogs were making the jumps down river below the mill.

"Before dawn," Colly explained, "the dogs will be taken to the runways and turned loose. Unless shot in their tracks the deer will head for water— the lakes back of the sanctuary —the little lake in the sanctuary may be to this very shore. The dogs may run right through our property and there's no way to stop them—"

"But, Dad," Paul wanted to know, "How can the deer get into the sanctuary with that log fence around it? Won't the fence stop them?"

"Nary a stop," Colly said, "if they can't clear the top, and six feet is nothing to a deer, they are quite cute enough to stick their heads between the wire and go through sideways. A very wise animal is the deer, Paul, very, very wise indeed. And you would be exceedingly wise, too, if your life was at stake."

"Supposing dad," Paul said, "that a hunter, trying to get through the fence, and his gun is that he shot a deer and it is in the sanctuary?"

"Make him prove it, lad," Colly said, "Make him show you, and if what he says is true, go with him, see that he destroys the wounded animal and he gets it out of there, pronto. Oh, you're apt to run into some funny things, But don't take any dirt from them. There will be game wardens in the village who will be only too glad to lend you a hand if you need it. If a dog runs a deer into the lakes, it's no dice as far as the hunter is concerned, and tell him so."

Colly McKee was off on his usual trip to the village that first morning of the deer hunting season before Paul Gates set out on his patrol of the sanctuary. Had Colly been present when Paul started, what happened a few hour later would not have happened. For Paul fell a victim to a self-inflicted bullet fired by a careless hunter.

As previously arranged— for it was not thought wise to leave the McKee place without somebody looking around—Paul didn't begin his patrol until he heard Colly leave the village shore bound for home. As the sound of Colly's motor reached him, he hurried east, and followed the wire fence, going north.

The early bombardment on all three sides of the sanctuary was beginning to let up now, only to begin anew with the deep baying of dogs in the dense swamps to the north.

Paul stopped after a while and listened apprehensively. This was all new to him. The rifle fire didn't bother him, as he was used to that, he had been in the American army during the Second World War and while he hadn't managed to get overseas, there had been plenty of rifle firing at him in the United States. And there was music and excitement in the noise the dogs were making. In the wild flurry of rifle fire and flying targets when the dogs drove the deer out of the swamps to the runways. Occasionally men shouted.

Big Mose was behind him to the left now. He had left the fence, was through a swamp and into the beaver meadow; two deer must have come to the little lake to the west. He retraced his steps and stopped. From where he stood he could not only see the fence but up the side of the mountain nearby. He scanned the hill, saw neither hunter nor deer, then he came to an old path and followed it down into a hollow, and there he found the deer. Paul, very, very wise indeed. And you would be exceedingly wise, too, if your life was at stake."

"Supposing dad," Paul said, "that I catch a hunter, trying to get through the fence, and his gun is that he shot a deer and it is in the sanctuary?"

"Make him prove it, lad," Colly said, "Make him show you, and if what he says is true, go with him, see that he destroys the wounded animal and he gets it out of there, pronto. TRIBUTE TO CHAMPIONS

Tonight at the Queen's Hotel the Glen Roy A. C. junior "A" softball team will receive tangible tributes to their illustrious previous. The youngsters will be the guests of their sponsor Alderman Don McKevin, who will formally present them with windbreakers bearing armbands crests, following a banquet to which sports notables of the city and civic and other officials have been invited.

The juniors, first athletic organization to bring an all-Ontario championship to the city, will also receive other gifts which in all fairness to the donors will not be mentioned here.

The city will pay its tribute tangible and otherwise through Mayor A. McRae Haig and Alderman Harry Rollins, chairman of the Tourist and Publicity Committee. It is understood however, that actual presentation of the city's gifts will be made at a later date in the city hall.

The Glen Roys, proud champions of Ontario's best junior softball teams, also won the senior softball championship of the city and will be honored with the formal presentation of the championship silverware, the Bill Old Trophy.

The youngsters bear a proud record. They swept through the seasonal schedule with something like thirteen wins and three losses, that's approximate, and went on into the Ontario Amateur Softball Association playdowns.

They defeated Brockville by a lopsided score in the initial game and the riverside city team defaulted the series. Come double, and this is touch wood, and the Glens with a big assist from the elements went to four games before turning back the starry Motor City crew by a 4-3 count in the series.

They eliminated the Toronto Prince of Wales team in a hard-fought series and then took on the Windsor Local 195 team. Defeated 3-1 in the opener in Windsor, the Glens roared back to take the next two games on their home diamond, to annex the southern Ontario title.

Then came the "big" all-Ontario series with the North Bay Algonquins in the northern city. Behind the sensational hurling of right-hander Rocky Forster and solid support from first and third sacker Al Gilles the Glens swept the titular series in two straight games.

Returning home they picked up the threads of the city championship. Again, a game down, after an initial 6-0 defeat at the hands of the CIH Division of the intermediate "A" representatives in OASA playdowns, the Glens, still hitting their championship stride, defeated their intra-city rivals in two straight games. These games played in almost wintry weather were productive of the finest softball played in the city this season. The scores were 2-1 and 8-4.

And so, their sponsor, the city and city sportdom will honor the young champions.

Frank Tanner, president of the Belleville Hockey Association will be chairman at the banquet. Besides Mayor Haig and Alderman Rollins will be Alderman Claude Vice of the Arena Committee, Manager Bill Cook of the Junior Black Hawks hockey squad and Recreation Director "Red" Dorrn have been invited, as has Malcolm Robb, president of the Belleville Baseball Association, Don Lee and Cy Barrie, general and secretary respectively of the Belleville District Softball League, City Comptroller Harold Eastman, Police Chief Walter Probert, Fire Chief Gerald Vance, Harry Hazell, coach and member of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association and other sports representatives.

Frank Fenner, Hamilton, secretary of the OASA has been invited to attend and has replied that if it is at all possible, he will be here.

VOCAL TRIBUTE

It was beautifully timed, unless of course it was a coincidence. Toronto's hockey fans forgot temporarily their ancient feud with the Canadiens last night to give rousing tribute to Rocket Richard when he scored his second goal of the night to equal the all-time record held by Nels (Old Foison) Stewart. Richard's first home his 324th National Hockey League goal and as the referee handed him the puck, the Toronto crowd gave him flitting recognition tribute. Of course, their Leafs knocked off the Habs 7-5 and that helped no end.

However, timed or not timed, it is as it should be. Who should the "Rocket" deprive some 15,000 Mercyrail hockey fanatics from blasting the roof, sides and cellar out of the Forum by scoring the tie-breaker in hated Tawranto? Leave that for new souls. And that is what will happen, quite likely. The lowly Rangers are guests of the Habs on Saturday night and that should be the big chance for the Rocket.

PREWEK MEETING

Recreational Director "Red" Dorrn requests all peewee hockey players to be at Kiwanis Centre on Monday evening, November 3rd at seven o'clock. Players will be allocated to the various teams at the get-together. Players on last years teams will be assigned to the same team this year, so that last year's sweater will be used again this season.

Normie Kwong, Grid 'China Clipper' Had 'Greatest Thrill' in Cup Game

By LORNE BRUCE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

EDMONTON (CP) — Normie Kwong, the only Chinese player on top-flight Canadian football, thinks that playing on a Grey Cup champion team in the first year out of junior ranks was the greatest thrill he has had in the game.

The 24-year-old China Clipper, a Calgary product, was with that city's Stampeders when they won the Grey Cup in 1948 with a stunning 12-7 upset over Ottawa Rough Riders, and the following year when they were beaten in the final by Montreal Alouettes.

Traded to Edmonton

Before the 1950 season he was traded to Edmonton and won his greatest glory with the Eskimos now coached by Hank Filchock.

Kwong won selection on the 1951 Conference All-Star team and led the loop in ground gaining rushing. He picked up 964 yards, believed a Conference record, better than five yards each time he carried the ball. And he carried the ball nearly 200 times in 14 games with those free wheeling, single-wing 1951 Eskimos coached by Annie Sukrus.

Former American professionals who have played with and against the China Clipper say he is one of the few Canadians who could make a place on a United States pro outfit. He weighs 190 pounds and is five feet nine inches tall.

No Trouble Over Race

His race has caused him no trouble.

"Everybody on my own team kids me," he said. "I have never heard any opponent make any remarks about my race."

"We're not related but I know him well," Normie said of Larry Kwong, the Vernon, B.C., product and the only Chinese to make an appearance in the National Hockey League. At present Larry plays hockey for the Valleyfield, Que, Braves.

Defeat New York Rangers 3-1 As Leafs Whip Canadiens 7-5; Rocket Scores Pair in First

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Maurice Richard made 19 of N.H.L. headlines last night, but in all the excitement over his tying the N.H.L.'s all-time scoring record, Chicago Black Hawks slipped almost unnoticed into the league leadership.

The great Montreal Canadiens star got two goals against Toronto Maple Leafs to bring his mark to 324, the same number set by Nels Stewart, late of the '20s and '30s, before his retirement. But the Canadiens' fell to the same spot as Toronto and lost the contest 7-5.

Meanwhile, the Hawks, who hadn't hit the win column in the last five games, skated rings around the Rangers in New York to beat the tail-enders 3-1 and take over first place by one point. Canadiens' loss left them in second place with nine points, one ahead of Toronto.

Leafs Rally Again

The Leafs, setting a reputation as the league's most unpredictable club, trailed 3-1 at the end of the first period, then stormed back with three goals in the second to make it 4-3 and, in a free-scoring final period, added three more to Canadiens' two for the decision.

It was a bruising game in which 15 penalties were called. Bert Olmstead duplicated Richard and Montreal's other goal was struck by Dollard St. Laurent got the other.

Meanwhile, Leafs were paced by Harry Watson with two, while the other markers were added among Ted Kennedy, Sid Smith, Max Bentley and Gord Hannigan.

Montreal goalie Gerry McNeil was hit in the face with the puck in the first period by a pulled shot and after receiving medical attention but was hampered with a puffed cheek and his right eye had all but closed at the game's end.

Broken Sticks Help

The Black Hawks outclassed New York before 14,000 fans, but two of their goals came with scoring help from broken Ranger sticks. Allan Stanley went to get a new one in the opening minutes of the second period and Jim McFadden capitalized on the break to score. Soon after Nick Mickoski also broke his stick and the Hawks charged into the Ranger end while he sought a replacement. Cal Gardner got the goal on this break. The first Hawk goal came in the first period when Gus Mortson got his first of the season.

Al Rollins had his second shutout of the year against goal 18:33 of the final period when Mickoski caught the right-hand corner.

Boston and Detroit m rt tonight on Red Wings' home ground. New York goes to Chicago for a return engagement.

Gus Bodnar of Toronto Maple Leafs hung up the record for the fastest goal scored by a first-year National Hockey League rookie. Playing his first game against New York Rangers nine years ago tonight, Bodnar scored 15 seconds from the opening bell.

Baseball Council Drafts New Waiver Rule

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's major-minor executive council yesterday drew up a new waiver rule designed to curb the sale of star players from one league to another during the season.

The move was believed to be aimed at New York Yankees, who in the last few years have taken advantage of the current waiver rule by purchasing such stars as Johnny Mize, Johnny Sain, Ewell Blackwell and Johnny Hopp. Each player was instrumental in helping to bring a championship to the Yankees.

The proposed new waiver rule will require each club to obtain waivers from the other 15 clubs before it can sell a player to a club in the other league after July 31. As the rule reads now, a club needs only to receive waivers from the seven other clubs in its league in order to sell a player to help rival circuit for the waiver price of $10,000.

The Yankees acquired Mize, Sain and Blackwell for various amounts, all above the waiver price, after the July 31 date and before the acquired player becomes ineligible to participate in the world series.

The new waiver rule must be ratified by a majority of the clubs in each league to become official.

Edmonton Flyers Trim Royals 5-2

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton Flyers climbed out of the Western Hockey League cellar, at least temporarily, by defeating New Westminster Royals 5-2 last night. Earl Johnson netted two for the Flyers, with Earl Neiheil, Ray Hannigan and Vic Stasiuk adding singles. New Westminster scorers were Don Slater and Ollie Dorobey.

Seattle Bombers beat Tacoma Rockets 4-1. Jerry Foley popped in a pair of goals for Seattle. John Bailey and George Horeshuk got the others. Pete Caron tallied for Tacoma.

Edmonton's Frenzied Football Fans Feel Eskies Can Whip Blue Bombers

EDMONTON (CP) —Football fever climbed at a palpitating pace in Edmonton this week as frenzied fans, still suffering from the shock of the Saturday slaughter here last week, built up hopes that their Eskimos can whip Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

And coach Frank Filchock's green-and-gold gridders, who crushed Calgary Stampeders 30-7 last Saturday to win the western game total-point Western semi-final 42-36, are just as optimistic as their fans.

Eskz in Fine Shape

Filchock reports his camp in fine condition, physically and mentally. Don Lord, blonde Vancouver product, and Ray Enright, 22-year-old Edmonton homebrew, weren't in action last week-end, but both will be in the backfield Saturday for the first game of the best-of-three western final against Bombers.

Rollie Miles, sensational all-star scatback who has twice won the Eskimos' most valuable player choice, says his ankles are coming along fine and Montreal's Jimbo Chambers, who caught Miller game-breaking forward to spell Calgary's doom, expects his shoulder to be healed well enough for the opener.

In Winnipeg, where the odds favor Bombers 2-3, coach George Terlikowski indicates he and his Bombers have plenty of respect for Eskimos, though they don't fear them.

"We're up against a terrific ball club," Terlik says. "But we're not afraid of them."

Zaleski Still Out

Joe Zaleski, second-string Winnipeg quarterback, is the only big injury in Bomber camp. He has a broken finger on his pitching hand. Al Wiley isn't expected in the line-up because of an injured arm, says Buddy Tinsley, all-star tackle, will dress. He had a mild case of 'flu.

Flying wing Ian Gibb has been sidelined for the rest of the year with broken trouble.

Bombers are expected in Edmonton Friday. The two clubs will return to Winnipeg for the second game of the series Saturday, Nov. 8 and the third, if necessary, will be played there for Eskimos, though they don't Tuesday Nov. 11.

Galt, Barrie Retain Junior 'A' Lead With Wins Over Marlies, Kitchener

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The dead heat between Galt Black Hawks and Barrie Flyers for the Ontario Hockey Association Junior 'A' championship last night both won their games.

Neither the leaders can afford any mistakes. Guelph Biltmores, apparently unhampered by the loss of four top performers to the parent New York Rangers, are hot on their heels only two points behind with 11.

Three Rivers Reds were the fifth victims last night as they dropped the second game of their Ontario Junior 'A' Senior hockey series 6-3 and Galt holds Marlboros 7-5. There was no action in Quebec.

Biltmores can't afford any mistakes at this point either. Kitchener-Waterloo Combines are only one point behind them and St. Michael's Majors are a fifth.

Three for Chalmers

Chick Chalmers was top man for Galt as he had his first three-goal night since he broke in for hockey. Gerard Bergeron opened the scoring in the first period for Three Rivers. It is the Chalmers tied it up. The second period was scoreless. Chalmers broke the game up in the third. After Jean-Guy Gendron had given the visitors a 2-1 lead he scored two goals to make it 3-2. Ivy Scott added an insurance marker.

In Barrie three new players helped the Tigers bounce Kitchener-Waterloo 6-4. Barrie took a 3-0 lead in the first, made it 4-2 in the second and were never shaded. The Flyers spread their goals among Ralph Willis, Skip Teal, Ivan Prescott, Ken Cargo, Doug Modeo and Don McKenney. Greenshirts' goal-getters were Greig Hicks, Graham Joyce and Harry Collins.

Haughton at Galt

Galt and Marlboros staged a first-class brawl in Galt as the Marlies lost their fourth of the season 7-2. It was one of the roughest contests so far with 25 penalties, six of them majors.

Red Hamill used Ralph Markerian on defence for the first time since his arrival via the trade route from St. Catharines Teepees. Forward John Whaley went to St. Kitts.

Goals by Jim McBurney, Eddie Switzer and Tony Poeta put the Hawks up 3-1 at the end of the first. Eric Nesterenko scored for the Dukes.

The penalty box was full during most of the second and third periods. Galt added two goals in the second by Ken Wharram and Poeta. John Sleeper and Switzer flashed the light in the third for Galt while Parker McDonald got the visitors' last.

The league gets into action again Saturday when St. Michael's Majors play at Guelph and Oshawa travels to Barrie.

Chatham Hands Brantford 1st Defeat, Stratford Indians Crush Tigers 11-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Black Jack Stewart's Chatham Maroons are rapidly turning into the team to beat in the Ontario Hockey Association 'A' race.

The Maroons last night moved into first place by tripping Brantford Redmen 5-4. It was Brantford's first loss.

The Redmen dropped into second-place deadlock with Owen Sound Mercurys who were idle. Sarnia Sailors who beat Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen 5-3 and Stratford Indians who downed Hamilton 11-1.

The Dutchmen have won once in three starts and Hamilton have yet to win a game.

The Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior series started last night after the opening was postponed one night when Sudbury's new arena was not ready for ice.

Troppers Tie Soo

In North Bay the local Troppers battled the Soo Greyhounds to a 4-4 tie in overtime while Soo Michigan Indians overcame a 2-1 first period deficit to beat Sudbury Wolves 3-2 at the Soo.

Eddie Dick scored the winner for Chatham in the third period while his club was a man short by hand Brantford their loss. Other Chatham goals went to Jack Price, George Edwards, Ed Dickson and Al Pickett.

Bill Scheil paced the Brantford attack with two unassisted goals while Don Oberhoffner and Wally Hnatiuk got others. Brantford finished the game under protest after a third period penalty was called by referee Hugh McLean.

Sarnia traded the two periods to Kitchener before rallying in the third. Don Reed, Bill Scott and Charley Brooker put the Dutchmen up 3-1 after the Sailors had taken a 1-0 lead thanks to Clarke Horner.

Maurice Levasque scored for the Greenshirts in the second, then Harry O'Connor and Don Emmons scored a new goalies for Brantford a short time later then Skip Prescall clinched it.

Hamilton Swamped

It was another woeful evening for Hamilton Tigers in Stratford. Lloyd Ferguson made an auspicious debut with the Indians by scoring three goals and getting three assists. Jackie White's and Ken Schmitz scored two each for the winners while singles were slipped in by Roth, Flick, Flanagan and Wilson.

Hamilton made their single counter an unusual one as Hammond scored a screen shot on a pass from Al Bennett, the Bengals' goalie, who had pluged to do so he was handling all shots.

In North Bay the Troppers staged an uphill fight to overcome the Greyhounds second period lead and force an overtime draw. Greyhound goals were scored by Jimmy Thomson, Hec Pozzo, Ray Proulx and Joe Bumbacco. Ab Demarco and Ron Keeling scoring for North Bay then George Gosselin, Chick Cecchini and Bill Dwyer each added one.

Sudbury Wolves took a 3-1 lead in the first period at the Soo on goals by Nick Tomiak and Stan McClelland against a single for the home-towners by Johnny Jorsch.

The second period was scoreless but Johnny Lumley tied it up in the third. Then Claude Watters made the winner after stealing the puck from the Wolves' defence.

Friday night action in the O.H.A. A sees Owen Sound at Chatham and Kitchener-Waterloo at Brantford. The Indians visit the Wolves' visit in the N.O.H.A. schedule.

Hornets Hand Providence Reds First Setback

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The top-running and previously undefeated Providence Reds suffered their first defeat of the 1952-53 American Hockey League Wednesday night—a humiliating 7-0 shutout at the hands of the lowly Pittsburgh Hornets.

In the only other game scheduled Buffalo Bisons moved into third place by shading St. Louis Flyers 3-1.

At Pittsburgh, Bob Sabourin and Phil Maloney led the way with two goals apiece. Frank Sullivan, Pete Backor and Ray Timgren got the others.

The Providence goalie had no worries while goalie Gil Mayer made only 18.

At Buffalo, Vern Kaiser sent the Bisons ahead in the second period and notes of congratulations into his sweaty palms he had little to say.

His only comment:

"I have nothing to say about the record. The game is the thing. The goals have got to come some time. It's the game that counts."

And in his Port Colborne home, Kaiser beamed.

"That's all right. That's what I record was made to be broken and Richard is a good man to break records."

"If he didn't make it tonight he would have made it Saturday, so it didn't make much difference."

Rocket Was Due

Even most of Toronto's hockey cynics figured this was the big night for the five-foot-ten-dynamo —despite the fact that he has never had big scoring nights at the Gardens. Richard had scored only three goals in eight previous games this season and he was due.

It was after Olmstead put Canadiens ahead 1-0 lead at 11:01 of the first period that Richard got his chance. He got it on a neat passing play with Elmer Lach. He made no mistake during his entire 10-year N.H.L. career, a d Olmstead.

Lach got back into the game then with Gord Hannigan finishing off a play at 17:07.

Then Richard came through for No. 324. The goal was scored at 17:07, with Lach again getting an assist. The crowd went wild, as Referee Red Storey handed the puck to the 175-pound ace.

Four Buyers Interested In Guelph Franchise

GUELPH (CP) — Jim Hendrick, secretary - treasurer of Guelph Maple Leafs of the Intercounty Baseball League, said yesterday four buyers are interested in the local franchise.

The team put the franchise on the block a few weeks ago. Hendrick said he has had queries from two out-of-town prospects and two from Guelph. He described the local offers as "not too encouraging."

Leafs finished in second place last season but nearly at the box office. The club directors decided they would not operate the team again and if a buyer could not be found they would drop out of the league for one season. This is permitted under league rules.

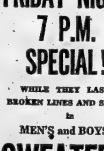
The Intercounty league should revise its policy toward imported players to encourage clubs such as Guelph and Galt to remain in the league. Galt also suffered financial reverses last season and it is doubtful if they will return next year.

It is believed that London and Galt will back Kendrick's proposal but Kitchener and Brantford have indicated that they prefer the present system.

Movies or Ball It's Up to 'Lip' Says Stoneham

NEW YORK (AP)—President Horace Stoneham of New York Giants has delivered his ultimatum to manager Leo Durocher to make up his mind by next month between baseball and the movies.

"I have read where Durocher has stated he may leave baseball for a career in movies after his contract with us expires at the end of next season," Stoneham said yesterday. "That is what he wants, that's all right with me.



"However, if he is not going to be back with us after next season we have a right to know so we'll have time to prepare.

"We have asked him to let me know of his decision before the winter meetings get underway at Phoenix."

Other major league owners will meet in a three-day session at Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 5-7.

Durocher currently is working on a picture with Talullah Bankhead and other stars. He recently signed a contract to pilot the Giants during the 1953 season at a reported $80,000.

Toronto Hockey Fans 'Raise Roof' As 'Rocket' Equals All-Time Record

By JIM BASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—The incomparable Maurice (Rocket) Richard, idolized with the straight black hair and flashing stick, tied professional hockey's all-time scoring record last night but the Rocket is near to him to take over from Nels (Old Poison) Stewart.

The gritty 31-year-old rightwinger did it with two quick goals in the first period, but his Montreal Canadiens dropped a 7-5 National Hockey League decision to Toronto Maple Leafs.

It was fitting that the partisan crowd of 14,000 whooped it up every time the fiery Rocket gathered in the puck and that they nearly brought roof down when he fired the goal that equal the mark of 324 goals set by Old Poison in 1925-34.

Fast Another Night

It was just another night for Joseph Henri Maurice Richard. Even when they pressed telegrams and notes of congratulations into his sweaty palms he had little to say.

His only comment:

"I have nothing to say about the record. The game is the thing. The goals have got to come some

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—What happens to an actor's career after he confesses he has once been a Communist?

Some actors have fallen into obscurity, others have managed to continue their careers. One of the latter is Sterling Hayden, who testified last year in Washington that he had been a member of the Communist party for six months in 1946.

How did the Washington headlines affect his career immediately afterward?

"If anything, I was in a better position than I was before. Before I had testified, there was a cloud over my name, a sort of uncertainty about whether I was 'safe' or not. Afterward, everything was out in the open.

"As for the immediate reaction, I don't know. Nobody wanted to hire me, because they didn't know how public opinion would turn. I said they would not hire me. There may have been some, but my agent didn't tell me of any."

Since then he has made eight pictures, including "The Star" with Bette Davis and his current "Flame of Timberline" with Ann Sheridan.

What was the personal reaction to his confession of Red membership?

"With two exceptions, I have had no adverse comment made to me personally. The exceptions were a couple of guys whom I suspect of still being Commies. . . .

Nice Hand

"Once it came up during a forum scene of me were attending at a drama festival in Rochester, N.Y. Someone asked about communism in Hollywood, and I was previously agreed that I would answer such a question if it came up. I talked for 10 to 15 minutes on the subject, got a nice hand when I sat down."

Why has Hayden's career continued while Larry Parks has not had a film job since he also testified he had been a Red?

"I don't know," rep'ed Hayden. "I've thought about it a great deal. It could have been the difference in presentation."

Hayden had testified that joining the party "was the stupidest thing" he had ever done and talked freely. Parks admitted his membership, but first said he "didn't want to crawl through the mud as an informer." Later he named names.

"I was fortunate to get mine over with in one shot," Hayden added.

It seems she gets the jitters with any hand that is likely to be defeated if she follows the best bridge rule. So, I must always reassure her by showing what will happen with the worst hand.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, OCT. 31, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Confine yourself to moderation in activities. Overdoing or lacking dalacel attitude both hinder. Friendly rays if you apply yourself.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Win true Taurian effort there is little you cannot accomplish, and this day has advantages to assist. Romance rates high later in day.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Rest or sleep over that criticism, rebuff; it may have something of worth. After sufficient contemplation, resentment will taper off. Diplomacy always helps.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Favorable on whole, but that doesn't mean you can ride on crest of the wave of past performances. You will have to do your full share to attain success.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Hold up hasty decisions, risky deviations. Make changes when needed, but don't retard achievement by slab-in-the-air censure.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—If you exercise keen care in handling money, investments, day should be better than satisfactory. Heart interests also favored.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Steady application to astute plans required. Have no qualms; you can manage if you try sufficiently hard and long.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio)—Doesn't promise to be easy day for you clever, energetic natives of Scorpio. But integrity, logic and keen judgment can come up with right answers. Steady going, friend!

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—You may have to jump the gun, as it were, to get an early start to accomplish today. Familiar matters, daily duties should be easier.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—No day to take a mental holiday or you will find yourself "behind the eight ball" as they say. Take inventory of requirements; do first things first.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Take pride in what you do, how you do it, invigorating zest toward New environment activities, even if they don't really concern you.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—"Make haste slowly" until you have laid proper groundwork. Planet aspects in favorable position for the well informed.

YOU BORN TODAY: Should be an energetic, goget-it personality. Keen judgment in most any field in which you really concentrate. Somewhat suspicious. This could be troublesome if you let it get hold of you. Religion, education, your real standbys. Don't be too critical of the less informed. Birthdate of:

FIERY CROSS

Professor Thinks Governments Should Share Cost

TORONTO (CP)—Provincial and federal governments should assume equally with local authorities responsibility for flood control measures, Professor G. Ross Lord of the University of Toronto said last night.

He told a university extension meeting that it is unfair to assume that floods on any river have been caused by the mismanagement of people who have lived and are living on the watershed. Often, as in the case of the South Nation River in Ontario and the Red River at Winnipeg, floods are due to the nature of the watershed.

Professor Lord advised that flood control should be fitted into a properly integrated plan for an entire watershed.

APPROVE APT. PROJECT

TORONTO (CP) — City property committee yesterday approved an $8,000,000 15-storey apartment project for the mid-town section. The committee recommended an amendment of residential restrictions to allow construction.

Rheumatic Pain Gone "Feel Years Younger"

Joints, Muscles Free of Pain and Stiffness, Fatigued Feeling Disappeared. Sleep Better. Full Credit Goes to Syrolena," Says This Man.

MR. WILLIAM KOCH

MR. WILLIAM KOCH, 72 Allen St. E., Waterloo, is glad to pass this experience along to other people, because he knows what it means to find relief from rheumatic pain and other distressing symptoms arising from poor kidney and bladder action. He is no hasty or without results.

Could Hardly Bend Over

"I had to give up many things I like to do because my joints and muscles had become so stiff and sore I could hardly bend over without crying. The pain kept me from setting my usual sleep and I always felt as though I was rundown. My stomach was also out of order, I had no appetite and I was subject to bad dizzy spells.

Read About Syrolena

"I saw in the paper how Syrolena was helping other people, so I tried it with great success. Even the men in the store soon began to notice how much better I was getting around. The soreness and stiffness in my joints and muscles disappeared, my sleep and my stomach is cleared up, too. I used Syrolena for a short time only and I feel years younger. I am glad to recommend Syrolena to others."

Feel Others Should Try It

"Taking Syrolena was without question the best thing that ever happened to me and I now feel that every person should try it," concluded Mr. Koch.

Why not get Syrolena from your druggist and see the same grand relief?

Where to Get It

Why not let this Pure Herbal Medicine help you as it has so many other men and women right here in this city? Syrolena is sold and recommended in Belleville at LOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Winter Fair Will Try to Attract More Customers

TORONTO (CP)—The Royal Agricultural Winter Fair is seeking to attract more customers than last year by its 56th renewal Nov. 7-22.

The fair has never had any trouble getting exhibitors. The huge $150,000 in prize money brought 3,000 exhibitors and 17,000 entries last year ago.

Now the emphasis is on the box-office returns to maintain prize money at the existing levels.

One phase in the campaign was to offer the dates to give the fair "one week-end. Previously it had one. P. L. Whyrock, president, said at the annual meeting last spring that he hoped the two week-ends would bring out more people to visit the blue-ribbon farm show and help offset rising operating costs.

Small Deficit

Last year costs outran revenue by $13,444. A hold-over surplus of $14,809 helped to balance the budget.

Another inducement to fair-goers is an opportunity to buy exhibits with sale of cheese and other dairy products introduced for the first time.

The usual auction sale of pure-bred livestock is extended to take in two dairy breeds, Jerseys and Holstein Shorthorns. Previously it covered one—dairy breed, Ayrshires, and three beef types, Aberdeen-Angus, Herefords and the Beef-type Shorthorns.

One of the major attractions at the fair, the evening horse show Nov. 21, back on old favorite, the famed R.C.M.P. musical ride, missing in recent years.

Competition is still the keynote of the big show. International titles are offered in potatoes, corn, soy beans, forage crop seeds, wheat, oats, barley and rye. British farmers, out to capture major honors, will send some 300 entries, most in grasses, clovers and legumes, long British specialities.-

A large number attended the auction sale of farm machinery and household effects of the late William Rogers Friday afternoon.

A lady shopper last Tuesday, in Belleville, took a parcel which had been purchased at the Canadian Department Store, and is grateful to some honest person who returned it to the office of the department store.

Requests Trade Credits be Given To Great Britain

ORILLIA (CP)—George Hees (PC—Toronto Broadview) last night urged that Canada extend trade credits to Britain to prevent movement of essential British industrial machinery to Russia.

Because she lacks dollars, Britain has made a deal with Russia to swap coarse grains for generators, machine tools and other British products, Mr. Hees said in a speech to the East Simcoe Progressive Conservative Association.

"These generators and machine tools are vital to Russia's war production," he said.

3rd. HILLIER

Swedish Cargo Vessel Ryholm, Sinks, Crew Saved

Collision Occurs in Heavy Fog 23 Miles East of Quebec

QUEBEC (CP)—The little Swedish cargo vessel Ryholm was sunk today in an early-morning collision with the Swiss freighter Bastles in the St. Lawrence River but all hands were reported safe.

The collision occurred in heavy fog at 1:40 a.m., 23 miles east of Quebec and seven miles downstream from the easternmost tip of the Island of Orleans.

The Ryholm had a net tonnage of 714; the Bastles 5,781.

One report said most of the crew was picked up by the Bastles.

The remainder were rescued by the schooner Notre Dame and the federal government ice - breaker N.B. McLean, coming downstream from supplying government outposts in the Arctic. They presumably transferred their survivors to the Bastles.

The Bastles passed Quebec at 7:05 a.m. on her way to Montreal. While there, she will undergo inspection of how the collision occurred. The Ryholm was sold the Ryholm went down in 20 minutes.

The Bastles was slightly damaged.

The skipper of the Ryholm was Capt. J. Nilsson of Sweden. Capt. J. Closter of Denmark is captain of the Bastles. Both carries a crew of Swiss and German sailors.

The Ryholm was headed for the Saguenay River port of Port Alfred when the collision occurred.

The Bastles, carrying a cargo of grain and flour, was going up-river to Montreal at the time.

No serious injury to crew members in the collision is known.

The collision occurred at a point where the St. Lawrence River is three miles wide, slightly south of the main channel route.

The Ryholm sank in 25 feet of water. Her stern was still visible shortly after the collision, however the tide was beginning to rise at the time.

The channel at the site of the collision is 300 feet deep. Transport department officials said their first impression was that the wreck would present no serious immediate obstacle to navigation.

The Ryholm was built last year and the Bastles was on her second voyage.

Report Agreement Is Reached In Marmora Strike

TORONTO (CP) — A basis of agreement has been reached between the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.) and the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company at Marmora, it was announced last night.

About 400 workers have been on strike for four weeks demanding wage increases and other concessions. The terms of the agreement are subject to ratification by a union meeting.

The settlement was announced by Louis Fine, Ontario's chief conciliation officer, after three days of negotiations. Mr. Fine declined to release details of the settlement in advance of their consideration by the union meeting tomorrow night.

Major points at issue were demands for 15-cent-an-hour increases, reduction of the work week from 44 hours to 40, union security, overtime compensations, job evaluation and retroactive pay.

Six Appeals Against Murder Convictions Filed

TORONTO (CP)—Six appeals against murder convictions will be heard in Osgoode Hall within the next few weeks, it is learned. The hearings start Nov. 10.

Unless the appeals are successful, all six men fill be hanged by Jan. 6.

First to be heard will be Steve Suchan and Leonard Jackson, sentenced to die Dec. 16 for the murder of Constable Frederick Raymond Tong. The second appeal will be that of James Arthur Wellard, convicted of murdering east-end Sam Delibasich a and sentenced to be hanged Jan. 6.

The other appeals are by George Hladiy of Port Colborne, found guilty of the murder of Josef Paroch, whose weighted body was found in the McIntyre River, and sentenced to die Dec. 8; Harry Lee of Hamilton, stated to be hanged Dec. 30 for the fatal shooting of Mrs. Mary Weiss Gilchrist; and Wilfred Laycock of Sturgeon Falls, a semi-recluse sentenced to die Dec. 23 for the murder of Arthur Kierstead.

The Laycock appeal was filed yesterday and is based on five grounds. One ground claims the verdict was against the evidence and against the weight of evidence that Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow misdirected the jury as to the onus and proof of insanity; and that the trial judge misdirected the jury on the law of insanity.

TWO CONVICTED

Cures for Early Breast Cancer Shown in 70 Per Cent of Cases

CHICAGO (AP) — Three doctors reported today that 70 per cent of early breast cancers can be cured. But they cautioned that there is no cure for late cases of the disease—only early signs.

Drs. Calvin T. Klopp, John D. Hoyle and Brian B. Blades, of the George Washington University medical school in Washington, said these are the signs:

A thickening or lump of the nipple, slight ulceration of the nipple, a bloody discharge from the nipple, slight thickening of the breast, a tiny lump in the breast, slight thickening of the nipple, or non-tender lump in the armpit.

Writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, the doctors said:

"Breast cancer is often described as beginning as a lump, creating the impression that the cancer has been present for a short time prior to the appearance of the lump. In certain rapidly-growing tumors this may be the case, but it has been shown by many studies that the breast cancer has been present for several months or possibly several years before the appearance of the tumor."

CONVICTS END 4-DAY REBELLION AT STATE PRISON

Release Seven Hostages Before Appeal Is Made.

BY DON WHITEHEAD

CHESTER, Ill. (AP)—Convicts ended their four-day rebellion at Illinois state prison today and released their seven hostages before Governor Adlai Stevenson carried out plans for making a personal appeal to them.

The rebel convicts capitulated after an ultimatum was delivered by Michael Serpitis, state director of public safety.

Serpitis told the insurgents he had been bottled up "the prison's east cell block since Monday, that their last surrendered heavily-armed state troopers would cut loose with tear gas bombs, shells, torches and "use whatever force is necessary to restore order."

After receiving the hostages, the 320 convicts marched back to their cells.

Just before this, a loudspeaker was placed on the prison yard, and Governor Stevenson was expected to issue an appeal or say while inside the cells.

The Democratic presidential nominee had broken off his campaign tour in the east to hurry here by train and automobile.

Before the convicts capitulated, the state troopers massed at the prison, a mile outside the east cell block.

The police captain shouted a demand for an immediate release of the hostages. He warned that if the troopers would move in "and it won't be funny if we come in," the hostages would be marched from a high, rocky bluff which serves as a wall for the prison, and that that distance Stevenson could not be accomplished before he was presumed to be in the prison yard at the time of the convicts' surrender.

Warden Ragen's successor, William Flanagan, told reporters during the trip from Pittsburgh:

"The governor didn't consider the effect of this move on his presidential campaign. It was tad, but he had to do it. He had to feel it had to be done."

Trouble Begun Monday

Flanagan said the governor considered the lives of the seven hostages as the overriding factor in his decision, adding that Stevenson had reports the convicts might not harm the hostages because of racial disorders began Monday.

The rioting began in an east cell block prisoners were returning to their cells after the evening meal. An attempt by Warden Joseph Mumie to lead an armed attack on the prison was quelled by a gun battle threat to push the hostages off the top floor of the cell block.

Since then prison and state officials have tried to starve out the 320 convicts. But the convicts stored up a supply of candy bars and other foods.

The convicts sent word they would kill the hostages unless Gov. Dixon told reporters.

"They did not accept this, Dixon told reporters.

"They did not accept their demands, including food.

"They did not accept this, Dixon told reporters.

"They did not accept their grievances when they comply with our conditions to first release the men."

Stevenson's campaign train was the featured attraction at his staff performer—and with up-to-the-air broadcasts from key campaign stops in Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware and New York City.

FIRED TAXMEN

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Mrs. Gertrude Clark, 45, poured gasoline over the floor of the two-room shack she lived in, and set it ablaze just as deputy sheriffs arrived to evict her Thursday for non-payment of rent. Police arrested her on a charge of third-degree arson.

St. Lawrence River Gut Dam Slated for Removal Within Three Months Say Officials

OTTAWA (CP)—The St. Lawrence River's Gut Dam, blamed for recent destructive high water levels on Lake Ontario, is slated for removal within three months, it was learned today.

The government Thursday awarded a contract for elimination of the 51-year-old dam, a controversial 900-foot structure between two islands in the Canadian channel.

The contract let to the Canadian Dredge and Dock Company of Toronto provides that the dam is to be gone by Jan. 15, 1953.

The announcement followed by one day the International Joint Commission's approval at the Canada-United States applications for permission to develop hydro power on the river's International Rapids section as part of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The Canadian government had signified it would not proceed with the seaway if the Commission gave a favorable decision on the power applications. The commission's decision at Montreal Tuesday cleared away the last big barrier to the $750,000,000 hydro-waterway project.

Gradual Slopes

The recent view of government officials here had been that the about 5 1-2 inches.

Gut Dam could only be removed in gradual stages, taking up to 18 months, for fear of floods along the lower stretches of the St. Lawrence. Engineers have been studying this for several months and Transport Department officials said Thursday there will be no flood danger in taking the dam out by mid-January because of low winter water levels.

The dam stretches between Canada's Adams Island and Galop Island on the U.S. side. It was built by Canada in 1901, with approval of the U.S. Congress to protect water levels in the power canal bordering the river.

Many Are Affected

Many people and organizations particularly U.S. interests, complained to the International Joint Commission at hearings this year that the dam was largely responsible for recent high water levels in Lake Ontario. The high levels have resulted in heavy property damage and lakeshore erosion during storms.

The government has contended that removal is the main reason for the high levels, and that removal of the Gut Dam would drop Lake Ontario's field near

White House Denies Van Fleet Being Relieved of Command; Secret Defence Files Shown

WASHINGTON (AP)—The debate over sending South Koreans into the line to replace American soldiers in Korea mushroomed into an atomic explosion today, billowing out to Tokyo and Paris.

It is running the heat of the word battle brought a White House denial that Gen. James A. Van Fleet is being relieved as Eighth Army commander to head a new defence department files, a mass of top secret data.

1, Van Fleet's request that South Korean forces be doubled—from 10 to 20 divisions was opposed as premature by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, new Allied Far East commander in Tokyo and now Supreme Commander for the North Atlantic Treaty forces in Paris.

2, Ridgway's position was upheld by the chiefs of staff and Defence Secretary Robert Lovett.

3, The Truman administration says it has been carrying out a longrange program for further defence of Korea to the South Koreans as soon as leaders can be trained and equipped to combat.

4, Gen. Mark Clark, Ridgway's successor in Tokyo, has endorsed this program and has submitted a supporting program for further expansion, now being studied in Washington.

Van Fleet Not Out

The New York Daily News published a story today saying Van Fleet was being relieved and quoting a letter quoted in a campaign speech by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Republican candidate for president.

In Detroit, where President Truman's entourage was campaigning for the Democratic ticket, Lovett side said: "President Truman has not fired General Van Fleet and has no intention of doing so."

Earlier, the army and defence department in Washington headquarters denied receiving any orders relieving Van Fleet to relieve Van Fleet.

Eisenhower Monday night read part of Van Fleet's letter in support of his contention that Republic of Korea forces should man their own front lines as soon as possible. The letter, dated Oct. 10, was addressed to Maj.-Gen. Orlando Wood, Van Fleet's former chief of staff, now in Washington, with a cop- to Mrs. Van Fleet. The general's wife gave the copy to Eisenhower.

Van Fleet wrote that the South Korean forces are now in "apple pie" order but that he had been unable to get the approval of his plan to double their strength to 20 divisions.

The Daily News story, by John Crosetti, quoted Van Fleet's letter (Gen. Douglas) MacArthur, he has been backing political decisions. And the chaos under the restraints, His letter revealed this to the anger of Truman and the fair deal political headquarters."

The Daily News said Van Fleet's grown, the defence department said, from some 30,000 in the early days of the war to more than 400,000.

Four-to-One Support Given Ike by Papers

NEW YORK (AP)—Four newspapers are supporting Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's presidential bid for every one backing Democrat Adlai Stevenson, a new survey showed today.

Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade magazine, said its final preelection poll of 1,285 dailies showed 54.32 per cent of the total circulation, or 24 per cent of the total daily circulation, backing Eisenhower.

Stevenson is supported by 14.32 per cent of the total circulation, or 8.88 per cent of the total circulation, while 13.14 per cent of the papers with 10.81 per cent of the circulation, are for either candidate.

Four Times As Many

The survey showed 823 dailies in 48 states for Eisenhower, the Republican candidate, and 201 dailies in 29 states for Stevenson, the Democratic candidate.

The poll of 1,285 dailies, representing 79 per cent of the 1,724 dailies in the country, was more extensive than the Editor and Publisher survey of two months ago.

In the previous survey, which covered 1,200 dailies, Eisenhower had the backing of 75.16 per cent of the dailies, with 71.38 per cent of the circulation, while Stevenson was in 14.17 per cent with 9.54 per cent of the circulation.

In both cases, the proportion of papers supporting the candidates was estimated as slightly higher than is shown now.

The present edition of editorial support compares with the 65.37 per cent of the dailies, with 78.38 per cent of the circulation, which supported Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in 1948, and with the 21.27 per cent with 10.63 per cent of the circulation, which supported President Truman.

WILD KIDNAPPING ESCAPADE ENDS WITH ARREST OF 2

Prisoners Had Two In Car When Captured

FERNANDINA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—James Francis Hill and a prison mate were recaptured today and two of the eight persons who were kidnapped during an all-night race through Florida were freed.

Hill, 30, and his prison pal, James Douglas, 30, were arrested at a buckback about 30 miles north of Jacksonville.

With them as captives were an air force man and his pregnant wife. The desperados were driving the couple's car when halted.

Their fantastic escapade began Wednesday with Hill forcing Johnny Trish of Buffalo, N.Y., to drive him to the prison camp near Raiford, Fla., where Hill's old pal was at bay with a pistol and set four men free. Trish now have been recaptured.

Kidnapped 20 Persons

Hill was the last of three men sought for a two-day kidnap dash through Georgia and Florida during which they held 20 persons at one time or another. Among the victims were Mrs. Lillian Hall, an 84-year-old mother, both of Douglas.

Virgil Lemay, 15, was the first captured victim. He escaped from another prison mate of Hill's, was arrested in Jacksonville Tuesday afternoon by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who investigated the Lemay kidnap.

Both Lemay and Hopkins said Hill was planning to kill the kidnap victims said Hill called himself a "three-gun maniac."

The Coroner and Insurance victims were robbed but not harmed.

After the road gang delivery Thursday, all six fled in Trish's car, headed back to Raiford and split up on a side road. Douglas went with Hill. The two were former prisoners at the Florida state penitentiary.

The other three took off through the woods. Trish was set free.

The Douglas-Hill pair then hid in the home of Mrs. C. E. Hoover, stole her rings and car and left. Mrs. Hoover, 60, called police, appeared at Haines City, abandoned Hoover car and kidnapped again a young couple. With the couple as hostages, the pair sped across the cross-roots roared at breakneck speed over side roads headed north.

At Folkston, Ga., and Douglas released the boy and girl and kidnapped a man, his wife and child at Bushnell. The family was released unharmed and the pair sped northward and a pickup truck was commandeered.

The last victim was abandoned. A car was halted, however, and the airman and his girl friend were their next victims. The desperados were driving this couple's car when halted.

Govts. Will Share Housing Costs In 3 Municipalities

Lindsay, Stamford Twp. And Owen Sound Benefit

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal and Ontario governments have agreed to share the costs of housing projects in three Ontario municipalities at an estimated cost of $1,420,000, the resources department announced today.

The federal government will pay 75 per cent and Ontario 25 per cent of the costs of projects in the Ontario municipalities of Lindsay, Stamford township and Owen Sound.

Services Supplied

Largest of the proposed projects is in Stamford township near Niagara Falls. The agreement provides for supplying water, sewer and other services on 135 building lots.

Seventy lots will be used to build single-family rental houses — 35 with three bedrooms and the remainder with two bedrooms. The balance of the lots will be sold to builders and prospective home owners at about $1,200 each.

The cost of the project is estimated at $770,000 with housing units to cost about 860 monthly

Similar Project

The Owen Sound project will be similar to that in Stamford town ship with an estimated cost of about $465,000. Forty seven building lots will be sold or will be used for 20 three-bedroom houses and 27 two-bedroom units.

The Lindsay project will be for 200 rental units.

Agreements Signed

Agreements for each of the projects have been signed by the federal and Ontario governments, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the respective municipalities. The municipalities will provide the water, sewer and other services.

Federal mortgage will handle administration during construction and sell lots developed for sale to builders. Rental accommodation in completed projects will be administered by local housing authorities

Turkey Boosts Military Budget

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) —Turkey will jump her military budget for the coming fiscal year almost 50 per cent, to a record 750,000,000 Turkish lira or $268,000,000, the independent newspaper Vatan reported today.

The budget will be worked out at the fall session of Parliament opening tomorrow in Ankara.

Eight-Ton Scow Taken Off Bottom Of Deadman Bay

KINGSTON (CP) — An eight-ton scow believed to have been lying on the bottom of Deadman Bay since the early days of the War of 1812 was raised yesterday by cadets of the Royal Military College.

The cadets, aided by equipment and help of members of the three services stationed here, lifted the 60-foot craft from 17 feet of water by means of pontoons.

Then they moved it onto a low flat barge, built a deck over the scow—and transported the ancient vessel to nearby Fort Henry, where it will become a tourist attraction.

The area from which the scow was recovered is believed to be the approximate spot where a large man-of-war ships built to defend Canada in the war of 1812.

Deny Peiping Radio Report

TOKYO (AP) — The United States Air Force said today that no American pilot claimed by Peiping radio to have been shot down over Communist Manchuria actually was shot down over North Korea, Oct. 30.

The Communist China radio said Lt. Col. Lyle W. Cameron of Lincoln, Neb., was one of eight U.S. fliers shot down "in flames and strafed" town in Manchuria.

The air force said Cameron bailed out his jet fighter 15 miles south of Kanggye in North Korea and that repeated efforts to rescue him failed. More than 100 planes joined in the search, but no sign of Cameron was seen.

Poll-Takers Say Eisenhower Will Command Lead in Popular Vote

NEW YORK (AP)—Three of the top political poll-takers say that the voters appear to be with Dwight D. Eisenhower will command a slight lead in the popular vote on election day.

But the pollsters—Dr. George Gallup, Archibald M. Crossley and Elmo Roper—say this prediction must be tempered by the question: How fast is Governor Adlai E. Stevenson catching up?

Gallup and Crossley put poll-takers came out yesterday at a meeting of the New York chapter of the American Market Association, and the dominant mood of all three of them was: caution.

They were remembered the way the voters upset the 1948 predictions that Governor Thomas E. Dewey would defeat President Truman.

Although they said they've corrected their methods since then, they still were wary about estimating the outcome.

Crossley said the big headache is the undecided category. He estimated 10 per cent of the voters are in that group.

Gallup said his organization, the American Institute of Public Opinion, is making the final poll, and will publicize the results Monday.

English Bet Neck-and-Neck On President

LONDON (AP) — A big London bookmaker today rated the United States presidential election as a neck-and-neck race.

Bookmaker Douglas Stuart set his odds at 4 to 5 and pick four candidate—on that is you put up $5 to win $4.

But were still coming pretty fast, his spokesman said, "with not the slightest sign of a leading toward either candidate."

WILLIAM ANDREW DOLAN

A well known and highly respected and lifelong resident of this city in the person of William Andrew Dolan, 278 George Street, died at the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday after an illness of some duration. Mr. Dolan was a contractor, having grown up in the business when his father, the late Francis Dolan, and which business is now being carried on through his son.

Many of the paving jobs in Eastern Ontario were constructed by the Dolan family and in this city many sidewalks and pavements on streets were under their supervision. The late Mr. Dolan was a man of pleasing personality, had a host of lifelong friends and his death will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle.

He was born in Belleville, being the son of the late Francis Dolan and Catherine Burns and has resided in this city all his life. He was an active and faithful member of St. Michael's Church and when health permitted engaged in its activities. Fraternally he was a charter member of Belleville Council Knights of Columbus No. 1008 and in the church a member of the Holy Name Society.

Surviving are his widow, the former Bertha J. Rawlin, one son, Charles F. Dolan, one daughter, Miss Eleanor C. Dolan, both at home, three sisters, Mrs. Mary McCue of Chicago, Ill., Miss Kate Dolan and Miss Elizabeth Dolan of this city and two brothers, Frank J. Dolan of Montreal, Que., and Terry R. Dolan, druggist in this city.

Resting at the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARGARET DORAN

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Doran was held from the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home this Friday morning to St. Michael's Church. Mass was celebrated by Very Rev. Dean L. B. Garvin with Rev. J. Brennan acting the committal rites at St. James Cemetery.

The bearers were William Whelan, William Carnahan, William O'Brien, John Bennett, Stanley O'Brien and Richard Bennett, all nephews of the deceased.

Traffic Expert Not To be Hired Says Committee

Owing to the excessive cost and also to the fact that council is endeavoring to set up a new traffic commission, no action will be taken with respect to hiring a traffic expert to make a survey of local traffic conditions.

This was recommended by members of the city traffic committee at their regular meeting held Wednesday.

At the last meeting of council, Chairman of Traffic Aldermain Bruce Latimer submitted probable costs of hiring a traffic expert as had been requested by council. Cost of such a survey would be approximately $7,000, it was shown. Instead of hiring the traffic expert council will have to set up a traffic commission such as in operation in the city of Toronto.

The committee was told by a Northern Electric representative that due to additional cost of installation during winter months, it would not be possible to install traffic lights at the North Front Street and Moira Street intersection until spring.

Approval was given by the committee to forward to the police commission a copy of councils recommendation in particular the traffic light, the cost to be supplied to the 1953 budget. On approval of the police commission the comptroller will be authorized to place the necessary orders.

Alderman Temple drew attention to an unsatisfactory drainage condition at Grove, Strachan and Park Street, Police Inspector J. C. Hayes was instructed to bring in a report.

Purchase of sufficient land at the corner of Yeomans and Moira Streets to round off the corner was suggested by Garn Dobbs in a letter to the committee. The matter will be looked into by the public works committee.

Hospital By-Law Up for Decision Next Monday

City council at their next meeting on Monday afternoon will be asked to vote on a by-law to provide the Belleville General Hospital with an amount not exceeding $500,000 as the city's share in the construction of an additional 86-bed wing.

Decision to formally place the matter before council was made by the finance committee at their committee meeting held Wednesday. The city solicitor was instructed to prepare the necessary by-law and have it ready for Monday's meeting of council.

In presenting the by-law it is understood that the $500,000 requested will be reduced by the amount raised in a public subscription as was shown in the brief presented by council last October by the hospital board chairman J. N. Yanover.

$14,000 Turned In by Canvassers for Red Feather

A total of $14,000 has been turned in by canvassers of the Red Feather Campaign, officials of the campaign announced today. The amount represents 57 per cent of the overall objective of $24,500.

Headquarters added that approximately 60 percent of the canvassers out of a total of 300 had completed their work and turned in the results.

Officials again stress the necessity for redoubled efforts among campaign workers and citizens if the complete program is accomplished. This can only be brought about, they state, by the fund reaching the goal set for it.

High-Class Entertainment Features Shrine Club's Ladies' Night Party

President D. L. Storey and members of the Belleville Shrine Club proved excellent hosts at their "Ladies' Night" party given in the well-appointed club rooms last night.

Upwards of 190 Shriners, their wives and guests enjoyed the congenial hospitality that is synonymous with Shrine functions of the gay and colorful atmosphere.

Special guests were Imperial Potentate W. Reg. Shaw of the Ramses Temple Divan, Toronto. With Potentate Shaw were divan members, Assistant Chief Divan Fred Midgley, High Priest and Prophet Arnold Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. A. E. Wilson, Toronto, and a member of the party. President Storey is the Oriental Guide of the divan. Past Potentate Dr. Grant Fraser, and Mrs. Fraser, of Madoc, also were present.

Tribute to Club

Following an informal welcome to his guests, President Storey introduced Potentate Shaw, who paid fine tribute to the excellent work being done by the Belleville and members of the Belleville club. "Every noble," he said, "should be justly proud of the fine work being done by his club."

Deluxe entertainment highlighted the evening program with Jack McLean, talented master-of-ceremonies and an outstanding entertainer in his own right, "brought down the house" with his clever impersonations of well-known stage, screen and radio artists. His ideas of Jimmy Durante, Rudee Valle, Johnny Ray, Al Jolson, his amusing patter and humorous songs brought well-deserved ovations.

Miss Helen Bruce, attractive blond singer whose lovely voice was heard in several ballads, was a distinct entertainment department. Miss Bruce evoked roars of merriment with her "individual attention" to certain male guests.

Miss Bruce was also heard in "serious" offerings and her fine stage personality and voice earned for her the continued plaudits of the guests.

Rose Bertram, a magician, out of the ordinary, with a humorous line of patter electrified his audience with tricks with cards and other objects that were almost uncanny. He used volunteers in some of his feats that added greatly to the humor of the various situations. His trick of making a card packed in a boxed deck re-appear in a toy balloon, was one of the features of his act. The "disappearing" doll-ey bill that was alternately burned and torn only to appear in its original state was another clever piece of legerdemain.

Modern Trend

Mrs. Grace Calvert accompanied the artists at the Hammond organ and played in the modern trend of the evening and contributed in no small way to the musical success of the evening.

Lady guests were presented with lovely favors and several valuable prizes were distributed through ticket numbers. Bridge and other games were enjoyed during the evening.

A delightful buffet supper was served at midnight rounding out a thoroughly enjoyable social function for which the Shriners are justifiably noted.

It Could be Someone Is Trying To Give Toronto Mayor the Bird

A Toronto visitor to Trenton, who wished to remain anonymous, dropped into the editorial offices of the Ontario Intelligencer, Thursday afternoon and reported that he had seen a robin on Front Street. He said he felt the sight was somewhat unusual for this time of year and left the impression that any sighting of a robin, especially a Toronto robin, would have been on its way south long ago.

He was thanked for the information, although a member of the staff, pointed out that a robin had taken up residence in a tree near here during the summer and was still there, despite the chilly weather.

She said it was her opinion that the robin she knew had appointed itself a one-man committee to welcome the Florida Chamber of Commerce. With this in mind, she added, it may have enlisted the aid of another bird—possibly the robin the Toronto mayor saw.

The Toronto man was skeptical, but said if there were still robins in Trenton and none in Toronto this late in the fall, Mayor Allan Lamport would in all probability view the situation as a personal affront to his office.

It could even lead, he suggested, to the Toronto mayor hurling a challenge to the tardy robins to a plowing match—probably on New Year's Day.

Appeal Is Made For Assistance To Needy Family

Living in some rooms in the upper part of a barn on the fringe of the city is a mother and her nine children.

The youngest member of the family is 3 1-2 months. The oldest, ten years.

The father and husband, it is alleged, has deserted his family.

The family, brought in from a nearby community was in dire need of the necessities of life.

Members of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross went to the rescue when first informed of the family's plight. They have placed the mother and her children on temporary food and clothing ration.

What the family needed now is one or two old cupboards or something similar suitable for storing clothing. Anyone having such articles is requested to call 678.

Federal Government Will Share Cost

Federal government had assisted with the Chemong Lake bridge and that it was similar to the proposed structure here. If the Federal government decided to go ahead with the bridge, Prince Edward counties would be called upon to pay ten per cent each of the cost.

Cost of the project was estimated at $238,000 provided that the central span costs $70,000. According to discussions at previous gatherings further details of the project will be presented to County Council for presentation to Ottawa authorities.

Quiet to Start

Such a bridge would give Prince Edward County its only outlet to the east other than the Glenora ferry and the ferry which crosses at the site of the proposed bridge.

Many are greatly encouraged by the attitude of the provincial government. Reeve Griffis said, "Mr. Doucett told us the project was going in good faith and if the Federal government would not assume the cost of the swing span, the province would pay 80 percent of the cost of both the causeway and bridge."

"The matter will now again be put before the counties and I feel it is quite possible there will be some action soon," he said.

COAL GAS FATALITY

JORDAN STATION (CP)—An elderly man was killed yesterday and his wife taken to hospital in serious condition after coal gas filled their three-room apartment in this village of Jordan, south of St. Catharines. John Strong, 72, and his wife Matilda were found by Lloyd Spence, their landlord, when he forced his way in a window after no signs of life were seen.

Qualified Group Handling Classes For 'Y' Youth

The boys' and girls' classes at the Y.M.C.A. are now in full swing. Boys meet on Saturday mornings and Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, while girls attend their classes on Monday and Wednesday afternoons.

Helping Di Diamantides, physical director, with the boys activities are: Don Cherry, Jim McDonald, John Butler, Jack Mathews and Terry Clifton.

All are members of the Y.M.C.A. and have experience in teaching gymnastics and swimming skills. Don Cherry is the president of the Hi-Y Club. Jack Mathews is the secretary and the others are members of the same club. All five are very active members of school sports in general, and in various clubs and societies at the B.C.I. V.S. They all are members of the senior rugby and basketball teams. Jack Mathews and Jim McDonald are holders of the Bronze Medallion in Life Saving and both were lifeguards and taught swimming last summer at the Kinsmen's outdoor pool.

In charge of the different girls' groups and activities at the Y.W.C.A. are Barbara and Anne Bennett, Beth Wilbur and Sandra Winter. All four are holders of the Bronze Medallion, are members of their school Leaders' Club, senior volleyball team, and they have excellent records in basketball skills and techniques.

Sandra Winter taught at the Y for three years and she has also experience as a camp counsellor. Anne Bennett is the vice-president of the Girls Hi-Y Club, and her sister Barbara taught swimming at the Kinsmen outdoor pool last summer. Beth Wilbur is the president of the Keyette Club, girls' counterpart to the cadets and I feel it is quite possible there will be some action soon," he said.

P.U.C. Members Undecided About Rate Increase

Members of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission are as yet undecided whether an increase in retail consumer rates will be necessary in this city, as result of the increased power cost to municipalities announced yesterday by Hydro Commission Chairman Robert H. Saunders.

"The local commission has not considered whether it will be necessary to raise the retail rate to take care of the increased cost," Mr. Frank J. Follwell, chairman of the Belleville Utilities said.

Mr. Follwell said the commission had received word from the Ontario Power Commission that the interim rate for power for 1953 would be $38.25 per K.W. per year.

Power costs to the local commission have increased $12.87 per K.W. per year, or about $1.3 per cent since 1947, according to Mr. Follwell. In 1947 the rate was $25.38 and by 1951 had risen to $34.38, a $4.71 increase over 1950. The interim rate for power for 1953 will be about the same as for 1927, it was stated.

PICTON
Proposed Bridge Nears Reality As Ontario States Subsidy Plans
PICTON—The proposed bridge connecting Hastings and Prince Edward counties, between the present Crosby's ferry in Hallowell Township and the town of Deseronto is a step nearer realization as a result of an announcement yesterday that the Ontario Government is prepared, if necessary, to pay a subsidy of 80 per cent of the entire cost.
The Ontario Department of Highways, through the minister, Hon. George Doucett, stated last year that it was willing to grant the usual bridge subsidy for construction of the causeways but stated that it was the responsibility of the Federal government to build the central swing span. Action Takes Negotiations have been at a standstill as a result, and remained so until last week when a delegation headed by Norris Whitney, M.L.A. for Prince Edward-Lennox, Warden Calvin Hughes of Prince Edward, Warden Grills of Hastings county and Roscoe Robson, M.L.A. for Hastings East, met Mr. Doucett. While the view was again expressed that the Federal government should bear the cost of the central span, the Ontario department agreed that it would pay 80 per cent of the cost of the entire project.
Efforts will continue to be made to have the Federal government assist, Mr. Whitney stated. He cited the fact that the Federal government had assisted with the Chemong Lake bridge and that it was similar to the proposed structure here.

TRENTON

Mayor K. Couch To be Candidate, Seeks 7th Term

TRENTON — (Special) — Mayor Kenneth J. Couch announced yesterday he would be a candidate seeking his seventh term as Chief Magistrate in the municipal election in December. Almost simultaneously councillors Charles Aikens, chairman of finance and councillor Ing. Armstrong, chairman of conservation of health and court of revision, made similar statements. There are still three councillors to hear from: councillor Ross Burt, chairman of public works, Claude Graham, chairman of city property, councillor N. Banfield, recreation and community service and councillor C. V. Graham, councillor of protection to persons and property. Earlier Cliff Gunter, chairman of sanitation and waste removal, decided to run.

Since the mayor announced his intention to enter the field again, sidewalk politicians venture predictions and speculate on the mayoralty race. One political deputy ter in high office maintains one darkhorse and possibly two will oppose Mr. Couch. This same person looks for councillor Ross Burtt to seek re-election.

Revaluation Of Gold, Use Urged by Drew

WINNIPEG (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said last night revaluation of gold and its use in a Canadian gold coinage are necessary steps for increasing foreign trade and re-establishment of the Canadian gold mining industry.

Addressing a nomination convention, which unanimously chose Gordon Churchill, member of Parliament for Winnipeg South Centre, as its candidate at the next federal election, he stressed the need for increased trade and development of the country's resources to provide maximum employment for Canadians.

He said he hoped Canada would take the lead at next month's Commonwealth conference in London in a move to re-open the non-ferrous metals of trade.

"We should establish our own price for gold, and start minting gold coins that we could sell freely to the world."

If a proper value was put on gold, Mr. Drew said, it would prevent stripping of rich veins and the permanent loss of low-grade ores.

He was "amazed" to read reports attributed to reliable sources in Ottawa that Canada was going to follow the British "cheap money" policy at the forthcoming Commonwealth conference.

"We have plenty to do here before we can tell Britain or anybody else what to do in their own country."

Korean Tells Ike to Alter His Policies

PUSAN, Korea (AP) — A Korean lawmaker said today Dwight D. Eisenhower would be welcomed as an "honored guest" of the Republican presidential candidate was elected and if:

"... he changes his European-first and Asia-second policy."

Rep. Yi Yong, vice-chairman of the National Assembly, has previously expressed opposition to Eisenhower's stated plan to replace American divisions with South Korean troops.

Long Service Pins Presented At Stephens-Adamson Dinner On 25th Anniversary

Members of the Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company of Canada both from branch offices out of the city and local men in December. Almost simultaneously councillors Charles Aikens, chairman of finance and councillor Ing. Armstrong, chairman of conservation of health and court of revision, made similar statements. There are still three councillors to hear from: councillor Ross Burtt, chairman of public works, Claude Graham, chairman of city property, councillor N. Employees Congratulated

Mr. Stephens, descendant of one of the first partners and co-founders of the company in the United States, Mr. Stephens congratulated the employees on their anniversary. "You have a great record," he said, "as a matter of fact, you have several records. Never do we have made better progress in the last 25 years and have had better performance than any other of the plants. Many happy returns of the day."

Besides the service pin presentations, J. C. H. Wright, master of ceremonies and general sales manager, spoke briefly to each of the employees as he landed Mr. Freeman for his part in managing the Canadian factory.

"If it had not been for Mr. Freeman," he said Mr. Young, "no doubtful this Canadian branch would have survived as it has certainly without Mr. Freeman's leadership. He would not have reached the high degree of performance or success we have." He thanked the directing the plan for their choice of manager in the person of Mr. Freeman, as sales manager, on behalf of the employees, presented Mr. Freeman with a blanket and overcoat.

At 9:30, following the supper, entertainment was under at the Club Commodore for some fine entertainment and dancing. A floor show, featuring some excellent local talent kept the packed dance hall entertained while the orchestra took a breather. Refreshments were served at midnight.

TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT

Tonight the witches are on the wing again. This is the night when the youngsters give full vent to their wildest concepts of devilry. It is also the night when their fathers will be recalling escapades of their youth which would be not believed by the young fry today.

Today's youngsters in an urban community have lost the true Hallowe'en spirit, but few would say that it is not for the best. In these days it has become an organized festival of fun, a sort of junior mardi gras, in which the children have full rein to their exuberant spirits without getting into the mischief that their fathers did.

In the ebullient years of youth a generation or more ago, everything was fair game on Hallowe'en. Minor vandalism, the unpleasant odor of an old thread spool and a string to rattle all windows in the neighborhood, soaped windows, or the string across a neighbor's walk, and the traditional dumping of all outhouses.

Most of these projects were the dismantling of a dray wagon and its appearance the next morning fully-rigged astride the top of the nearby church, or the hanging of a canoe from the flag-pole of the Town Hall. These were commonplace high-jinks of Hallowe'en.

Now we see the youngsters of most communities assembled and registered for a night of organized fun. In Belleville this "Y" will be the centre of activities under the auspices of the Y's Men.

The advantages of this sort of organization are obvious. While it must be admitted that more than one of today's frank youngsters have tipped over a privy or two in their younger years it must also be acknowledged that more than one Hallowe'en excursion in youth of a few years ago was the first step to the organized gang which became more and more bold and finally led to criminal activity on a larger scale.

In the organized fun that is the new tradition of Hallowe'en the great majority of the youngsters are being diverted from the temptations to vandalism which were bred in many a youth in the past.

IT IS UNBECOMING

For quite a few years quite a few newspaper editors in this country have been trying to get the idea across to Canadian merchants that those people who are the role of hosts to our American visitors. They have not had much success.

The idea is that it is does not become us as Canadians to behold our each Fourth of July "Stars and Stripes" bunting with the obviously transparent motive of impressing visitors from the United States. Now the advocates of this idea have some support from a few American visitors.

Here in Toronto a number of members of a Southern States Co-operative from Virginia were being entertained. The only newsworthy item arising out of their visit was the surprise evinced by the Virginians at the sight of Union flags. A local newspaperman attempted to explain that the flags were being flown as a compliment to the visitors. He was told by one of the American party that, although he appreciated the courtesy he did not consider it either a compliment of an attraction to buy. I come to Canada expecting to see Canadian flags.

It must be patently obvious to any thinking American that the use of the Stars and Stripes is an obsequious gesture. It is nice to know that some of them resent it. Thinking Canadians have resented it for a long time.

Simply, we Canadians of sturdy stock not have to fawn upon its visitors. Native politeness and courtesy are all they expect from us beyond the opportunity to enjoy our undoubted attractions as a sovereign state.

Another of the more public displays of the American flag which are so conspicuous during the summer months we have never become quite tolerant of the practice of some service clubs in mounting the Stars and Stripes alongside of the Union Jack as a permanent fixture at their weekly luncheon head tables. And they go further than that if there is a visiting American club member present by the Country Club or Rotary.

In the first instance, they should properly sing The Star Spangled Banner. In the second place, few of them know the words and can only carry on in time of "My Country" because it is the tune of the British Anthem. No Canadian would feel complimented if he were at a luncheon in the United States and heard his hosts mumbling through the tunes of God Save the King" merely that he would be embarrassed. And we rather suspect that Americans feel the same way when they are subjected to performances of the same kind on this side of the border.

REAL GHOSTS

Do I believe in ghosts?
I do.
I'll swear that I have seen one,
too.
I've heard them wail, I've heard them moan,
I've met them singly and in bone.
I've watched them set a chocolate drop
And I have even served them pop.

By many ways I can prove
The solemn fact that ghosts are real.
I've heard my door bell ring at night,
But on the step found none in sight;
Then suddenly from bushes near I've seen a white-robed ghost appear.

I'm very sure that ghosts exist,
For I am on their calling list.
Though it's a practice some condemn
I keep a penny fund for them.
Small gifts for little ghosts to choose,
For personal pleasure as they choose.

Have I of ghosts the slightest proof?
I've had them underneath my roof.
And further I can make the claim
That some of them I've known by name.
Just look about on Hallowe'en
And everywhere will ghosts be seen.

Shangri-la in South Pacific

(By Albert Norman, writing from Sydney, Australia, in Christian Science Monitor.)

Shangri-la can always be found. Franklin Boyer found his 20 years ago steaming to China with the United States marine corps. He married it carefully on the map and never lost sight of it. But it wasn't until recently that he was able to move in, no longer a marine but a veteran with long service and campaign ribbons to match.

Australians know Franklin Boyer's Shangri-la as Norfolk Island in the 13 square mile, thickly fertile crest of a tropical sea mount which rises solitary above the ocean surface from a vast underwater plain, almost halfway east of Australia.

Today's Norfolkers are mainly the descendants of the 18th century mutineers of H.M.S. Bounty and by reason of their forebears' mutineers set up home on lonely Pitcairn Island with their Tahitian wives. In 1856 the population was moved to Norfolk Island, then considered a more spacious place.

* * *

In today's worried world, Norfolkers are known for their relaxed approach to lotus eaters among the white races. Their unhurried, shy, soft spoken people are the Boyer's neighbors.

"It is an uncommon," Franklin Boyer will tell you, "for our nearest neighbor to call for early breakfast or some nice baking specialities she has just turned out. Such hospitality and generosity is typical of the Norfolkers."

This open handed good nature has assisted the island's richness to sell and a superabundance of food. Fruit, in particular, is very plentiful, cheap and of fine quality, it seems there is a special season for each individual fruit. As soon as one is out of season, another comes on. Strawberries are grown, lemons grow wild and are obtained almost all year round. Oranges, mandarins, passion fruit, pears, plums, pineapples, pastoral fruits, peaches, nectarines, figs, cheap on Norfolk. My wife and I find that we can get by very well on $40 (U.S.$37) a month. Eggs, milk, cream and vegetables are obtainable most reasonably from agriculturally inclined neighbors. Local meat also is inexpensive."

Norfolk Island's most recent resident declares he bought his property unseen on the job of a friend and without seeing it. "I read about it in an old white ever in the States, a deal which turned out very satisfactorily for all concerned."

All the furniture for the house was manufactured on the island and shipped over. "A few months ago," Boyer said, "we had built, and bought a grand piano from Americans, a Chickering from Boston. It arrived in perfect shape and received in excellent condition."

The Boyers have a grand stand-by for the long Norfolk evenings. The island's 1,100-strong population is neighborly people. They like to visit and sing songs together.

This homey kind of living fits in perfectly with the Boyers' own like that.

considerable talents and friendly inclination. Franklin Boyer is an accomplished artist and philosopher and his wife, Ernata, has a fine musical ear. She also is a pianist. And for fun they play duets on the piano.

Before coming to Norfolk Island, Mr. Boyer was a bachelor. Ernata, a tall, fine looking New Zealand girl, happened to be visiting with friends on the island. Now they are a team.

The Boyers are perfectly happy in their island bungalow. "It has most of the modern conveniences," said the proud owner, "a kerosene refrigerator, a kerosene range, electric light, a modern bathroom, with hot water. Our water supply comes from two 1,000 gallon tanks which catch the rainwater from the roof.

"During the dry months (December, January, February) we save the bath water and put it on the plants and flowers to be explained.

"This seems like a strange custom, but its practice is general in this part of the world.

In this particular South Pacific Shangri-la, the Boyers find most unbelievably easy going if people want it that way. The added comforts of relaxation in this beautiful pine wooded island is home vegetable garden work, and for digging a potato patch, fixing a fence, or helping with the haymaking. Food production is so easy there is very little economic incentive to work hard.

The burdens of big city life with its traffic congestion, noise, and people, the islanders pay no income tax, no rates on property and no sales taxes. The Australian government raises a modest revenue on imported goods, and from the sale of postage stamps, rents from government houses, and from automobile license fees.

The island's present approach to direct taxation is the annual obligation for males between 21 and 60 years of age to do public works, such as repairing the roads, for which they receive rations. Otherwise, a $6 year's exemption fee is levied.

About 140 children attend the government grade school which is presently operating its 100th year. The government provides two trained teachers from Australia. The Boyers have received a grant of $10,000 to help finance local administration.

This is in the hands of an Australian administrator. And there are no elections, no political parties, no electoral purposes, the island is considered part of New South Sydney.

While the Boyers have settled in an obviously easy going community, there is plenty of evidence that all Norfolkers aren't lotus eaters.

The island press (Weekly Island News), for example, has the earmarks of big paper enterprise. It has a weekly air letter edition for late news. It also reports the happenings around the state of international gold reserves, happenings in the world of art and, of course, Washington politics.

This and other evidence show the place can be an up and coming little kind of world. For those who like it that way. Then there is the Boyers. They like it. But the Boyers are somewhere in between, following their own happy, no-hurry way of life. Their friends feel Shangri-la should be just

Stiff Work For Father

(Toronto Star)

A nine-year-old child in Grade 3 at a Toronto public school has penned the following list of questions about the United Nations which she has been asked to answer from material available:

"Who are the 'Big Five?' What is the veto? What is your side to take in the Korean War? Will the League of Nations?" What part did the United States and Russia play in the League of Nations? What is the name of the main parliament of the United Nations? Who is its president? What is the main responsibility of the security council? In 1945 and 1949 Canada was a non-permanent member of the security Council. Who was the Canadian representative? In 1946 and 1949 the Security Council helped to halt one war and one threat of war. Name the countries concerned. What does the 'Universal Declaration of Human Rights' say about education?"

The child's mother are going to be wrinkling their brows helping Johnny and Mary wiggle through all this absurd sort of thing continues.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

NOT MERELY TO POSSESS

The older I grow the less I care for possessions. I look upon what I have as only something that has been loaned to me and which will pass to other owners when I go. Even treasures that cannot be measured by monetary standards but are priceless to me, I feel only concern is — will they be loved as I have loved them?

I once knew a noted publisher who worked hard in his youth and later accumulated through shrewd planning and investments a fortune of many millions. He reached the end of his life he began to worry what to do with this amount of wealth, for he was unmarried. He finally gave it to a hump and to a great university. Possession had not made him happy. He had few friends and his passing brought little sorrow.

How true it is that we are the things we give away! There is richness all around us if we have. I found a visit that beautiful Dartmouth College in New Hampshire, and George F. Baker, without feeling a sense of love for the men who gave it. I note the thousands of boys who are busy in the finely appointed buildings, receiving education and building of bonds, real estate, and other investments given over to those who only waste their substance. Merely to possess, and for no other reason, gives to the possessor a constant dissatisfaction.

There is no thrill in this life that returns so much satisfaction as to give to someone else from our store of wealth the enjoyment of beauty. Such wealth is spiritually immortal and it is the kind that we never passed, but endlessly grow greater!

courageed to remain with his wife and help her before, during and after the birth of their baby. It would be a tremendous job and a thankless one to try to compile data on hospitals throughout the country. I tell you about it here and I assure you that no physician or hospital representative will venture to contradict what I say about the new obstetrics. If you are interested ask your doctor whether rooming-in has been adopted in a hospital in your community. Your doctor doesn't know, ask the county medical society by telephone. If the medical society gives you the brushoff you probably just have to wait another fifty years or so for the profession in your neck of the woods to catch up with progress.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

The Two Dollar Words

One of the many reasons why we rate your column as the best health column in print you never impose frightening medical terms on readers without explaining in plain language... (Mrs. E. T.)

Answer — Frankly, I have to render medical parlance into plain language before I can understand it myself. Seriously, I agree with you completely on plain language—I try to do so. Many of the terms published in print the medicales sticks out and jeers at me.

Chronic Joint Disability

Dr. ... of ... advised me to write for your booklet on arthritis. He said you would tell me how to use Vitamin D and Calcium... (Mrs. K. K.)

Answer—Send 20c and stamped self-addressed envelope for the booklet The His Called Rheumatoid Arthritis. "Arthritis" is just-medical Greek for joint inflammation and disability. It doesn't identify any particular injury or disease.

Barbiturates and Knock Out Drops

Does the sedative chloral hydrate contain any form of barbituric acid? (Mrs. H.)

Answer—Chloral hydrate is a powerful hypnotic, not a mere sedative. It is called a "knock-out" drops. Barbital is another drug although a slightly less powerful hypnotic.

IDLE NURSES IN NINETEENTH CENTURY HOSPITALS

Just because the international quack who conducts this wretched column insists that home is the best place to have a baby, some shiny-haired writer that does have a peculiar antipathy against hospitals.

I like well conducted hospitals. I'll traipse off to the hospital as patient any time a real doctor advises me to do so. I'll go cheerfully too, for my experience as a hospital patient has been downright delightful from beginning to end. It has not been my lot, and I trouble for many persons, I still think the average hospital is not up to what it should be, although harmless enough. I enjoy the idea of a beautiful ambulance.

A well informed observer — and I purport to be well informed in this particular area — has heard the cry about the shortage of hospital beds and the shortage of nurses, must about the number of idle nurses in many of the larger hospitals.

This idleness is not the nurses' fault. It is the fault of the hospital nursing and medical staffs who cling to nineteenth century methods and rigid rules of staff as long as possible the adoption of the modern methods known as "rooming-in" for the care of obstetrical patients and their construction in the care of their babies. The resultant nursery hysterics enables the young mother to care for her own baby and release the nurse for more important work.

In the old time institutions that have not adopted rooming-in a good many nurses are idle. It occupied with care of newborn infants—care which the mothers themselves could give and generally want to give. So I say these nurses in backward institutions are idle too much of the time, so far as useful or necessary work is concerned.

Physicians who are at all familiar with recent medical literature know what I say here is true.

I do not purpose to name hospitals which have adopted and the husband is en-

BRICKLAYING

One of the great Christian doctrines is the doctrine of regeneration. It proclaims the fact that every man is put into the world to do something definite and that the definite thing he does is a holy thing. The ministry is a sacred calling, but so is that of the only sacred calling. The housewife, the bookkeeper, the husbandman, the farmer, the mechanic, the salesman—all these are part of God's program. precisely the same as is the ministry of religion. In the Christian scheme of things, the whole of life is a sacred vocation.

May I not be that in your job has got a bit heavy on your hands, the reason is because you do not regard yourself and your work highly enough? Under the providence of God, we are all engaged in the job of building up Heaven. Your row of bricks and mine are in there somewhere.

Holiday Over for Coal Miners

Coal miners at Uniontown, Pa., convene to discuss the new order from union president John L. Lewis. In a surprise move, John L. ordered the miners back to work, ending the week-old strike at least temporarily. The men will work for the $1.50 a day raise allowed by the government while the union and the U.S. wage stabilization board argue the case. — Central Press Canadian.

Delegates from Seven Different Counties Attend Zone Meeting Of Federation of Agriculture

The many problems today confronting farmers were discussed here last week at the Zone 4 meeting of the Federation of Agriculture, at which delegates from seven different counties attended.

Counties represented at the meeting were Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Durham and Northumberland, Peterborough, and Victoria. Separate meetings were held, the women meeting in the agricultural office board room with Mrs. M. W. Woods, Warkworth, chairman of the women's committee, in charge. The men met in the Anglican Parish Hall under Donald Thompson, president of the Prince Edward Federation.

Representatives of the various counties reported on the work of U. F. Federation being carried on within their district.

Should Add Women

Discussion of women's attendance at meetings resulted in the decision that the Federation should add the names of lady delegates to the mailing list for meeting notification. One county reported the meetings were held alternately in each township, this resulting in new people becoming interested.

Closer relationship between women's institutes, farm forums and junior clubs was urged. Mrs. George Weir, Kent county, is chairman of the women's committee of the Ontario federation, referred to a number of ways in which women could take an active part in federation work. She suggested an information booth for the federation be set up at local fall fairs.

Interesting Information

Mrs. Weir also gave some interesting information on workman's compensation as applied to farmers. She said this would cover the farmer himself, any member of his family to whom he pays wages and other hired help. The premium is 75 cents on $100.

The afternoon meeting was a joint affair with both men and women taking part in discussion of resolutions dealing with parity prices and tariffs.

Cecil Belyea, Toronto, fieldman with the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, pointed out that while parity prices may have merit it was difficult to fix things back to a period in the past because of changing values.

Wesley Downs, former president of Ontario Junior Farmers, expressed the opinion that often farmers are somewhat to blame for low returns because of poor cultural practices.

Over-Production Feared

It was brought out that prices to protect the agricultural industry would only result in over-production. It was decided the chief problem was imports, which are often brought in to flood markets.

There were different opinions expressed on tariffs. Mr. Belyea said he favored free trading as high tariffs were a temporary measure and did not pay off in the long run, since when one country sets up tariffs, others do the same. Tariff barriers cause industries to spring up where no need exists while others fail where they are needed.

In the discussion on farm forums several expressed the need for greater co-operation between the forums and the federation of agriculture. One delegate said discussions were no good without local action on something that can be seen at home and not just something to be heard about in Toronto or Ottawa.

Better P.R. Urged

Clarence Milligan, Napanee, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, expressed the need for better public relations between urban and rural people.

This resulted in a discussion in which it was brought out that farmers aggravate urban-rural relations to a certain extent when it is stressed in the newspapers that some one had given a record amount of milk, while another farmer reports 500 bushels of potatoes from an acre.

Urban people, it was pointed out, think of these in terms of "big profits" and do not realize the average production is considerably below these figures.

Mr. Belyea warned farmers to be on the lookout for fraudulent people going about the country posing as income tax representatives and offering to look after income tax papers for a fee. When the money is paid the men are not heard from again.

Mr. C. Osborne, Durham county, was appointed chairman of Zone 4 with Mr. Lewis of Peterborough as secretary.

Good Religion and Human Need

By ROY L. SMITH

Perhaps the most important reason for Jesus' popularity among the multitudes of His own day was His very evident concern for the people who were in need. Whether they were sinners, outcasts, diseased, exploited or imprisoned, He seemed to take a profound interest in them. And it can be said concerning the Christian church, that wherever it has shown a similar concern, it has made progress. This week's Sunday school lesson tells two stories of the Master's compassion.

Judge Religious Also

Just as every religion teaches that men must sometime come before God for judgment, so religion must be judged. The yardstick by which they are to be judged eventually is the effect they produce upon men and upon society.

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for November 2 is "Jesus' Power and Human Need," Matthew 8.

A religion which produces devotees who are indifferent to the needs of other men will eventually be condemned to death. A religion which maintains a persistent and sincere concern in the welfare of all men will survive any persecution. If the church becomes interested in saving its own life at the expense of the welfare of the people, it will go the way of the pyramids and the gods of Babylon. If it becomes an actual force of redemption, nothing can destroy it.

Christian Heritage

There is a very great danger that the modern Christian may get a distorted impression of that generation of which Jesus was a part. The Church historians have not always been entirely fair in their estimates of the Jews. They have reported them as being selfish, callous, indifferent to suffering, and even a bit brutal. In comparison with the pagan ancient world, however, they were generous, compassionate, and unselfish. The influence of their prophets was, without a single exception, on the side of the poor and the needy, and the law of Moses were always freighted in favor of the friendless. It is a fact, of course, that the chief religious authorities among the Jews of that ancient day were ruthless and callous, but the hearts of the people were tender and kind. The Christian religion sprang up out of a soil which was fertilized by a great social concern.

Weddings

DEVOLIN—BAILEY

A quiet wedding was held on Wednesday, October 22nd, 1952, at 11:30 a.m., in Christ Church, Belleville, the Rev. R. P. Smith, officiating, when Margaret Greta, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James E. Bailey, was united in marriage to Thomas Victor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Devolin, of Belleville.

LOUCKS—BENNETT

Beneath an arch of evergreens, a pretty double-ring wedding ceremony was solemnized on Wednesday, October 15th, at 4:30 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennett, Frankford, when their daughter, Joan Irene Bennett, became the bride of Wallace John Loucks, of Frankford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Loucks. The Rev. B. MacEachern officiated.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Dorothy Grant, of Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her white, brocaded satin bridal gown, fashioned with fitted bodice having a Queen Anne collar and moulded sleeves ending in a point over the wrists. The skirt was gracefully full and of ballerina length. It was worn with a veil of tulle illusion held by enmatching headdress of pearls and tiny flowers, and carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

Miss Audrey McCord, of Port Burwell, Ontario, was matron of honour, dressed in plum colour of taffeta with navy accessories, being feather headdress, and carrying a hand bouquet of yellow roses.

Mr. George McCord, of Port Burwell, cousin of the bridegroom was groomsman.

The reception was held at the bride's home, which was attractively decorated with pink, blue and white streamers, white wedding bells and pink and white mums. The bride's mother received, wearing a gown of royal blue and silver crinkled taffeta with matching accessories, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore green crepe with yellow accessories.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. MacEachern, and other toasts were also given, with brief speeches by several friends of the bride.

Those who served were Misses Maida Hamilton, Gloucester, Valerie Thomson and Virginia Thomson.

The bride's gifts to those who served and to the pianist, were birthstone earrings and to her attendant, matching brooch and earrings.

For travelling to eastern Ontario and the United States, the bride chose a rust-colored velvet suit with black accessories, blue-grey check coat and yellow rose corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Loucks will reside in Belleville.

Guests were present from Port Burwell, Belleville, Madoc, Stirling and Trenton.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was the recipient of many lovely gifts at showers given in her honor: a kitchen shower at the home of Miss Dorothy Grant, Belleville, and a tea and soccer shower at the home of Miss Dorcas Catechuck, of Frankford.

Plans Completed to Transform London Into City of Gayety, Magic for June Coronation

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Plans have been completed to transform London into a city of revelry and magic for the June Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

Westminster City Council, responsible for the major share of the pageant's organization and financial outlay, already has been asked by the Coronation Planning Committee to approve an expenditure of some £20,000 for the decoration of its historic streets.

This figure reflects the sharp rise in cost of labor and materials since the 1937 Coronation of the late King George VI when the bill for decorations came to approximately £20,000.

Assisted by a team of expert designers, Sir Hugh Casson, director of architecture this year's Festival of Britain, has already released some preliminary sketches of next summer's Coronation color scheme to test reaction of public opinion.

In his assessment of what has been shown, comments has been mainly favorable.

Lively and Colored

Sir Hugh and his colleagues hope to turn London into the liveliest and most colorful city in the world for the duration of the celebrations.

"We have tried to assess the character and history of each street," Sir Hugh said. "The Coronation is a religious ceremony, but equally it is an occasion for national rejoicing."

The famous architect said he would seek to devise a decorative scheme that is dignified while the Coronation procession is in progress, but become a little more light-hearted when night falls.

"We might almost make the Lion and the Unicorn wink a bit after dark if we are clever with the lighting," he said.

Pomp and Pageantry

Many imaginative, colorful decorations with historic associations will be mingled with traditional display of pomp and pageantry.

Parliament Square, along which the royal procession will move to and from the Coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey, is to be given a Commonwealth motif, details of which have not yet been worked out.

Most of broad Whitehall, leading to the Parliament Buildings, will have for its theme "Her Majesty's Government."

Cockspur Street, where Canada House is located with a number of other Canadian business establishments, is to be decorated to impart a special reminder of the sea. There will be a lavish display of signal flags and naval pennants in honor of Admiral Nelson on top of his towering column in Trafalgar Square.

A maypole, in a flowered setting is planned for the junction of the Strand and the entrance to Waterloo Bridge, where historians say, a maypole stood in medieval times.

Eros Caged

Watch on Place in the Pall Mall, site of the Crimean War Monument, will be fittingly dressed to represent the armed services and of the Strand near Charing Cross plans call for erection of two giant statues of Gog and Magog, legendary sentinels of Britain.

In Piccadilly Circus, often described as the "Heart of the British Empire," Sir Hugh proposes to place a gilded cage around the famous statue of Eros and entwine Cupid's messenger in a bower of flowers.

Festoons of crowns are to be suspended overhead between flagdraped buildings — some streets, while others, such as busy Oxford Street will display an assortment of old-time trade signs, alternating with civic arms on decorated masts.

Lamp-posts will be dressed in varied and lavish color schemes, with one of the more original designs a plume of white and crimson from a Life-Guard-type Helmet — suggested for the light standards in Whitehall.

Meanwhile, plans have been begun on preliminary work by Nov. 3, on 80,000 seats that will accommodate spectators along the Coronation route.

Women's Institute

STIRLING WI

Mrs. C. Prior, Edward Street, Stirling, opened her home to the members of Stirling Women's Institute for their October meeting. The president presided and welcomed 27 members and guests.

A thank-you letter was read from Mrs. R. P. Coulter for treats received on her birthday. Mrs. George Sarles voiced her appreciation for a gift received by her when she was ill; Mrs. F. Bronson thanked Mrs. Kirky for carrying out her duties at a previous meeting.

Invitation Received

An invitation was received from Pine Grove W.I., to join with them at Chatterton Church on Wednesday, when Mrs. Rodgers attended the Area convention as well as other members. Mrs. S. Kirby as convener of the committee, will attend to the buying of silver ware for the kitchen.

Mrs. Don Thompson was chairlady for the evening's program, which was opened with community singing with Mrs. H. Rodgers as song leader and Mrs. Mabel Williams as pianist.

The topic chosen was "Community Activities", with Mrs. J. Morrison introducing "Loyalty and Religious Programs", which are the most valuable to a community, developing a greater opportunity to build a more worthwhile world in which to live. "If we are not loyal to our neighbors and friends, how can we be loyal to our church and community" said Mrs. Kirby.

Mrs. Kirky gave a reading on "Courage"; Mrs. Mabel Williams, a piano solo, and Mrs. Southern Melgrew a reading, "Polite Relations" was given by Mrs. C. Prior. "When I think of relations," stated Mrs. Prior, "it conveys you and me. Our community and a world-wide circle of friends. Speak well at all times of our Dominion, of things go wrong, it is the people who have been stepped," concluded the speaker.

Mrs. Don Thompson gave a reading "True Friendship". A contest "Names of Important People", was also given by Mrs. Sipp.

Mrs. W. C. Neal and Mrs. Williams won a box of candy. The consolation prize went to Mrs. Tufford's group, which was "gum".

Refreshments were served by Mesdames Morrison Kirky, Prior and Thompson.

After the social hour, Mrs. W. C. West moved a vote of thanks to the hostess, lunch and program committee for the educational program, delicious repast, and gracious hospitality of Mrs. Pryor.

Children of Juniper Will Miss Mrs. Hugh John Flemming, Wife Of Newly-Elected N.B. Premier

JUNIPER, N.B. (CP)—The children of Juniper miss Mrs. Hugh John now that she has moved to Fredericton with her husband, newly-elected Premier of New Brunswick.

Aida Flemming came to this community of 1,000, a mile north of Fredericton, as a bride six years ago and found everyone, especially the children, calling her husband Hugh John.

"I was amazed and pleased," she recalls, "and it was nice that they wanted to call me Mrs. Hugh John."

Mr. Flemming, elected Progressive Conservative premier in September's provincial election, is a native who live in a high-ceilinged flat in a house behind the Parliament Buildings in Fredericton.

Founded Library

Moving day was a sad one for Juniper's 200 children. It meant that they will have less, of Mrs. Hugh John's attentions at school in her role as librarian and founder of both the 3,000-volume library and the Red Cross station.

Mrs. Flemming, a tall woman with green eyes and dark-brown hair, is a graduate of Mount Allison University at Sackville, N.B.

She took a degree in education from the University of Toronto and a master's degree at Columbia University, New York.

Her background also stresses education. "I spent my first eight years at Kaslo in the Kootenay district of British Columbia where my father, Charles McAnn, was a lawyer," she recalls.

Moved to Moncton

Young Aida Boyer McAnn was brought up by an uncle, the late T. W. McAnn of Moncton, N.B.

"My uncle's hobbies were children and education. I inherit such interests from him. He used to take special interest in talented youngsters and would finance and supervise their education."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

Food For Thought

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Make your own plans and carry them out

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am 28 years old and planning to marry a man who has a good position and can provide everything I will ever need.

We have known each other for years, and we want to marry and have a family, but everyone says that for me to have children at my age would be too hard on me and that it would be unfair to the children for them to have older parents. Their think we should adopt an older child and not plan on any of our own.

What do you think?—Kay.

Dear Kay:
I think you and the man you are to marry should go right ahead and carry out your plans and wishes and pay no attention whatever to busybodies.

If you are in good health, and have a good doctor, there is no reason in the world why you should not have a child at your age. Modern medical science completely discounts the idea that it is unwise for women over 40 to have children, and the good practical sense of that theory is illustrated every day in maternity hospitals all over the country. Why don't you ask your own doctor and see if he does not bear this out? MacGregor, if you are wise and conscientious parents, your children will get along fine, regardless of your age.

Don't listen to idle gossip or unasked advice, and don't go around seeking opinions from other people. It is fine that you are going to marry a man who has been a long-time friend and who you know will take good care of you. Here's wishing you a happy marriage and a big family, and there's no reason why you shouldn't have both.

She's found "someone else"—does she really mean it?

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I was engaged to a girl with whom I had been going for two years, and we had been planning to be married at Christmas time. She lives about 50 miles away, and a week ago I received a letter from her in which she told me she had found some one else she cares for. As you can imagine, this was a terrible blow to me. I wrote her immediately and asked her to wait until I could get to see her before making any decision to break our engagement, but I received no reply, so I guess she wants me to understand that what she said was final.

She hasn't returned my ring, though, and I would like to know if you think I should ask her for it or just let it go.—R. L. P.

Dear R.L.P.:
Why did you wait for a reply to your letter before going up to see your girl and find out what everything was all about? Seems to me it would have been much more effective, and made much more of an impression on her, if you had hopped right into your car, or on a train, and make a prompt appearance in person.

Since her letter came only a week ago, it's still not too late if you hurry. Just to sit around waiting for her answer to your letter isn't going to convince her that you're a young man who knows what he wants and doesn't

Readers' Friday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:
... thanks for the calorie chart. . . . keep up the good work . . . with the cost of living the way it is today I dearly love every one of your Scotch suggestions. . . . am waiting patiently to hear how Pete gets along at school. . . . also how you get along with . . . out him at home. I sort of dread the day it happens here but it is quite a way away in the future for my two are under eight. . . . am so glad you offered to repeat recipe for light cake made in muffin tins. . . . after making the chocolate cake it was so delicious I just couldn't make myself wait longer to write—print it out soon again . . . also we have no oven . . . my family have missed cookies but I tried Date Squares last time I baked them. . . . intend to try them again, with a cooler oven . . . going to try Brownies too.—Mrs. O. F. H.

ANSWER:
Do you mean you tried Date Squares in the pressure cooker and with your method of cut Brownies that way too? Goodness. I don't know what to say, but I've never done it—I thought the cakes were going pretty far with experimentation. Offhand I would say keep the temperature very low and of course do not use pressure. I hope you saw last Monday's column on . . . I told you a little about Marianne and Pete there.

PRESSURE COOKER SEATHER CAKE

One-quarter cup ' of butter, margarine or shortening, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 egg, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1-1 cup milk, 1 cup flour, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 2 teaspoons baking powder. Cream the butter and half of the sugar. Beat egg, add remaining sugar and add to butter mixture. Add flour with salt and baking powder alternately with the milk. Have pressure cooker heated. Put 2 layers wax paper in bottom. Do not grease pressure cooker. Put in cake batter, fasten cover, but do not put on pressure. Cook over medium or on back side or wood fire. Just as it will not burn you may need to use asbestos mats. Add 20 minutes to normal baking time for butter cake—this takes about 90 minutes—but time depends on size of pressure cooker—for depth of batter will vary.

QUESTION:
I am very anxious to know calorie value of the following items. . . . 1 cup tomato soup, 1 cup vegetable soup, 1 cup chicken broth, also rye wafers. Is soup O.K. on the diet?—Mrs. L. R.

ANSWER:
One can condensed tomato soup contains 230 calories; 3-4 cup homemade cream or tomato soup, 160 calories; 1 can condensed cream of tomato contains 235 calories; 1 can condensed vegetable soup 285 cal.; 3-4 cup homemade vegetable soup 105 cal.; 1 can condensed vegetable soup without cream 245 cal; calories in chicken broth vary but from 35 to 50 calories is average; rye wafer 1 7-8" x 3 3-8" contains 18 calories. Clear soup is recommended before dinner for it reduces your appetite, but since a high protein diet is advisable you must not fill up on thick soups at noontime. Be sure to include meat or eggs and cheese in both of your lunch and evening meal. Eggs are recommended for breakfast too.

QUESTION:
I have received your recipes for fruit preserving and I appreciate them very much. . . . and recipes I clipped "Chocolate Cake" cooked in pressure cooker and were very pleasing results. . . . If you have more baking recipes for pressure cooker I would appreciate them; also more lunch box suggestions for cookies and sandwich fillings. We have no refrigerator so it is hard to make up large batches of fillings and my husband takes three sandwiches and dessert in his lunch daily. I was eagerly watching your columns for more recipes on "Meals for Two", as I am a working gal and these recipes mean a lot to me. Especially those that don't take too long to prepare. The 30 and 40 minute casseroles take too long on a working day.—Mrs. Shirley V.

ANSWER:
See recipe for Pressure Cooker Feather Cake above Shirley.

LUNCH BOX SANDWICH FILLINGS

(1) Nippy cream cheese with pecans, walnuts and mayonnaise; flaked crabmeat with green pepper and mayonnaise; chopped hard-cooked egg with broken olives chopped and mayonnaise; ground veal or pork with celery salt or chopped celery, plenty of pepper and salt and mayonnaise. Mix the soft butter with the filling and this spreads up spreading the bread. I hope you saw last Monday's column containing 3 menus for two. I am mailing you a recent column on cookies.

intend to lose it if he can help it. But if you show yourself to be a man of action, she may take a different view of things.

Don't worry about the ring, yet. The fact that it hasn't been returned may be a sign that there's still hope for you. If the engagement is definitely broken, you can always ask for it back. But until you get things cleared up, there's always the chance that your girl thought you needed a bit of a jolt, and that she's bluffing. Hurry up and find out.

Fashion Flashes

A REGAL AIR marks many of the new evening hats. One designer shows a handsome tiara cap of bronze beads, the points at the sides, hugging the temples. Handsome in crystal beads and tiny rhinestones, too.

STARRING in every store is the all-black dress, but it is far from dull or drab. Mostly this is because of contrast in fabric, particularly texture. One dress alternates bands of black crepe and black velvet, while a black wool dress is encircled from the bust-line down in narrow inset bands of black satin.

STAY-AT-HOMES have their separates, too, most stores showing interesting merchandise in this category. A nice twosome might be a full skirt of shocking pink felt, dotted in black velvet with rhinestone centres, and a surplice top of black or pink wool jersey.

JUST A SMIDGIN of fur gives a suit a luxury look. Beige, rust, green or black wool worsted is used for a simple suit that achieves distinction by its small collar made of one mink skin.

STILL STARRED are stoles and shawl-wraps of lacy woollens. A floral wrap, worn folded in half, is of wool done in lacy loops, interspersed with metallic silver or gold crocheting, with the metallic accent repeated in fringe and marginal stripe.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Perplexing problems of honor attendant

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
I am planning my wedding. I have two sisters, one older, who is married, and one younger, not married. I was maid of honor for my sister, and my younger sister was a bridesmaid. Was it correct for me to tell my younger sister that she was to be my maid of honor? All my relatives tell me I should have selected my married sister. Please settle this petty argument.—Frances.

I don't think this is a "petty argument" at all. . . for I can well understand that your older sister might be deeply hurt by your not inviting her to be your honor attendant, as she had invited you to be her honor attendant. My suggestion is that you explain to your younger sister that you don't want to hurt your older sister, and also all your relatives feel strongly that you should have invited her. Another possibility: Ask your older sister to be your honor attendant at your wedding, and she would mind if you ask your younger sister to be your maid of honor. If she agrees, give your older sister the more important place and responsibilities: have her, as official witness, walk directly behind you, and have her then in the processional; have her take charge of your bouquet during the ceremony, returning it to you before the start of the receiving line; act as doubling-up ceremony, have her take charge of the groom's ring.

Groom, not best man, pays for bachelor dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
What is the duty of the best man as to entertaining for the wedding? Particularly this: is it expected that he give a stag party for the prospective groom? Please reply soon as I am clear for my brother, who has asked me to write you.—B.

The best man has no responsibility to give any kind of party. Usually the best man and prospective groom may ask him to help plan the bachelor dinner given by the groom who pays all the expenses of the dinner.

Two miscellaneous showers for the same girl, same guests invited

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
A miscellaneous shower was given in honor of a bride-to-be. Eleven guests and 11 miscellaneous were received for another miscellaneous shower, for her to be given by a girl who had attended the previous shower. As neither the bride-to-be nor her family has any relatives near here, the same guests are invited to both showers. Is this proper—to invite the same people to two showers of the same type?—L.

No, this is certainly overdoing it! (And of course, being a woman, I'm wondering how many accepted the follow-up "pressure" to give a similar present so soon after the first shower.)

Not courteous for guest to suggest time of visit

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
Saying grace was not the custom in my home, as my father's husband and I say grace in our home. Therefore we are unfamiliar with the expected audience, and I'm afraid we made a great social error last evening. For the first time we invited a very close business associate of my husband's and his wife to dine with us. The first course, shrimp cocktail, was already on the table when I summoned the guests. My husband and I were just about to take up our oyster forks when the wife said "May I say grace?" I immediately replied, "Please do," and she said grace. But my husband and I still think it was not right for her to do this. Do you or don't you agree?—Bill and Betty.

I do most definitely agree with you and your husband. I am an enthusiast for having grace said at tables, but I certainly don't think a guest has any right to force her point of view about this or suggest it. If he or she sees that it is not the custom of the household. One can always say grace silently to oneself. . . . and this is just what your woman guest should have done.

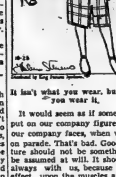
BEAUTY

Good posture creates a snappy figure

Carry your body correctly and with splendor, and it will express strength and courage. Let your head and shoulders droop, and you assume the attitude of despair.

When a woman feels out of sorts, when the bottom has fallen out of her world for the time being, when the old head aches and she is seized with the "what's the use" affliction, she should take the slack out of her spinal column, lifting her chin and her cheek. It is no time for her to bury her head under a pillow and bawl. Taking on an appearance of hopefulness will bring better spirits. It is heaven's truth.

Even if a woman feels wretched she shouldn't look it, because looking woeful makes her more unhappy. She should get out the old make-up kit, make herself a new face, put on a pretty frock and defy fate to put her out of circulation.



A smart husband declares that when his wife bops out or bed in the morning she runs to a mirror and gazes at her reflection. If she looks all right, she feels fine, rushes into the day's activities with zest and energy. He has something there.

Appearance may not affect the physical being to any great degree, but it certainly can have a lot to do with one's mental state. We have to stand by our jobs and responsibilities, and it is easier to face them if we stand up straight.

You will notice that pretty young girls carry themselves prettily when attired in their best and most becoming dry goods. Attired in blue jeans and any old top piece, they go slouchy; shoulders are forward and tummy protrudes. Clothes have that effect upon one.

It isn't what you wear, but how you wear it.

It would seem as if some of us put on our company figures, like our company faces, when we are on parade. That's bad. Good posture should not be something to be assumed at will. It should be and always will be, because of its effect upon the muscles and the inner organs. Breathing is deeper when the chest is held high. Deep breathing means better circulation. Normal circulation means sparkling eyes, colorful complexion and a light step.

It is an old saying that it isn't what you wear, but how you wear it, isn't that true? Some women can slip a bargain counter frock over the svelte frame that is held beautifully and look like a lady of fashion. Others, with poor posture, can don an expensive item and look anything but attractive.

THOMASBURG

CONFIRMATION SERVICE

Thomasburg — On Sunday morning in Christ Church, Thomasburg, a special service was conducted by the rector, Rev. R. F. Garnham, and the rite of confirmation performed by the Rt. Rev. Kenneth C. Evans, Lord Bishop of Ontario. There were eight candidates to pledge their vows and accept the blessing of the church, by the laying on of hands.

The church was filled almost to capacity. It was the reopening of the newly decorated edifice, as well as the bishop's first visit to this parish since his introduction as Lord Bishop of Ontario.

It was an inspiring service as Rt. Rev. Evans addressed the candidates and assembled congregation. The central thought of his discourse was the text, "I will never Leave Thee Nor Forsake Thee." Mrs. Bates of Roslin was organist for the service.

Sunday evening service in the United Church, Thomasburg, was fairly well attended, Rev. R. J. Norman's discourse was inspiring as well as food for serious thought. Appropriate hymns were chosen and led by the junior choir, with Mrs. Normam as organist.

The United Church Sunday School met at an earlier hour, 9.30 a.m. on Sunday to allow attendance at special services at Christ Church. The scholars responded well to the change, 56 being present in the session.

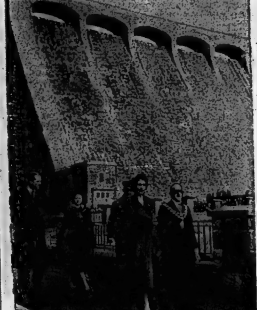
The open meeting for the installation of officers of the Rebekah Lodge, Thomasburg, was held Monday evening. A fuller account of proceedings will appear next week.

Last week-end seemed quiet in Thomasburg after the preceding long week-end holiday, and its activity.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Elliott and Michael, of Kingston, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Elliott.

Tuesday the Women's Auxiliary of the United Church in Thomasburg met for its regular monthly meeting in the vestry. Attendance was fair. Mrs. Baldrick, president, conducted the devotional part of the meeting. Mrs. H. Vance program convener gave an interesting reading on West Africa using a colored map showing where the United Church missions were in Angola. Her reading included letters from missionaries, Millicent Rowse and others also Dr. Gilchrist, many of whom remember hearing him speak while home on furlough over a year ago.

Mrs. (Rev.) Norman gave a short and instructive address on Newfoundland, the home province. Mrs. E. Morton also gave a reading "Worth of Today."



The business of the meeting included discussion re decorations to kitchen in vestry. Arrangements to attend the W.M.S. rally at Halloway were made.

The Thanksgiving collection was received. Many of the members renewed their subscriptions to the Missionary Monthly.

Next meeting is to be in the form of a pot luck supper to which husbands and friends are invited.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Baldrick's group.

New Power for British Industry

Queen Elizabeth II, followed by the Duke of Edinburgh, is shown on her way to formally open the new Clarewen dam, largest of its kind in Britain. Opening of the new reservoir was the climax to a project inaugurated by the Queen's great-grandfather, King Edward VII, nearly 50 years ago. Work on the new dam was started in September, 1946. With the Queen is the lord mayor of Birmingham, Ald. W. T. Bowen. In background the Duke accompanies the lady mayoress and lord of Breedshire, Major G. T. Raikes. The dam will provide Birmingham with extra hydro-electric power. — Central Press Canadian.

WITH THE CANADIANS IN KOREA (CP)—Canadian troops of the 25th Infantry Brigade are all set for winter.

This will be the army's third winter in Korea, and the preceding two provided plenty of useful hints.

Planners also have drawn on the 1950's exercise "Sweetbriar" in the Canadian north, the 1944 Normandy landings and experience "overseas" hospitals for lessons. A new Canadian army winter boot is to be tried out.

This is the army-men say the summer, following upon last winter's unusual mildness, will be followed inevitably this winter by intense cold and heavy snow.

Cold at Night

Already the thermometer falls to between 10 and 20 degrees at night but troops still peel down to shirt sleeves by day, when the mercury rises to between 60 and 70.

The cost of all winter gear has risen. Outfitting today's Canadian soldier for service costs more than $300.

Already the brigade has been issued battle-dress, woollen sweaters and shirts, scarves, winter caps and gloves, and its new British boots.

The British army's boot "C.W.W." (cold wet weather) was first tried out by the brigade last winter, when 1,000 pairs were bought. Solidly built, with insulated soles and reinforced toe-caps, they're priced at $28 a pair.

The new Canadian boot, known as the "Y-52," will be tried by 500 soldiers in the infantry, armoured and engineer corps. It is an ankle-type boot in black leather, is water-proof to a greater wading depth than other types, gives firmer ankle support and is considered neater.

Another British army wrinkle to be adopted by the Canadians is "self-heating soup."

First devised for the Normandy landings, the tin has a cylinder down the middle in which is a chemically-treated wick. Seconds after being lit the wick has burned for the soldier's mess tin.

From exercise "Sweetbriar" comes the "Yukon" stove, a squat, almost square-shaped contraption 20 inches wide and six inches deep. Gasoline-fed, it is designed for five-man tents. The larger squad tents will each have one of the larger, pot-bellied "space heaters" previously issued over here.

Fight Malaria

News from Canada that 700 veterans of the Korean war have developed malaria during the last year is keeping Sudafrine tablets as a daily "must."

Usully the tablets are dispensed with during winter months when the malaria-bearing mosquitoes disappear. However, since the Korean type of malaria appears capable of lying dormant eight or nine months before striking, the tablets will continue to be taken. Soldiers will not receive their parkas and wind pants until Nov. 15, when the weather begins to get really nasty.

FREED FROM PEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prison doors were opened this week at Kingston, Ont., for about 12 radical Doukhobor women from British Columbia, David Kahma, a member of the consultative committee on Doukhobor affairs reported here last night. Mr. Kahma said they were the last of 32 fons of Freedom women sentenced to five-year terms in 1947 for incendiarism in the Kootenays of British Columbia. He said the 12 have returned to their homes in B.C.

ASK END OF EMBARGO

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner last night announced that Canada would ask the United States to lift its embargo on Canadian cattle immediately after the U.S. election next week. He said there was every indication the ban, imposed when foot and mouth disease struck in Saskatchewan would be lifted.

500 Underground Africans Rooted Out by British

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters)—British troops, scouring the jungles fighting the Aberdare mountains, have rooted out more than 500 Mau-Mau gunmen, African suspected of aiding the anti-white Mau Mau society, the government announced today.

The drive concentrated in the thick bamboo jungle where thousands of young Kikuyu tribesmen fled last week-end.

Another swoop on the Nyeri and Naivasha areas put another 100 Africans under arrest for questioning, the spokesman added. It was in this district that an English farmer and two servants were killed earlier this week.

The entire Naivasha area will be put under a strict curfew from tonight, police headquarters here announced.

In all more than 3,000 Africans have been arrested since the colony's government declared a state of emergency 10 days ago.

BANCROFT

Sickroom Equipment Needed by Red Cross

Bancroft—The local branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society is appealing to the general public in this community for assistance in establishing a pool of sickroom equipment to bring comfort to sick persons of the district.

It is felt that a pool of this type should be established in each branch area to make available to persons in need of them, everything from hot water bottles to hospital beds.

In every community, on many occasions, families find themselves in need of crutches, back rests, wheel chairs, hospital beds, and many other items of this nature which are rarely used, difficult to obtain and, in many cases, beyond the reach of the average family.

An equipment pool, along the lines proposed, would overcome this obstacle and can only be formed through public support.

Persons wishing to contribute money or equipment may do so by contacting Miss Sigrid Laine, matron of the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital.

Say Europeans Cannot Afford Arms Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Times says today that a study of the Mutual Security Administration shows that European countries cannot be induced to spend more for defence in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1953.

This situation prevails the Times says, whatever the amount of economic aid extended to them by the United States to alleviate balance-of-payments difficulties.

A Washington dispatch to the Times also says:

"A study of economic capabilities of countries formerly embraced in the Marshall Plan which looks to next year's mutual security program found that among these countries, West Germany and Belgium would be the only allies of the U.S. that could substantially increase defence spending over the current fiscal year. . ."

29 CHILDREN DROWNED

Eight Men, Girl Start Voyage Across Atlantic

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. (Reuters)—Eight men and a girl left here last night in a launch to sail the Atlantic and start a new life in Canada and the United States.

The crew was selected from replies to an advertisement by skipper Cecil Heath.

Mrs. Vernice Rae, 27, only woman aboard the launch Pacil, has taken on a jack-of-all trades role to look after the men.

Apart from cooking for them in a pint-sized galley she will mend their clothes, do their washing and take her turn at the wheel.

Before the party left on the 4,000-mile trip, Mrs. Rae said: "Of course, the menu will depend on the gales in the Atlantic for we are in for a rough time."

John Richards, 26-year-old Oxford university graduate, has a 9-year-job awaiting him at Port Radium, uranium centre at Athabasca, Alta.

Government Ready to Launch New Machinery for Handling Suspected Trade Combines

Demand Excellent For Wheat Crop Now Harvested

WINNIPEG (CP)—Western Canada's record wheat crop not only has been harvested in good condition, but demand is excellent and export sales are being made in record volume.

An official of the Canadian Wheat Board yesterday confirmed reports that forward sales—commitments made to ship wheat to other countries in future months—are heavier than at any time in history.

The port of Vancouver is "booked solid" until the end of the crop year, July 31, 1953, and the wheat board said it now is turning down business calling for shipments through the Pacific coast port.

A similar situation is rapidly being reached in connection with export sales for shipment through Eastern ports.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government's new anti-combines organization goes into operation tomorrow with a new approach to the whole system of combines investigation.

Wielding wide powers will be a new three-man commission, headed by C. Rhodes Smith, former attorney-general of Manitoba. It will provide a "second chance" for companies and individuals accused of breaking the law to defend their actions before a report on the alleged combine goes to Justice Minister Garson.

Under the old system, Combines Commissioner T. D. MacDonald maintained the roles of detective prosecuting attorney and judge. He had power to make an inquiry into an alleged price-fixing or monopoly operation, to lodge whatever charges had been broken and to place a charge in the form of a report before the justice minister.

Under the new set-up, he maintains his function as detective and prosecuting attorney, but is stripped of his powers as judge. That now passes into the hands of the commission.

Can Call Witnesses

Authority for him to call witnesses and search offices and company books will be subject to approval of the commission. Once his investigation is completed, the new body will hear argument not only from the investigator, but also from the company or individual accused.

This will give the accused a second chance to defend its actions. It will be up to the commission to judge whether the case warrants a hearing by the minister or whether it should be quashed.

It still will be up to the minister to decide whether a prosecution should be launched and still will be mandatory for him to make the report public. He was allowed a maximum of 15 days in which to do so after receiving the report under the old set-up. This is reduced to 10 days under the new.

The new commission, known as the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, will include Guy Favreau of Montreal and A. S. Whiteley, former deputy combines commissioner, as members.

Mr. MacDonald's new title will be Director of Investigation and Research.

OPERATION IN KINGSTON

TORONTO (CP)—Barbara Ann Burton who came from Kingston to Sick Children's Hospital to have her right eye removed will have the operation performed in Kingston instead. "The hospital has decided to stay her home and have it done there," said Barbara's father, Alfred Burton. Barbara's left eye was removed last March when a tumor was found behind it. A growth also was discovered behind the right eye.

GETS 10 YEARS

TORONTO (CP)—James Regan, 48, yesterday was convicted of wounding his wife with intent to maim and sentenced to 10 years in jail. Regan had been charged with attempting to kill his wife last summer with a butcher knife. Evidence was that he grabbed her by the throat and cut her about the head with a knife.

Five Prospecting For Uranium Killed by Blast

HERRON, Mich. (AP) — Five men prospecting for uranium were killed last night when an underground explosion ripped through the 130-foot-deep shaft of an abandoned gold mine near here.

State police identified the victims as: John Wiczynski, Chicago; Pat Chevalier, 32, of Herron and three brothers, Zebe, 47, Henry, 37, and Bernard Donks, 44, all of Herron.

John Pastuszka of Chicago escaped injury in the blast.

Police said the bodies of Chevalier and Zeke Donks were still entombed at the bottom of the water-filled shaft. Searchers recovered the bodies of the other victims.

Minister of Works Has Heavy Task For Coronation

LONDON (Reuters) — Peer-studded committees handle the glittering ceremonies that go with the Queen's coronation, but the manual labor falls to the ministry of works.

Besides building miles of grandstands along the coronation route, the ministry has to deal with seating, lighting, communications and plumbing in Westminster Abbey where the Queen will be crowned next June 2.

The great grey abbey is run by the Dean of Westminster, but the works ministry is taking over for the ceremonies under a royal warrant. Months of planning sessions have been held already. Many details will have to be about the same as for the late king's crowning in 1937.

On Dec. 1, the ministry's first teams of carpenters, electricians and masons will start swarming all around the abbey, ladening. They will begin by building tiers of stands in the chancel, looking down on the main altar.

Believed Riot By Unemployed Inspired by Reds

SYDNEY (AP) — The Sydney Daily Mirror says today that Australian security police have evidence Communists inspired the unemployed Italian migrants was in fact organized by Communists.

These officers believe the demonstration yesterday, in which 19 policemen were injured, was part of a Red plot to foment unrest among the men, a dispatch from the paper's Melbourne correspondent declares.

Jobless Italians denied that Reds had egged on the trouble.

The Mirror says security officers know that a well-known Communist addressed the Italians before the demonstration, in which several hundred migrants attempted to storm the Italian consulate demanding work or repatriation.

FORMER MAYOR DIES

HAMILTON (CP)—Freeman F. Treleaven, Q.C., 68, former mayor of this city, died yesterday following a long illness. A native of London, Ont., he served as rental administrator following the Second World War. He served two terms as mayor, in 1938-39. Mrs. Douglas Grayson of Lindsay is a daughter.

Submariners Meet

Crewmen from British and United States submarines get together for a chat in Halifax. Housewives in Yukon Centres Know What High Prices Mean WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Upset about high prices? Try these Yukon ones for size.

A housewife in Dawson City or Mayo pays about 50 per cent more for groceries than her counterpart on the "outside." In Whitehorse, she pays about a third more.

The average family of four in Dawson pays upwards of $150 a month for groceries and in Whitehorse upwards of $100.

Wood, the basic fuel of the territory, costs about $30 a cord in Dawson and about $19 here. If it not hard to burn two cords a month during a Yukon winter. Oil, common in kitchens, cost 36 cents a gallon here and considerably more in Dawson.

Transportation costs are, of course, the chief reason for the high prices. Most of the territory's food is imported from Vancouver or Seattle, with some coming from Edmonton.

Food from Vancouver and Seattle is shipped by plane or boat to Juneau, Alaska, and thence by train to Whitehorse. During the winter, most perishable foods are shipped here direct by air.

Dawson, Mayo and other towns north of here get food by river boat or road in summer and by road alone in winter.

Here are some comparative prices:

Coffee—Whitehorse $1.25 to $1.30 a pound; Dawson $1.40.

Tea—Whitehorse $1.25 to $1.30 a pound; Dawson $1.45.

Milk—Whitehorse 22 cents a can; Dawson 25 cents.

Soups—Whitehorse 20 cents a can; Dawson 25 cents.

Salmon—Whitehorse $1.17 a 1-pound tin; Dawson $1.30.

Sugar—Whitehorse 17 cents a pound; Dawson 18 cents.

Butter—Whitehorse 80 cents a pound; Dawson 85 cents.

Fresh vegetables (Winter or "air" prices):

Lettuce—Whitehorse 40 cents a pound; Dawson 55 cents.

Tomatoes—Whitehorse 45 cents a pound; Dawson 75 cents.

Meat:

Sirloin roast—Whitehorse $1.05 a pound; Dawson $1.40.

Rump roast—Whitehorse 95 cents a pound; Dawson $1.10.

Sirloin steak—Whitehorse $1.05 a pound; Dawson $1.40.

Pork—Whitehorse 70 cents a pound; Dawson 70 cents.

Twin Brothers Take Direct Action When One Hurt

ROCHESTER, Ind. (AP)—Lloyd Beehler, 41, a school teacher, and his twin brother, Lester, took direct action when the teacher's left hand was caught in a corn picker yesterday.

Lester heard his brother's cries for help and cut off the arm two inches above the wrist with a pocket knife.

The teacher, meanwhile, used his free hand to apply a tourniquet with a handkerchief. His condition was reported "fair."

Survey Shows Treats Aplenty For Revellers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Here they come! Ghosts, hobgoblins, cowboys and clowns and maybe a spaceman or two—all out for Hallowe'en treats or tricks.

A pre-Hallowe'en survey by The Canadian Press revealed treats aplenty in store for revellers almost everywhere but police forces alert in case tricks get out of hand and turn to destruction.

As in recent years, Hallowe'en interest is expected to centre more on parties for young and old than on costly pranks that once were the rule.

Vancouver plans a fireworks display and community parties and dances, all under police supervision. In Edmonton, police report every available man will be on duty. Youngsters there favor rubber-type masks that enclose all or most of their heads. Winnipeg is going in for house parties with only a few dances planned.

Toronto plans parties in many of its schools. Police say they are keeping all uniformed constables on call.

Ottawa police will be on the watch on foot as well as prowl cars. They say the kids can have fun but they will crack down on pranksters. Montreal will use firemen to patrol boats of trouble centres as in the past.

Saskatoon police report a "very quiet" night, and there was not believed to be in serious trouble. She is expected in Halifax Nov. 4 for bunkers.

Norwegian Ship Still Missing And Four Boats in Danger On Stormy Atlantic Ocean

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Freighters, trawlers and small coastal ships were being battered in the North Atlantic through the night, fighting off the tail-end of a storm with winds up to 60 miles an hour.

Still reported missing is the 2,500-ton Norwegian freighter Dux, not heard from since Sunday when she was 400 miles east of Belle Isle, Nfld.

The American trawler St. Nicolas, carrying 19 men she rescued from the Boston-based trawler Newton, is still fighting large waves about 300 miles east of Cape Race, Nfld. Several other trawlers are with her.

The 7,151-ton Alendi Hill, a British freighter en route to Hampton Roads, Va., is farther at sea and last night reported she was "steadily holding her own." She will call at Halifax to take on fuel.

Rescuers Says Calm

In the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the rodderless Canadian Pacific ship Miramichi is riding out the storm with two Halifax tugs. The ship reported she was in no danger last night and when winds moderate, the tugs Foundation Vera and Foundation Josephine II will continue towing her to Halifax.

No injuries have been reported.

The trawler Newton took the vessel in tow Monday. The 16-man crew attempted to abandon the ship when pumps couldn't keep up with the leaks. Lifeboats were smashed against the side of the ship when they lowered them, and the crew had to remain on board until the Newton manoeuvered over to the side of the listing ship and rescued the men without injuries. The Newton was left abandoned on the wild seas.

The Dux was scheduled to arrive in Montreal from Rotterdam yesterday or today. Search and rescue officials in Halifax say it is possible the ship's wireless was not working and have warned other ships in the area to keep a sharp lookout.

The Alendi Hill reported seas were "very bad" last night, but was not believed to be in serious trouble. She is expected in Halifax Nov. 4 for bunkers.

MUTUAL LIFE OF CANADA OPENS NEW OFFICES AT BELLEVILLE

When the late Stephen Burrows became the first agent for The Mutual Life of Canada in Belleville in 1873, seventy-seven years ago, the death claims paid by the Company amounted to $3500. Last year they were almost $10,000,000. Life insurance in force in the Company was $1,177,000. Today it exceeds one billion dollars. Those interesting indications of the Company's growth were revealed in connection with the opening of the new Belleville offices at 13 Bridge Street East this week.

Mr. Burrows joined the Company four years after it was formed. He was very successful as a life underwriter and became one of the company's leading General Agents. The name of Burrows became synonymous with The Mutual Life in this community. Mr. Burrows represented the Company until his death in 1932.

Mr. Stephen Burrows' son, Mr. S. R. Burrows, C.L.U., joined the Company as a General Agent in May 1911. He was made Branch Manager when the Company established a branch office in this city in 1935. The branch enjoyed great growth under his management. When Mr. Burrows retired from active management in April 1948, Mr. W. Ross Hall, C.L.U., was appointed Branch Manager. He has been associated with The Mutual Life since 1927.

In announcing the opening of the new Belleville offices Head Office officials paid a tribute to the local management and representation in this community where the Company's business has enjoyed consistent growth during the past 77 years. The new offices will enable the company to continue to serve efficiently the growing number of policyholders in Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

Mrs. C. Embree, Halifax, Elected As President

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal women are looking for a bigger part in politics and government.

That was the main theme of reports presented yesterday at the biennial meeting of the National Federation of Liberal Women, ending a two-day session here after the annual meeting of the National Liberal Federation.

Quebec's Liberal women were particularly strong in asking a bigger role for their sex in political affairs. The convention itself also took note of the feminine angle by calling for the use of well-known Canadian women on stamps.

The convention also asked the government to step up its activities against Communists in Canada.

Mrs. C. J. Embree of Halifax was elected president, succeeding Mrs. W. T. O'Regan of Ottawa. Other officers include Mrs. Tancrede Jodoin of Montreal, as French vice-president and Mrs. A. L. Caldwell of Saskatoon as English vice-president.

COULD CHARGE BELL

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Independent Telephone Association wants to charge the Bell Telephone Company for bills collected on its behalf. The annual convention yesterday reaffirmed the decision of the board of governors to ask the board of transport for permission to make the charge. Earle H. Moore of Orton was elected president. Other officers are: Spencer McConnell, Port Burwell, vice-president; Karl Austin, Wooler, James W. Thompson, Puckingham, Que., Ross McDell, Drayton, and D. McKelvie, New Liskeard, directors.

Egypt Agreeable To Self-Govt. For Sudanese

CAIRO (Reuters)—Egypt today officially revealed that she is agreeable to self-government for the Sudan by the end of this year as a first step towards the Sudanese deciding their own future within three years.

The plan is embodied in an agreement with Sudanese leaders signed last night and published today.

The move brings Egypt into virtual accord with Britain on the Sudan, a problem which not long ago loomed as a major rift between the two countries.

A year ago the then-King Farouk scrapped the treaty by which the States had been ruled jointly by Egypt and Britain for more than 50 years and proclaimed himself King of the rich territory sprawling across Egypt's southern frontier. The situation stand was modified after Gen. Mohammed Naguib ousted Farouk. The new regime has maintained close contact with Britain in working out a solution for the Sudan.

A British embassy spokesman here said today the new Egyptian-Sudanese agreement will doubtless be discussed when the British ambassador, Sir Ralph Stevenson, meets Naguib in the next few days. This was the only official British comment here on the agreement.

Views Differ

Though the Egyptian plan closely follows the British plan, there are still several differences between them.

As a principle to self-determination by the Sudanese the agreement calls for evacuation of both British and Egyptian forces from the 1,000,000-square mile territory and complete "Sudanization" of the administration—the assumption by Sudanese of all posts now held by Britons.

It also lays down that the choice of the Sudanese when it comes to determining their future status shall lie between union with Egypt and complete independence.

Some Sudanese have wanted a third choice—admission to the British Commonwealth.

He's Repetitious

Governor Dewey Pleased at Green Light on Project

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Governor Thomas E. Dewey said the New York State Power Authority looked favorably to the Federal Power Commission today for its permission to join Ontario in construction of the St. Lawrence River power project.

Dewey's office said the governor was pleased at the green light given yesterday in Montreal by the International Joint Commission to the project, now estimated to cost $430,000,000.

John E. Burton, chairman of the State Power Authority, said in Ithaca that he is "hopeful that the F.P.C. will now . . . designate the authority as the agency" to join Canada in the 2,200,000-horsepower development on the international rapids section of the river.

Canada has named the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission as its agent in the project, which engineers estimate will yield more than 13,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy a year.

$1,638 in Damages

KITCHENER (CP)—Jack L. Polsin of Kitchener today was assessed $1,682 in damages and costs as a result of a collision here June 21 between a car driven by Polsin and a motorcycle ridden by Constable Alfred Herchenrader.

Polsin was found negligent in making an improper left turn.

Awarded to Herchenrader, injured in the crash, were special damages of $280.40 and general damages of $500. Awarded to the police commission were $621.79 for 71 weeks salary while Herchenrader was off work and $154.72 for motorcycle damages.

He's Emphatic

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson presents to the U.N. political committee the terms offered to the Communists to end the Korean war. If Elected Ike To Go to Korea Within 10 Days

BOSTON (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower plans to go to Korea 10 days after the presidential election if he is the winner, the Christian Science Monitor says.

In a copyrighted article by Roscoe Drummond, chief of its Washington bureau, the Monitor says Eisenhower planned to say so in his Detroit speech—last week, but deleted the data because as president-elect he would have to be assured of the co-operation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and of officials of the administration.

The Monitor says Eisenhower is prepared to make the trip to try—on the ground that it may help improve the military situation or to further a peaceful settlement.

HOSPITAL OPENED

MEAFORD (CP) — A new 33-bed Meaford General Hospital was opened today by Charles Health Minister Phillips. Cost of the one-storey structure has been estimated at $250,000.

The drive for a new hospital got under way six years ago during Meaford Old Home Week when a Meaford "old boy", Dr. John Godfrey of Seattle, Wash., donated $20,000 toward a new building.

BANCROFT

Home-School Assoc. Plans for Hallowe'en

BANCROFT — The regular monthly meeting of the Bancroft Home and School Association was held at the public school on Friday night. Plans for the children's annual Hallowe'en party were foremost on the agenda.

It was decided that the youngsters, in their costumes, would assemble at the school, parade down Flint Street, then along Hastings Street to the community hall where the party would be held. The parade, sponsored by the association, will have top traffic priority and a police escort. It has proven a great deterrent to pranks and vandalism by the young fry as well as a great source of enjoyment for them.

Changes Name

Mrs. Art Hewitt was quizmaster in a quiz which brought to light such interesting local historical highlights as the town's original name, "York". The name was changed to its present one by the 1st Hon. Flint, the founder of the settlement, to perpetuate his wife's family name.

Further discussion of the proposal to support a school nurse resulted in a decision to request the services of Mrs. J. S. Hatlin in that capacity. A reading on the subject "Bringing up children," by Mrs. Miller was enjoyed by all.

Miss Liddell's classroom was awarded a $1 prize at the class with the most parents in attendance.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

PASSENGERS RESUME FLIGHT

Governor States Orders Disobeyed In Boyd Watch

TORONTO (CP) — T. W. Brand, Don Jail governor suspended after the Boyd gang's break last month, yesterday said he had given his instructions for a guard to be placed at all times outside the cells which housed the four desperadoes.

He said that such a guard would be about two feet from the door of the cells. Had his instructions been followed, he added, Edwin Alonzo Boyd, Steve Suchan, Leonard and Joseph Jackson would not have escaped.

Brand told a Royal Commission investigating conditions at the east end jail, which the city owns but the province administers, that on the night of the escape Deputy Governor Alexander Noble had enough guards to follow the special precautions.

He said he had been told by officers of the reform institutions that "Mr. Noble was a legacy that was left to them." He did not elaborate.

Brand, 43, who rose from jail guard to governor in six years, said that two night guards patrolling the jail were supposed to relieve two special guards stationed near the Boyd gang, every half hour after completing their inspection.

In this way there would have been a man constantly outside the Boyd cell from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m., the hours of the night shift.

He said that orders about the special guards were given orally. Asked by George Walsh, chief counsel for the crown, how he communicated the instructions to the shift on duty at the time of the escape, Brand replied he had done it "individually and personally."

Denmark Rejects Soviet Protests On NATO Ties

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Denmark has rejected Soviet protests against negotiations with the United States yesterday said he had given his instructions for a guard to be placed at all times outside the cells which Organization bases on Danish soil.

Foreign Minister Ole Bjoern announced today that he received the Soviet charge d'affaires last night and replied to a Soviet note that charged such negotiations constituted a threat to the security of the Soviet Union.

Negotiations for stationing about 150 U.S. jet fighters at Danish bases in the Scandinavian Peninsula have been going on for some time. They would provide additional support for Denmark's own air forces.

The reply to Russia said Denmark's defence and foreign policies are based on the conviction that the Atlantic Pact "is serving only defence purposes and is not turned aggressively against any country, including the Soviet Union."

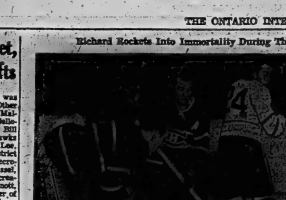
Tangible recognition as all-Ont. Belleville Hockey Association, was chairman at the banquet. Other sports representatives were also on hand, Felch, president of the Belleville Baseball Association, Bill Cook, manager of the Black Hawks junior "B" hockey team; Don Lee, president of the Belleville Minor Softball Association and its secretary, Cy Barriage; Bill Vanfassel, chairman of the Belleville Recreation Commission, and Harry Knott, convener and executive member of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

City Represented

Civic representatives were Mayor Haig, Alderman Harry Rollins, chairman Tourist and Publicity Committee, Alderman Claude Tice, of the Areas Commission and Councillor Harold Bateman. Other guests included Police Chief Walter Probert, Fire Chief Gerald Carver, Jack Devins and Jerry O'Connor.



Alderman McNevin in presenting the team with the windbreakers said, "I am proud of my boys. They have brought honor to the city and district. They have been a credit to all who assisted; especially employers who allowed the players off their jobs to play. I thank them and given due appreciation.

Mayor Haig in a brief talk paid tribute to the champions but to Alderman McNevin he said, "He is not only invaluable in sports circles but also to the council as well," he said. "If we had more like him we would be doing in business, sports and as a representative to the city council. Great Credit To City

"The team has brought great credit to the city and actual appreciation in public relations. On behalf of the citizens I extend to you all my heartiest congratulations and wish you all success for future efforts," he added.

Mayor Haig's remarks extended an invitation to the team and management to the city's guests on November 12th when the Santa Claus parade will be held.

Alderman Harry (Senator Claghorne) Rollins added his congratulations in a humorous address as did Malcolm Rose, Jack Vanderlip, Harry Knott, Bill Vanfassel, Bill Cook and Don Lee.

Richard Rockets Into Immortality During Thriller Won by Leafs

'Indian Jack', and 'Claude the Cobra' Will Guide Bombers, Eskies in West

EDMONTON (CP)—The eyes of Western Canada will be on a couple of Indians this weekend as interest in the first game of the, best-of-three Western football union final.

Two Indians, Jack Jacobs and Claude (The Cobra) Arnold will be at the respective tructies of Winnipeg Bombers and Edmonton Eskimos as the first course of the world's most gridiron special is served up in Edmonton's Clarke Stadium.

Strictly speaking it will be Jacobs and Arnold "plus"—because both are the "one" of a one-two passing punch.

Every western football city knows by heart the Bomber one-two, Jacobs to halfback Tom Casey, after watching them light the Bomber fuse for three years.

Pass Records

Jacobs, the peerless passer from the Oklahoma Creek Indian tribe —holds just about every Canadian football passing record. Eskimos hope to stop him and Casey, a negro ace from New York Yankees, from setting any more.

The Kalispell "rock" is a Johnny-come-lately. Big end Rollie Prather player part of the season at Idaho State injuries hit the Kaz. Later his huge stepmother-to, 6ft.2inch Rollie was used for blocking and not many passes went his way.

Arnold, after leading Oklahoma Sooners in 1950 during the latter part of a 34-game winning streak, sat out 1951. It took a while before he "found" himself here. Then the Eskimo coach Frank Filchock quarterbacked part of nearly every game during that season.

Western All-Star Claude Arnold had their night when Edmonton blew Calgary Stampeders down in the nine-inning second game of the two-game semi-final. Arnold tossed 73 complete passes out of 33 tries for 301 yards. "Panther" Prather caught 15 of 21 tossed his way. He snagged them one-handed, over his head, and while surrounded by tacklers, for an amazing 370 yards.

Both Have Worries

Both Jake and Claude will have worries on their minds tomorrow. Jacobs' daughter recently contracted polio in Wisconsin, but is reported recovering. Mrs. Arnold presented him with a new son the night after the 307 series-winning triumph over Calgary.

The odds are 5-4 on the Bombers. But the team split scheduled games, Bombers winning 21-18 and with one game a 14-14 saw-off.

Bomber coach George Trafton couldn't be reached for comment last night. Filchock, when asked if he had a game plan against the first game, said: "Nope, I just hope we win."

The second game will be played in Winnipeg, Saturday, Nov. 8, and the third, if necessary, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Golfers Win First Quarter In Major 'A'

Belleville Golf won the first-quarter championship of the Major 'A' Bowling League in the Bowl-O-Drome last night by virtue of rolling the highest aggregate pinfall during the seven-game session.

The quarter winners with 3377 took seven points from Schwab's (2915) with the Wood's team (3345) defeating Upper Canada News (3023) 5-2. Hardwick Printing (3322) took Moore's Chicelers (3148) by a similar score with CNR (3112) doing likewise to Lawn Bowlers (3086).

Marciano's Manager Not Perturbed About Next Fight With Jersey Joe

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—These are long and wonderful days and nights for Rocky Marciano, the shoemaker's son from Brockton, Mass., who knocked out Jersey Joe Walcott just over a month ago to win the heavyweight championship of the world.

They are fully as long and pleasure-filled for Al Weill, the colorful Broadway character who plotted Rocky's course to riches with one hand, his left, while with the other he held a struggle grip on the fight game as matchmaker for the all-powerful International Boxing Club.

It was a clever piece of business in every respect, and Al is proud and happy to take both the bows and the money piling up at an alarming rate.

Weill Not Worried

Asked if he had any slight misgivings about Rocky's return date with Walcott next spring, either here or at Chicago, Al said positively:

"I'll tell you why," he said. "I don't think Walcott is in the greatest condition of his life. He can't ever be that good again. He beat Rocky a lot of punishment, yet the kid still had enough left to knock him cold in the 13th round. Rocky will get him a lot quicker the next time.

"Another thing, the next one won't be held at Philadelphia. We had too much against us down there. . . ."

When Rocky came to the corner after the 12th I leaned over him and said 'Rock, you're in trouble. You're behind, and you might never get another chance if you don't knock him out now.' Rocky looked up at me and said 'is that true, Al?' And I told him it was. It was only the second time in my life I ever told a fighter that. Well, you saw what happened. Forty-five seconds and he landed as sweet a short right as I ever saw. They know he had a left hook, but they didn't know about his short right."

Ezzard's New Style

How about Ezzard Charles? Had he and Rocky taken on added respect for the former champion since watching him hammer-up Cesar Brion in the Garden last week?

"Well," Al said after some thought, "we might be fighting him some time, and I make a point never to criticize a future opponent. That's not good for business. But I'll say this about Charles' new style—his crowding in and punching all the time—every fighter is born with a style or he isn't born with it, and he can't change to some other style."

Beach 'Injuries' Ready for Clash With Imperials

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Balmy Beach of the Ontario Rugby Football Union will have most of their injured players back in action for Saturday's game with the Sarnia Imperials.

Playing coach Gerry Tuttle, who injured his knee half way through the schedule, ran with the team in practice last night. Centre Paul Beach half from Canton, O., had his broken hand X-rayed this week and it is reported to be in satisfactory. Fast wing will also participate Saturday.

Other Beach players who missed last Sunday's clubbing with Ottawa Red Raiders of the International Big Four, but will play Saturday are: defensive middle Jack O'Bee and flying wing Barney Bird. Half Back Wally Buono who broke his ankle six weeks ago, had the cast removed last week and may see some action in the two-game total-point playoff series between Sarnia and the Beaches.

Sport in Brief

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Rangers at the National Hockey League last night brought up 20-year-old Dean Prentice, a wing, from their farm at Guelph, Ont. Coach Canadien Frank Boucher announced.

Prentice was signed by the big league club.

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Two Ontario players are on the starting line-up of Fredericton Capitals for their opening game tonight against the New Brunswick Senior Hockey League. ST. LOUIS (AP)—Harry (The Cat) Brecheen, veteran lefthanded pitcher, yesterday signed a contract with the St. Louis Cardinals giving him unconditional release by the Baltimore Orioles. Brown officials said Brecheen planned to pitch occasionally for veteran southpaw was seven and lost five for the Cards last season.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—The bantamweight title bout between world champion Vic Toweel of South Africa and Jimmy Carruthers of Australia yesterday was postponed again—this time from Nov. 8 until Nov. 15. Carruthers is in the hospital with a toe infection believed caused by an insect bite.

LONDON (AP) — British fight promoter Jack Solomons said yesterday he is "satisfied" Sugar Ray Robinson will defend Britain's Randy Turpin for the world middleweight title. However, Solomons declines to retire, Solomons will be boxing authorities to recognize the winner of a fight between Robinson-Turpin bout as champion.

BOSTON (AP)—Gene Conley, right-handed pitcher, yesterday became the second Boston Brave to sign a 1953 National League contract. Conley, who trained with the tribe last spring, compiled an 11-4 record after being sent to the Milwaukee American Association farm club.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Cleveland Indians have bought the last outstanding share of the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association Baseball Association and now have 100-per-cent ownership, Frank E. McKinney, Indianapolis banker and former president of the Indianapolis Club, said yesterday he and Owner Bill Veeck, former president, have sold to Cleveland the 25-per-cent interest they retained in the original sale a year ago.

College Gridders Win Over OSD

Albert College's big gold and black team defeated the O.S.D. gridders 32-0 in a game that was more closely contested than the score indicates.

The plucky youngsters from the Ontario School for the Deaf put up a spirited battle against their heavier, more experienced opponents and they never stopped trying until the final whistle blew.

At that they crossed the college line for a deserved touchdown with Doug Hunter in the scoring role.

Hunter, Tom McAllister and Bruce Vaughan combined in an aerial passing display that netted two major scores with Vaughan tossing the T.D. strikes to his mates.

The O.S.D. squad, with only fifteen players, showed plenty of spirit for gameness and sportsmanship. Up against a superior squad they battled gamely in a lost cause but their play never slackened in its effort to, which they gave all they had.

Drew Critical Of Government On Exports

WINNIPEG (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said yesterday the Ottawa government of raw materials to the United States is "akin to export of manpower."

Mr. Drew, on a tour of Manitoba, addressed the Winnipeg Kinsmen Club at a luncheon.

He stressed he was not "knowling trade" with the U.S. and was fully aware of the important defence program in the country. He added:

"If our first interest is Canada, then the first requirement of Canadian statesmanship is the exploitation of our natural resources to create markets of employment in our country."

Movie Columnn

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Melinda Markey, ninth-generation member of the acting Bennett clan, got her first break in the movies this week.

Melinda is the pretty, brown-haired daughter of Joan Bennett and granddaughter of the stormy Richard Bennett, the 19-year-old heiress to an acting tradition that goes back a couple of centuries.

She was excited about her role in "Weary Sky God's Thunder," which she plays one of a group of girls returning from Europe on the Titanic.

"It's really not much of a part, but at least I laid hands on the picture," she explained. "It's a good role to break into the movies with. I've only been in films once before; that was a very brief part in a picture produced by my stepfather (Walter Wanger)."

Melinda made her debut two years ago when she played in summer stock with her mother in "Susan and God." Since then she has served a vigorous apprenticeship in the theatre and television.

"I did about 30 TV shows in New York," she commented. "It was good experience, but live TV is a taxing deal."

She is aiming her career at summer stock and the movies.

"My ambition is to land a contract at 20th Century-Fox," she said. "My mother started here when she was quite young and has been coming back through the years."

Capsule Review

"Androcles and the Lion" is more Hollywood than George Bernard Shaw, but manages to be a pretty enjoyable spoof of "Quo Vadis." It is one of Shaw's lightest efforts and there is little that is profound or thought-provoking. That is one of the film's chief charms. Alan Young is well cast as the gentle sailor, and Jean Simmons and Victor Mature provide believable love interest. Top honors go to Robert Newton as the Christian tyrant, Alice in 4 1/4 o'clock overcomes his better nature.

AWARDED DAMAGES

KITCHENER (CP)—John Trabesik of Hair was awarded $200 damages in county court yesterday in an action arising from an accident a year ago. The plaintiff told the court his truck received $264 damages when he was involved in an accident with David Murdock of Priceville and he had to pay $35 rent for another vehicle to carry on his business.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some are so expert they can take short cuts without noticeably affecting their final results. Not so with most of us bridge players. We are well off only by adhering strictly to the rule rules. Here you have a deal:

NORTH
♠K Q J 9 7 6
♥Q
♦9 8 10 8
♣8 7

WEST
♠10 7 3 2
♥8 3
♦5 3
♣K Q 10 9 8 5

EAST
♠A 5 4
♥K 5 4
♦K J 9 7 6 2
♣7

♠8
♥J 10 9 8 7 6
♦Q 4
♣A 3 2

South dealt and passed. So did west pass. North might plunge overboard with an opening bid of four spades and come up with a fish in his mouth. And he would not even sit surprised.

If most of us did this we would drown like a rat. Or get caught in a net full of trouble. Or shut partner out of helping us make a slam. Or find that we had a safer game in something else:

Four spades is not the correct opening bid with the north hand. An opening of game in a suit is never correct when you have an honest bid of one or two. In fact, it denies having a bid of one or two.

With a partner that has passed, north may reason they have no slam. So, why monkey around? With a lucky break, four spades may be made. If not, it may shut out the opponent pair.

All of which sounds like good figuring. But as long as a player has an opening bid of one he should avoid an opening of four. Easier to get information. Better for partnership confidence.

The time to open with a bid of four in a major is when there is no hope of making a game; and no hope of defence against a game that opponents might bid. Not when you have a true opening of one.

North has at least four highs with two aces among five. Today and a biddable suit. All of which is promised by an opening of one spade. An opening of four denies something among them.

This may be the where an opening of four or an opening of one will reach the same result. But why start out assuming so? If you came here to gamble, take your business elsewhere.

PARKES CONVICTED

SIMCOE (CP) — Frederick Parker, 25, of Welland was convicted yesterday on a charge of criminal negligence and remanded in custody one week for sentence. The charge arose out of an accident in which Mrs. Nellie Bell of Simcoe was killed. Mrs. Bell was a passenger in a car which struck the rear of a parked truck in charge of Parker.

POLIO VICTIM DIES

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Norman Hanna, 36-year-old Atwood father of three, died last night of polio in the isolation ward at Victoria Hospital. Mr. Hanna was one of six cases admitted to the hospital in the last two weeks, each of which has been definitely diagnosed as polio.

Harry Meldrum Moore

"Now, he said with a little bee-twitle in his hand, "better get yourself, this is going to bite you bad."

Paul braced himself as the iodine poured in and around the wound. For the first few seconds he didn't feel a thing and then his face twisted, his hands were held in a sweaty grip, his eyes were set with tears. But only for a few short moments, for he was smiling again.

"Darkness, worse than the disease," Colly grinned. "Better have a couple of aspirins. It will ease that pain your head. Boy, can you ever take it!" he said proudly.

Paul took the aspirins, washed them down with a glass of water and shook himself.

"O.K. Doc," he said, getting up on his feet unsteadily.

"Know who shot you?"
Colly, "I couldn't get him to stop long enough to talk—a most unsociable guy, I'd say."

"A good time for him to show up," Colly observed, "I'll get my rifle and go and tie down his wife."

"But, why should I do that did?" Paul asked, "Have you a very good reason for using—"

"You mean—you're going back there again—and now?"

"And why not, you want me to guard the sanctuary for you don't you? Where's the shirt?" Colly went to get it and came back.

"Look, my kid Paul, you don't have to go until you're over this one."

"That's not the way I heard it, Doc," Paul said, slipping on the shirt, "Now, how about an old pair of pants?"

slapped him on the back and said:

"Well, Yank, you're made of pretty damn good stuff—a true son of Uncle Samuel P. United States
I said it! I'm ever in Washington and who knows, I'll tell our good friend Harry about you. Well, so long."

Paul Gates' three months' trial term as guard of Colly McKee's sanctuary ended while Sandy was on his holidays. During that three months' period, he had drawn $75 a month, totalling $225 and clothing extra. Now Colly was to successfully induce him to remain on duty another six months or until spring, at a substantial increase in pay. After that date, a new agreement could be made if both parties involved were agreed, and Colly could not think of any reason why they should not be agreed.

As far as Paul was concerned, he had no desire to go any further, unless he went home and he had no desire to do that, and besides he had strong ties to bind him to the sanctuary at this time. The ties, of course, were Sonny and her three pups, and—and possibly the lovely daughter, but of this he wasn't at all certain as he and Sandy had never exchanged confidences, possibly because Paul was too shy.

Anyway, Paul was planning well ahead, dreaming of happy days to come. For one thing there would be his first experience in hitching to a sled.

A sled that had not yet been made, there was the additional experience of training three pups as soon as they grew big enough, and they should be big enough before the winter snows melted on Lac Petit.

Paul's head wound healed rapidly, but whether it did or no, it didn't prevent him from taking his daily round of the sanctuary. There was no further disturbing incident. One afternoon, however, a hunter called him to the sanctuary fence to tell him that a deer he had seriously wounded had managed to get through the fence into sacred ground. He showed Paul the blood trail. Paul courteously helped him to track down the animal, saw that it was despatched, lent a hand in getting it out of the sanctuary and hanging it. The hunter, from Ohio, offered to pay him for his trouble.
Paul laughed and said there was no trouble. In the course of their conversation, Paul mentioned that he was a native of New York State.

"Another dam Yankee!" the Ohioan laughed, "Where the hell won't we meet them next? Incidentally, I've been told that you might be pretty hard on the boys from south of the border if you catch them trespassing."

"South of the border, north of the border," Paul explained soberly, "They all look alike to me.
My orders are simple, direct and to hold my job, I must see that they're carried out without fear, without favor."

That Saturday night when Sandy and the Menzies were to return from their holidays, Paul left Menzie's store in the village. He bought a package of safety razor blades and a pair of heavy suspenders and he was wearing a tailor made of sweater and shirts, when Gabe Mernier came from behind the counter to greet him.

"Thinking of getting yourself a shirt, eh, to meet them next?"
Yank?" Gabe asked, with an eye on Paul's sweater.

"I should have something red"
Paul said "but whether a shirt or a sweater—well, that's the rub."

"For just sitting around, give me a good sweaty every time" Gabe opined, "but for hunting when you're on the move and you don't want to get too warm, there's nothing like a heavy shirt.
By the way, how's everything going at the sanctuary these days—having any trouble with trespassers—poachers?"

"No trouble at all," Paul confessed, "not a new fence stays em. But I did have quite an experience the other day—" he took off his hat and pointed to the ridge through his hair.

"Gee!" Gabe said, "looks like a bullet wound. Someone shoot you?"

"Yep," Paul agreed, "Possibly thought I was a deer. I guess I should have been wandering in khaki colored clothes and a red hat."

"Even so," Gabe said, "that doesn't give anyone any license to take a pot shot at you. But," he shrugged his shoulders, "I suppose that's what we must expect every fall in the hunting season. Damn fools running around with loaded guns and itchy trigger fingers. It's a wonder more men are not shot. The man who shot you—did you see him?"

"Yes," Paul agswered, "but only at a distance, and he was running over the mountain towards the river below the mill.
Maybe, I should have followed him, but at the moment I was too concerned about myself—the shock and the bleeding, y'know.
But I did notice one thing about his clothes that might give him away. He had a dark patch on the lower part of his right sleeve of his red sweater."

He picked up a red shirt, passed it over to Mernier to wrap.

"You may run into him yet," Gabe offered, "If I chance to see such a patch on a sweater, I'll tip you off." He stopped, "that shirt is marked seven fifty, but seeing that it's you, Yank, I'll let you have it at even money, OK!"

Paul handed him the money, he went to the cash register and rang it up.

"Sandy and the Menzies coming home tonight!"

"Yep—that's what brought me over," Paul said picking up his parcel, and moving to the door.
And then—

The door opened and a heavy set young man, wearing a red sweater brushed past him and stopped in front of Gabe's counter. Paul looked at him. On the man's right sleeve between elbow and wrist was a dark patch of cloth.

As Mernier handed him a package of tobacco, all the conversation so far having been in French, Paul turned to the man to ask:

"Get your deer the other day?"
The man was in his thirties with a dark stubble on his round cheeks and square chin. Mernier had addressed him as Nap, previously.

"Comment?" he asked, "you say something?"

"Sure did," Paul said soberly,
"I think I've seen you before."

Mernier and Nap linked quickly in French, Mernier pointing to his head, then to his sleeve.
Nap looked at Paul and laughed.
Mernier spoke.

"I think you made a mistake,
Yank," he said, "Nap doesn't hunt. He couldn't have been on the mountain that day for he was in here about that time."

"I'm sorry," Paul said, "I could be mistaken. Tell him that I mistook him for the man who shot me."

Nap listened, then he laughed again and stuck out his hand.

"Oh, dat O.K." he said.

Paul took Nap Larue's hand, and thereby, although he didn't know it, he made a new friend, a friend who was to stick to him to the very end. In fact, when Paul left Vermier's, Nap tagged along to stop and talk. And Paul was rewarded in the colorful way in which Nap Larue handled the English language. When Menzie's car came at last, Nap turned to help Paul with Sandy's luggage and parcels to the boat, to remain to push it off shore and set it drifting.
